APOLOGY.
In an article entitled "The Social Evil in Brisbane," published in our Weekly Newspaper, the Queensland Leader, of the 10th October last, it was stated that Mr. Grice, the Wickham-street Coachbuilder, was the owner of a House in Chester-street, Fortitude Valley, then let to a brothelkeeper, and in a letter signed "Justitia," which appeared in the same edition, the motives of those persons who let their houses to prostitutes were spoken of in terms of abhorrence.
We have now become aware that the gentleman mentioned is not the owner of the house in question, and that he is, moreover, a man of high reputation, both in his business relations and his private life. We, therefore, desire to express the deepest regret for our serious mistake in accepting information from an unworthy source, and in thus connecting the name of an esteemed citizen with the trade of profligacy, the repulsive aspects of which we have been endeavouring to bring to light.
KEITH and CRAMB,
Proprietors of the Queensland Leader.

TO THE PUBLIC OF SYDNEY AND SUBURBS.
Reform in the Manufacture of LEMONADE.
The LEMONADE, prepared from Australian-grown lemons by Messrs. DALM and OERTEL, Mineral Water and Cordial Manufacturers, 403, Pitt-street, Sydney, has proved a decided success. We are in receipt of letters from leading Sydney physicians, members of leading Clubs, families, &c., who admit in laudable terms the superiority of our LEMONADE, and pronounce it to excel by far every article of that kind they hitherto tasted. It has an exquisite flavour. It is free from substances injurious to health. Every drop of water used is carefully filtered. It is well saturated with thoroughly cleaned carbonic acid gas.
REASONS why in Australia, where the finest lemons grow, one rarely tastes good Lemonade :—"Oil of Lemons," commonly used by lemonade makers, is an imported article, extracted from lemon peel. Owing to its high price when pure, it is often adulterated. It is only a poor substitute for the genuine article. Messrs. DALM and OERTEL have entirely discarded it.
Ask or send for DALM and OERTEL'S LEMONADE,
Delivered regularly in town and suburbs by our carts.
All orders punctually attended to.

Public Companies.

PROSPECTUS of the MANLY TRAMWAY COMPANY, Limited.
CAPITAL: £10,000 in 10,000 Shares of 20s each.
1s on application; the balance to be called up as required.
Provisional Directors:
Messrs. W. H. Vivian, C. E. Fuller | Messrs. F. W. Tibbits, M.D., G. Pile
J. G. Griffin, Esq., A.M.I.C.E.
Solicitors: Messrs. Stephen, Laurence, and Jaques.
Bankers: The Mercantile Bank.
This Company is being formed for the purpose of constructing a Tramway, to be worked by horse-power, from the Steamer's Wharf at Manly to the Ocean Beach, and thence to the foot bridge across the Curl Curl Lagoon at Queenscliffe, and such extensions thereof as may be hereafter be determined upon.
The Municipal Council of the Borough of Manly has already approved of such Tramway being constructed.
The line for such Tramway, which has been approved of by the Council, is the one indicated above, and such line has been examined by Mr. Griffin, A.M.I.C.E., who estimates that the cost of the constructing, &c., will not exceed £8000, and that the cost of rolling stock, plant, &c., will not exceed £1500.
It is anticipated that a large and remunerative traffic will spring up immediately on the completion of the work, from excursionists only, and that a considerable traffic will also arise from the inhabitants of Manly itself, whose residences are rapidly extending in the direction of Queenscliffe, along the Ocean Beach and Pitt-water-road. This traffic will become very large when Queenscliffe, Freshwater, and the country beyond becomes built upon.
5000 Shares, equal to half the capital of the company, have already been applied for.
The cost of forming the company (£100), and of obtaining the necessary Acts of Parliament authorising the construction of the work, will be paid out of the subscribed capital. There is no promotion money, nor do the promoters obtain any advantages over the other shareholders.
Application for Shares, according to the prescribed form, to be made to Messrs. MILLS and PILE, who will act as Brokers for the company.

FOR SALE, on an exceptionally splendid site, a substantially built and elegantly finished FAMILY RESIDENCE, containing the undermentioned accommodation:—

On the ground floor, hall, 6½ feet wide, from which the following apartments open:—Drawing-room, 19 feet x 16½ feet; dining-room, 19 feet x 15 feet (exclusive of bay window), communicating with breakfast-room (16 feet x 15 feet), pantry, and storeroom, each 8 feet x 7 feet, both fitted with shelving; kitchen, 16½ feet x 13 feet; laundry, 16½ feet x 11 feet, provided with copper, fire-place for irons (with swinging bracket), 3 wash vats (fixed), and ironing table.

On the first floor, which is approached by a commodious staircase, the spandril of which is enclosed as an additional storeroom, there are a spacious and well-lighted landing (containing a linen press), a convenient bathroom (fitted for plunge and shower, and with a tip-up washbasin), dressing-room, and 5 bedrooms of the following dimensions: 19 feet x 16½ feet, 19 x 15, 16 x 15, 13 x 12½, 16½ x 11.

All the mantelpieces are marble, and the hearths tiled. The cedar used on the ground floor is specially selected timber; and the cornices and centre flowers are handsome. Shutters, electric bells, &c., &c.

In front there are verandah and balcony, each 42 feet x 8 feet. There is a side balcony over the bay in dining-room, and the kitchen and laundry are made snug by a back verandah, 21 feet x 6 feet, enclosed with louvres and sliding glass windows. Fuel bins, posts for clothes-lines, &c.

The water supply is provided for by a large underground brick tank, connected with a force pump, and by two iron tanks on stands with taps therefrom in kitchen and laundry. The waste water from the house is conducted into an underground brick tank, over which a pump is fixed, so that the water may be used for a garden.

The house stands on an allotment of land 136 feet 3 inches by 300 feet, and is built of brick on massive stone foundations. The entire brickwork is cemented externally, richly finished with quoins, panels, and cantilevers. The roof is slate. The building is protected by a lightning conductor. Gas-pipes laid throughout the house, and ventilation carefully provided for.

There is a solidly built brick stable and coachhouse (metal roof), containing two stalls, double coachhouse, man's room, hayloft, &c.

The situation of this property is the choicest and most elevated in Ashfield, having the easterly aspect, being directly opposite the extensive parklike grounds of the Government Estate attached to Hurlstone Training College; and the neighborhood being already occupied by the handsome residences of Messrs. Seaward, Garling, Thompson, Clissold, Chisholm, Miles, and others, there is no possibility of the value of this place being preciated by the erection of any objectionable dwellings in this locality.

The views are singularly beautiful, varied, and extensive, comprising Petersham, Leichhardt, North Shore, South Head Lighthouse, Botany Bay, and other parts.

Also for sale, adjoining the above, on an allotment 137 feet x 300 feet, a dwelling precisely the same as the above, but unprovided with a stable.

CONTINENTAL GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT "STELLA.")

PARIS, Oct. 2.

The city of Paris is covered with electoral programmes of all colours, with lists of candidates, that one's eyes get tired of seeing as one goes through the streets, with placards of all sizes, kinds, and hues, all busy with the great election of next Sunday. Political passions are raging already so violently that fears are felt as to the way in which the affair will end. The police are busy preparing for emergencies: the troops are being got ready for action, in case of need, all over the town, but principally in the working quarters where the greatest amount of angry feeling exists, and where the quarrels of ideas and even of words most easily degenerate into fighting. The numbers of names put forward as candidates exceed everything ever seen in this line since Paris was Paris. The promises put forth by many of these candidates are equally without antecedents. One of them says: "Elect me, and I will give away in charity the pay of 9 francs a day which I shall have the right to draw;" another offers to take only half of the pay given to deputies; a third offers to let his constituents use the railway pass that will be his if elected, "on condition that the demand for the use of the pass is sent to me six days before the day on which the asker wishes to use it."

Lawyers have had it all their own way during the Parliamentary existence just ending. It would seem, from the names on the lists now covering the walls, that the next Parliament will contain a preponderance of journalists. The chief editors of four of the Paris papers, by the way, have just had a very narrow escape of their lives. They had been at a noisy rant at a hall in the unquiet quarter of the town, and took a cab together to regain their places of abode. Going along a busy street leading to the Ourg canal, the horse took fright at something or other, and ran away at a frightful pace, regardless of the efforts of the unhappy cabby to regain command of him. Poor cabby was thrown off from his box and seriously hurt, and the animal, wild with excitement and terror, tore along the street to within a few feet of the canal, into which he would have plunged a few seconds later, when the brave cabby of another vehicle, seeing the imminence of the danger, seized the infuriated brute, and in arrested him, just as he was about to plunge, with the vehicle and the four journalists shut up inside it, into the canal, where they would all have inevitably been drowned.

In some of the departments the candidates urge their claims on the ground that they were members of the Commune; in another, a candidate urges that he is the son of a pamphleteer; in another, a workman who demands to be elected says he receives a pension as a victim of the 2nd of December.

Not Paris only, but the country in general, seems to have become insane. The really respectable, intelligent, educated portion of the community, the men who have interests in the well-being and activities of the nation, keep out of sight, and the "riff-raff" is coming to the front with a profusion that promises little for the constitution of the next Chamber.

Crimes of all kinds under the present regime are frightfully on the increase. Murders are matters of daily, as well as nightly occurrence. People are attacked, robbed, and killed in the streets of this capital and of all the other towns of France; robberies are innumerable; notaries and head clerks are everywhere running away with the money committed to their care, leaving ruin and misery behind them among the clients of their houses; and within the week, a Judge in a town near Carcassare, and a deputy-mayor of Mortagulen in Algeria, have both been assassinated, one while presiding in his court, the other while sitting in a café.

While all this crime and misery is rampant, the attention of the polite world is more than ever concentrated on dress and gaiety. The marriage trousseaux of the three young princesses who are just entering upon matrimony have been discussed, admired, and envied as though this planet were a world of pleasure; and we have now the minute description of the astonishing outfit of the favourite young American diva, Mlle. Nevada, now Mrs. Palmer, the exquisite creations of which almost throw the princesses' finery into the shade. The wedding-dress is of white uncut velvet with a train, nearly three yards long (!), trimmed with white tulle and orange blossoms. Three bands of pendant orange blossoms go up the skirt-front, while the sides of the train are met by panels of orange blossoms, set flat on the velvet. Rays of orange flowers extend over the corsage, and a military collar is formed of tiny orange buds. One of the superb evening dresses of the pretty young favourite is of pale silvery green satin, with a train adorned with daisies, foliage embroidered in chenille, the daisies having centres of yellow crystal beads, with a small tassel of beads in the centre; bouquets of daisies, with water-grasses in green foil, and dragon flies with wings of silver gauze, adorn this dress, which is called "Niid" by the artist who designed it. Another dress is of scarlet velvet, with a skirt front of white satin hung with little bunches of pearl-beads, the side of this breadth being embroidered in pale flowers, with a long spray of gladiolus, the same embroideries of flowers all round the flounce. Another dress, of pale yellow satin, is covered with embroidered sun-flowers and foliage. The fan for this dress is composed of sunflowers, with gold centres and leaves, mounted on a flat, round frame, the long gold stems forming the handle; a tiny mirror is set among the flowers on one side. One dress is of white silk gauze, embroidered in white silk and silver, with pendant white flowers and grasses, and ribands of silver gauze. A visiting dress is of blue velvet, with deep wadded cape bordered with blue jet; bonnet of black velvet, lined and trimmed with pale pink satin and beads; muff in black velvet, lined with pink satin, and a basket of imitation moss on one side, filled with pale pink roses. And so on, every article being an artistic chef d'œuvre, got up regardless of expense. The handkerchiefs, gloves, boots, and slippers, the sachets of pale blue satin, are embroidered with the bride's monogram in pale blue and pink, all the details of the outfit being of the most elegant and artistic description.

If fashions did not change several times every year, if beautiful fabrics and beautiful clothes could be worn through a lifetime, and then be worn by posterity, the laying out of a fortune on a trousseau would be somewhat less preposterously absurd than it is at present. The preparation of all these costly things, to be worn a few times and then cast aside, seems a waste of time, artistic taste and talent, and money, that sensible people would like to see otherwise employed.

Lovers of art, in a higher sphere than that of Parisian millinery establishments, will learn with regret that the admirable Italian engraver, Calamatta, father-in-law of M. Maurice Sand, son of the great Aurora, has just died in Milan. His superb reproductions of the finest chefs d'œuvres of the great Italian masters will now be regarded as worth even higher appreciation than before. A new and interesting gallery is being added to the wealth already gathered at the Louvre. The present director of the great art-centre of this planet is forming a collection of portraits of artists, like the one already existing in Florence, but on a much larger scale. An appeal is about to be made to amateurs who have portraits in their galleries to give up the originals, or, at least, to allow copies to be made of them.

The artistic cleverness of the present day goes off delightedly into the ornamenting of the ways and the things of everyday life. Thus the latest mode of ornamenting the boxes of sugar plums which figure so conspicuously in France at the baptism of babies, substitutes middle-age prettinesses in place of the flowers, or infants in cradles, that have so long been the fashion. Baptism-boxes are now made square, and on the cover are inscribed, in old gothic letters, the names of the godfather and godmother, accompanied with a quantity of ornamentation, imitated from ancient paintings, manuscripts, missals, and so on. In some cases, the boxes are inscribed with the baby's name, or that of the property (especially if ancestral) in which the baptism takes place. Or these boxes may be ornamented with a photographic portrait of the baby, and the signature of the little new-comer, as obtained by guiding the tiny hand, with a pencil held in it, across a sheet of paper, the scrawl being then photographed under the baby's portrait.

Money is spent as freely in the musical region as in the pictorial, as is proved, among other indications, by the enormous prices that are still paid for violins of the great makers. Mme. Neruda has recently paid £400 for a Stradivarius that formerly belonged to Ernst; Wilhelmj paid £600 for one by the same renowned maker, and has just refused £1000 for it. M. Hubay, professor at the Brussels Conservatory, [illegible] £600 for a Pierre Guarnerius, and M. Tajic [illegible] £800 for a Joseph Guarnerius, which was the favourite instrument of Felicien David. The music-mad King of Bavaria is burying himself more and more profoundly in the musical fancies which make up a world apart for him. The King's uncle, Prince Lintfold, needing to see his invisible Majesty on important business, went recently to the music-palace retreat of Halsen schwangan in order to obtain an audience. The King refusing to be seen, the Prince, saying that his business imperatively demanded an audience, opened the door of the room in which the King was closeted with his Wagnerian dreams, and walked in. The Royal dreamer at once jumped up from his chair, rushed out of the room by a door on the opposite side, and locked it behind him. Prince Lintfold, discomfited, had to go back with his important business, to Munich, without getting his audience.

Absurdity is plentiful in this world, at all its social stages. The village of Menussinsk, in Russia, being troubled by a pest amongst its cows, the united wisdom of the villagers determined to have recourse to the old Slavonic custom of "round-ploughing." Seven virgins, two old mothers, and a youth of good character were elected, and a procession of the villagers took place at midnight, the two old women heading it, carrying pictures of saints, and the seven young girls ending the procession, harnessed to a plough which was guided by the young man. A light furrow was ploughed around the village, and the procession then went home with the comfortable conviction that a barrier had thus been set up against the evil spirits who were causing the sickness of the cows, and who have no power of passing over the mystical furrow thus drawn around the village.

The unusual cold from which we are suffering has caused the closing of the Paris Swimming Club, a recent but highly successful society, which has this season held five general meetings, given prizes, and induced many non-swimmers of both sexes to learn the useful art that ought to be universal.

THE DEFENCE OF THE COLONIES.

(From the Melbourne Telegraph, Nov. 13.)

Rear-Admiral George Tryon, C.B., who is in charge of her Majesty's ships on the Australian station, has been in conference with the several colonial Governments since Easter last, when the crisis which arose between England and Russia showed how unprepared Australia was to meet any serious attack from a foreign power. Admiral Tryon was not long in impressing on the Governments the fact that they were decidedly weak so far as defence was concerned, and by a generally expressed wish he prepared an elaborate and detailed scheme, in which was shown the best means for protecting the shores of the continent from any attack by sea. Being the highest naval authority in the southern hemisphere, Admiral Tryon was thoroughly competent to undertake such a task, and accordingly he proceeded to review the whole of the coast. Albany he considered one of the most important points, as, being the outlying coaling station, it would necessarily be the first place an enemy would attempt to capture. Adelaide he considers difficult to attack, while the naval defences of Victoria are such as to make it the most impregnable of the colonies. This Victorian navy, which is under the command of a most able officer, and one thoroughly experienced in all the modern methods of warfare, assisted by powerful and well-armed forts, and a well-arranged system of sub-marine mines at the channels, would effectually check any likely enemy. It is, of course, calculated that any power with which England might engage in conflict is not in possession, or likely to be, of sufficiently large a navy to permit of the risk attendant on the despatch of a large fleet to so distant waters, and accordingly the enemy to fight with would not consist of more than three or four powerfully-armed frigates, capable also of carrying a large body of marines. Sydney, also, is well provided to resist any attack, and likewise Brisbane; but the greatest weakness lies at Cape Yorke and the Torres Straits. Admiral Tryon points out that this station is daily increasing in importance, as it forms the highway for not only a large number of vessels coming from China, but also for the British-India fleet and other ships from more distant countries. The value of the cargoes which come by this way is exceptionally great, and the Straits would naturally be one of the first positions an enemy would endeavour to secure, so as to be in a favourable position for the harassing of British merchantmen. The Torres Straits, although wide, are tortuous, and therefore the more easy of defence, as the channels are so few that a hostile vessel would be unable to pass unobserved anything in waiting for her. The means of approach are accordingly resolved into two—King George's Sound and Torres Straits. To the former a vast amount of sea room is offered, but this counts for little when it is understood that it is the only possible station where an enemy could secure coal. It might, of course, be rendered of no moment by removing the supplies, but, as it is a necessity for steamers both to and from Australia, this is impracticable. All these things having been reviewed, and the importance of maintaining an efficient and well-constituted system of local naval defence, a recommendation is made that a federal fleet of cruisers should be provided. These should be vessels of great steaming power, say from 14 to 16 knots per hour, armed with from four to six, according to size, 6-inch breech-loading guns of the latest type, and a small torpedo launch. Only moderate armour would be requisite, but it would also be necessary that they should be divided off into numerous water-tight compartments. Fleetness, however, is the great feature. Their bunker space, it is pointed out, should be very large, and their consumption moderate, so as to enable them to remain at sea for a very considerable period before returning to renew supplies. Not being aware of the expense the colonies would involve themselves in, Admiral Tryon suggests only these few features. He admits, of course, that with vessels such as the H.M.S. Nelson cruising on the coast the place would indeed be impregnable; but as the cost of such a war ship would be at least £400,000, and the expense of maintenance so very great, he does not see the possibility of any of that class being provided. What is required is a few vessels, such as those mentioned, with which all approaches to Australia could be carefully watched and effectually defended. Admiral Tryon considers it the duty of the various Governments to take the question in hand at once, for, as he points out, that, in the event of war breaking out unexpectedly, some weeks must necessarily elapse before English cruisers could arrive to do the work. British vessels would be sent without delay, he says, but in the meantime the mischief might have been wrought. With such a system as that he advocates, the trade of the Australian ports would not be interfered with to any appreciable extent, for merchant vessels would be enabled to both go and come in safety. But even with these defences, and much more so without, the importance of having a good and well-managed torpedo system is particularly impressed. The entrances to each port should be laid down with submarine mines, and there should also be one or two torpedo boats possessed of recent appliances. The subject has been deeply considered and exhaustively laid out by Admiral Tryon, who is prepared to submit estimates according to the amount of money the colonies might desire to expend. He does not advise elaborate expenditure upon land forces, considering they would only be called upon to act at a most extreme emergency. Men well drilled in the management of guns at forts are required, and as a land force a moderate number of well-drilled volunteers would be sufficient for all purposes.

This scheme, carefully detailed, is now under the consideration of the Australian Governments, and steps have been taken to communicate with the various shipbuilding and armament firms in Great Britain as to the cost of a fleet such as that Admiral Tryon suggests.

LIGHTNING CONDUCTORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In continuation of this subject, please allow me to state that the latest approved system is that of a copper rope with an insulated wire down the centre as a core, and with a "test box" placed in a convenient position, so that the conductor can at any time, and in a few minutes, be thoroughly tested as to its continued efficiency; and as a 50-feet length, inclusive of upper terminal, copper earth-plates, &c., could be delivered here ready for fixing for £8, the system will compare favourably with the lower-priced arrangements.

PETER SELBY.

Forest Lodge, Sydney, November 16.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The communication of Mr. F. T. Watkins, in your issue of the 14th instant, is instructive.

If that gentleman correctly represents the views of the experienced electricians from the Telegraph Department, then I venture to affirm that they are at fault. Electricity, like the allied forces—light, heat, and sound—invariably takes the shortest path, i.e., that which offers the least resistance. Now, in the case of St. John's Church a resistance undoubtedly occurred at the screw joint underground referred to. At the same time its resistance must have been small compared with that of the air between that of the main conductor and that of the superior one already alluded to.

The fact is, the earth plate is not competent to perform its part—that is, to readily dissipate a direct charge. It may be due to the plate itself, or its contacts, or to the more likely fact that its "earth" is practically insulated by a substrata of rock sandstone, &c. Other causes may operate; these are the most frequent. The subject is one of great importance. I have no wish to pose as an alarmist, but do not hesitate to say that one half of the so-called "lightning conductors" in the colony are faulty, and will not stand the earth test the only one, occasionally repeated, that will ensure the safety of a building; and, further, that a "system" improperly applied is worse than useless, and sooner or later will land its unfortunate owner in difficulties. Shall I be guilty of an indiscretion if I ask, Who erects our lightning conductors? It would be well for those who have them erected to ask themselves this question, remembering that in this case at least, "a (very) little knowledge" may become a very dangerous thing. I would suggest that those interested read the latter end of chapter 2, "Sprague's Electricity," second edition. There the matter is ably treated, and in a not too technical strain.

The formula for ascertaining an earth resistance is also given in Hospitalier's work, but requires a "bridge."

THE ELECTORAL SITUATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

BY AN ONLOOKER.

LONDON, October 2.

It would, perhaps, be more prudent, in regard to the present electoral situation in England, if one were to follow the injunction of the sapient Hosea Bigelow, and not prophesy without knowing, seeing that when this letter reaches Sydney the telegraph may be either verifying or vitiating its contents; for by that time we shall be close on the general election itself, and all questions as to electoral cries may have been settled. But the situation is so novel that it is worth while for English-speaking people all over the world to look at it, and draw their own conclusions as to the immediate future of the old mother-country.

It will be remembered that in June Lord Salisbury came into office on the defeat of Mr. Gladstone's Government on their financial policy by a union of Tory and Parnellite votes. Lord Randolph Churchill, as it is believed, thereupon inspired a policy of conciliation towards the Irish Home Rulers; with this result, that it is generally understood that the coming contest will not be between the two great parties in the State—Conservatives versus Liberals—but between Conservatives plus Parnellites versus Liberals. The present Government will go to the country basing their claims to electoral support on the asserted superiority of their foreign policy; their asserted power to govern Ireland without a Crimes Act; and on "church defence." The Liberals will go to the country with—well, that is the question which is agitating the Radical mind at this moment, for Radicals must have a rousing "cry" of some sort.

Immediately before the fall of the late Liberal Government it was understood that Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Charles Dilke would go to Ireland at the close of the then present session; and that they would come home with "Ireland for the Irish" [with Imperial limitations] on their electoral banner. But Lord Randolph Churchill outbade the Radicals in their own market. That, therefore, having failed, party leaders of the Liberal type began to look about for some other home question which should have the effect of exciting the zeal, fervour, and enthusiasm of, inter alia, the newly enfranchised two millions. Land, local government, taxation, free education—on all these, and many others, "the changes have been rung," but without the full desired effect. All of them are hailed as questions to be dealt with; but none are sufficiently defined, or come near enough home to the masses of the people, to answer the purpose of exciting the requisite enthusiasm. Union in the Conservative ranks is assured, Ulster Tories notwithstanding; and the Irish vote in England and Scotland will be cast, by orders from Mr. Parnell, for Lord Salisbury, unless disturbances in Ireland should induce him to change that which Mr. John Morley designates as "the soft-soap and hard-cash policy." The Liberals, therefore, if they are to carry on the future Government, must come back to St. Stephen's with a force of at least 400 out of the 670 members. And that is about what they will do if they succeed in creating a furore among the electors.

That has not been done yet. "Wait for Mr. Gladstone's manifesto," said some. The manifesto has appeared, but it commits the ex-Premier positively to only four points—(1) Procedure (that's a question for the House of Commons itself); (2) Land reform; (3) Local Government; (4) Registration (that is a matter of electoral detail). Practically, then, the Land and Local Government (including some scheme of Home Government in Ireland) are the only two "cries" which he has raised. Both good, but the former is too vague, and the latter is too foregone a conclusion, for the imagination of both rural and urban electors alike to be excited. To these Mr. Chamberlain has added three other points, the exclusion of which from the Liberal programme would involve the exclusion of himself from a Liberal Government. These are—1, An adjustment of the balance of taxation as between property and labour, on which Mr. Gladstone would go with him; 2, Free elementary education, which the head of the party leaves an open question; and 3, the conference upon local authorities of compulsory powers in the acquisition of land for sub-letting to labourers in allotments, a proposal which does not commend itself to Lord Hartington. This last question would rouse the rural class to fervour, but not in the same degree the residents of large towns. The imposition of taxation in a larger proportion than at present upon the rich will, of course, be a good secondary "cry" for the masses, but it is not a question of the first magnitude.

All of which goes to show that no rousing ringing "cry" has yet fallen upon the ears of the new electorate. But at this stage come to the relief of the Liberal party the fears of their "friends the enemy." For long the advocates of the Disestablishment and Disendowment of the Churches of England, Wales, and Scotland have known that the bulk of the Liberal candidates are more or less committed to that policy; but it remained for the Record, an evangelical Tory organ, to blazon the fact to the world. That journal has obtained returns which show that 406 of the Liberal candidates are more or less in favour of Disestablishment. Immediately after the publication of that fact came Mr. Gladstone's manifesto; and it was then felt, from the ambiguity with which he dealt with the whole question, and his reticence in regard to Scotland and Wales, that his address marked the entrance of Disestablishment into the region of serious controversy, and that it makes its discussion more certain because the one Liberal statesman who, of all others, might have been thought likely, whether by his history or disposition, to oppose it, has virtually given up the battle. The Times tries to minimise the danger; but The Standard and Morning Post, the two leading Conservative organs, deem Mr. Gladstone's attitude very ominous; and the Record and the Guardian, the respectively Conservative and Liberal Church organs, appeal to Liberal churchmen to make the question a test one at the hustings.

In sporting phraseology, then, the "Church defenders" are "making the running" for the advocates of Disestablishment; and it is likely that Liberals will be obliged in mere self-defence to take up the "cry," which more than any other stirs popular audiences, and that they will pronounce distinctly for Disestablishment in November next. Like some of the Church newspapers, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and leader of the House of Commons, is "forcing their hand," for he holds that Mr. Gladstone has gone over to the Radicals on this question. Speaking at Salisbury on Wednesday last, Sir Michael said that if Mr. Gladstone lived, and he hoped he would, he would adopt Mr. Chamberlain's programme, including Disestablishment, and justify his doing so by a reference to the Midlothian Manifesto. In regard to the Church question, Sir Michael is warranted in his forecast. In his electoral address the Liberal leader places the separation of Church and State among the subjects "with which the coming Parliament and its successors will or may have to deal;" and it is only in reference to England, not Scotland or Wales, that he uses the language of far futurity. And even in regard to the phrase "dim and distant future" it is well remembered that in June, 1865, immediately prior to the general election of that year, in his celebrated letter to Dr. Hannah, Mr. Gladstone said relative to Disestablishment in Ireland: "I hope you will see and approve my reasons for not wishing to carry my own mind further into a question lying at a distance I cannot measure." And yet, in March, 1868, he declared in the House of Commons that the time had come when it was necessary that the Irish Church, "as a State Church, should cease to exist." Mr. Gladstone then is not debarred, judging him by his latest words, and his past action, from declaring at any moment for Disestablishment to its fullest extent.

Now, after this reference to the great Liberal leader, let us see what was done yesterday at Bradford by the National Liberal Association ("the caucus," as it is stigmatised), when the numerous local party leaders met in consultation, and resolved upon the questions requiring immediate attention. The Land, Local Government, and Free Education were, of course, discussed and approved with little difference of opinion, and without much excitement. Then, for the first time in the history of the "caucus," a resolution was moved and adopted unanimously—at least with only one dissentient, namely, the young candidate for Doncaster, who has obeyed the clerical screw, not to breath disestablishment in the next Parliament, if returned,—"That this meeting desires to express its conviction that the disestablishment and disendowment of the English, Welsh, and Scotch Churches are urgently demanded, in order finally to establish the only equitable relation between the State and all forms of religious belief." The air of Bradford was full of disestablishment. The chairman of the conference, with all the weight of responsibility upon him, said that the question had come to the front, and at an overflow public meeting held in the evening at the Mechanics' Institute the only resolution, which was moved by Mr. Plimsoll, "the sailors' friend," and supported by Mr. Broadhurst, the working men's representative in Parliament, Mr. Jesse Collins, the champion of the agricultural labourers, and others, included in its list of required reforms the land, local government, control of the liquor traffic, and—what a tremendous phrase it is—"and the disestablishment and disendowment of the churches of England, Scotland, and Wales."

With the manifesto of Mr. Gladstone before us, and the determination of the backbone of his followers expressed in council yesterday, there can be no longer doubt as to the coming "cry." Even the Times, with its "pooh, pooh" of a few days ago, this morning is awake to the danger, for, in a leader on the Church Congress it distinctly points to the early inevitable, and tells Churchmen that, being without a Parliament of their own, the sooner they turn their thoughts to the creation of one the better. That's good advice; and is in harmony with that of Mr. Borlase, M.P., a good Churchman, and therefore, as he claims, a disestablisher, in this month's Nineteenth Century. He holds that freedom from secular control would free the Church alike from humiliation and corruption; and so, in "common with all other communities of Christians, she would have fair and equal opportunity to make herself, if she could do so, that which her bishops are one and all declaring their wish that she should be—the Church of the English people."

In every constituency disestablishment will now be a burning question. For the first time in history the Archbishop of Canterbury has prepared for his flock prayers in relation to the General Election; and will a little later sound his alarum in the form of a pastoral. The oath question, raised by Mr. Bradlaugh, is never breathed, it being embraced in a larger and happily less personal issue; and all the signs of the times point to a conflict in which all that is best, noblest, and holiest in this nation will make itself felt. In a recent address to bank clerks at the Mansion House, Mr. Spurgeon said that they should seek first the kingdom of God as to sovereignty. "This was the Aaron's rod that should swallow up all others—First a man of God, then a banker, First a Christian, then an Englishman, then a Conservative or Liberal, or whatever you liked." Christian and patriotic will be the issues in November, and in a Christian and patriotic spirit will they be approached by the now great electorate of five millions. It is no [illegible] that in Mr. Chamberlain the country has—what [illegible] he may be—a plain, outspoken, unselfish, Ch[illegible] man, and not a mere party fencer. Mr. John Stuart Blackie, in a sonnet of no mean quality, has expressed what is very generally felt—

"I have now at last a man! I've waited long
With deaf ear turned to Whig and Tory babble,
If God, belike, might send a champion strong
With potent word to lay the dinsome squabble
As Moses clave the sea. With subtle fence
The others cast a glamour on weak eyes;
But this man, with unbribed, unblinking sense,
Shoots to the mark, as Jove's red lightning flies
Direct from Heaven. My doubting days are done;
Truth must prevail, though all the vents of hell
Shall spit their sulphurous fumes to blind the Sun:
All reason teaches, and all stories tell,
God falters not, like men, with Yes and No!
And when his prophets preach, their sure word means a blow."

"This man, with unbribed, unblinking sense," is Joseph Chamberlain.

NON-EPISCOPAL ORDERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I am sorry if I have misrepresented the Rev. M. Archdall in any of my letters. He corrects me in the opening sentences of his letter of October 30; but the wording is so vague, that, though I have read the same some half-dozen times, I fail to follow him. I may have misrepresented him, for I wrote from memory, as I am not fortunate enough to possess a copy of his pamphlet on "Protestantism, Romanism, and Ritualism."

I am glad to see Mr. Archdall agrees with me that the Church of England allows none but those who are episcopally ordained to take part in her services, notwithstanding the fact that during the disturbed state of religion in England, for some years previous to 1662, the Church's law was set aside, and non-episcopally ordained ministers took part in the Church's services, and held benefices in England. No person, I should think, would look to those times to ascertain what was the practice and doctrine of the Church of England, as the Puritans, Nonconformists, and Presbyterians had gained the upper hand—and not those only; but, alas, there were traitors within the Church herself, who endeavoured to root out nearly every sign of episcopal government and Catholic doctrine she had retained. Mr. Archdall writes as follows:—"The preface (to the Ordinal) is dealing with the question, Who shall be regarded as lawful ministers in the Church of England? Not with the question, Who shall be regarded as a lawful minister in the Church of Christ?" On this point he says he agrees with the quotation I gave from the Most Rev. the Bishop of Sydney, who says the Church pronounces no opinion on non-episcopal orders. At any rate, Mr. Archdall is not altogether on the wrong road. I was afraid that he might agree with the vexed question of exchanging pulpits. But Mr. Archdall, in another portion of his letter, says that the preface to the Ordinal "would seem a positive prohibition of the ministration of all non-episcopal ministers in the Church of England." He then adds (with evident satisfaction): "Yet it was not so understood, because the non-episcopal orders of the foreign reformed churches were frankly recognised, and their ministers were allowed to minister in the Church of England." And, notwithstanding the addition to the preface to the Ordinal of 1662, Mr. Archdall says: "Owing to an exemption clause in the Act of Uniformity, foreign non-episcopal orders were still recognised." Then Mr. Archdall concludes by saying: "However stringent the rule of the Church of England may be, in requiring episcopal ordination," &c., &c. To me Mr. Archdall's last letter seems to contain certain contradictory statements.

One word with reference to this clause in the Act of Uniformity which Mr. Archdall states excepts foreign ministers, who have received foreign orders, from certain penalties. Surely, Mr. Archdall does not consider that this clause really permitted them to minister to the members of the Church of England. They may, in these rax times have so ministered, but the penalties they were exempt from were various fines, &c., if they held their own forms of service in England. This privilege was denied to Englishmen. Mr. Archdall asks me for more information with regard to Mr. Blunt's assertion that the act of uniformity is also a positive prohibition of non-episcopal orders. The prohibition exists inasmuch as it confirms the preface to the Ordinal (14 Car., 11, ch. iv., 10, 26).

With Mr. Archdall, I am perfectly willing to leave it with your readers to decide what is the opinion of the Church of England with regard to non-episcopal orders. With both of us, I feel sure they will agree (to use Mr. Archdall's own words) that the rule of the Church of England is very stringent in requiring episcopal ordination in those who minister to her own members. It matters little to me (so long as the above principle is assented to) what value she may place on the non-episcopal orders outside her borders. The value cannot be very great if she will not recognise them within her borders.

I feel sure Mr. Archdall will be as much grieved as I am to read the letter of the Rev. Dr. Zachary Barry which appeared in your issue of Saturday. It will pain all Churchmen to read it, I am sure; especially as it is the opinion of a priest of the Church. Dr. Z. Barry evidently would like to see the connecting link with the mother church in England broken, or I suppose he would say this connection has already ceased to exist.

November 16. A LAYMAN.

A NEW BREECH-LOADER.—A trial has been concluded at Woolwich of a new breech-loading steel-rifled Elswick gun. The weapon was a six-inch 100-pounder gun, weighing five tons. The breech-closing mechanism is different to the Woolwich gun, having a double interrupted screw instead of a single one, the object sought being greater strength, and the prevention to liability to jamming. On the gun being fired a second time the vent piece, which carries the primer or tube and firing apparatus, blew out, and was projected a distance of 200 yards. It was recovered uninjured, and seven more rounds were fired from the gun. Such an accident, the artillerists say, could not have occurred with the Woolwich gun. With the latter weapon the most that could have happened would have been that the vent axial would have been cracked or jammed, a contingency which has occurred to a 43-ton Woolwich gun. This happened when firing it with only 265lb. of black powder, which is stated to be much more violent in action than its ordinary charge of 295lb. of brown or cocoa powder. The damage to the Woolwich gun was at once repaired, and the experiments with it were resumed at the Government butts the next day. With regard to the Elswick Ordnance Company's gun, the breech mechanism is more complicated than that of the Woolwich gun, inasmuch as it has the vent piece going through the breech screw, which has to be taken out each time it is fired for the tube to be refixed. Whether the new arrangement will prove stronger than the vent axial of the Woolwich gun, further experiments will have to decide.

EPPS' COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. THE REVOLUTION IN ROUMELIA.

(From the Spectator.)

The revolution in Roumelia is not in itself and by itself an important one. The clause in the Treaty of Berlin which divided Bulgaria in two was considered by Lord Beaconsfield important because it enabled him to say that he had saved a province to the Sultan; but it gave the Sultan nothing of any value. The chiefs of the Turkish Army, seeing, as General Gordon pointed out at the time, that any garrison posted in the Balkans would be surrounded by hostile Bulgarians to the north and insurgent Bulgarians to the south, and could at any moment be starved out, never sent a garrison there, and East Roumelia, though nominally Turkish, became practically free. As, however, the Bulgarians justly regard the suzerainty of Turkey much as Scotchmen would regard the suzerainty of Morocco, and are ardently desirous to commence political life as citizens of an undivided State, it was certain that the disjoined provinces would come together, and there was no reason for any longer delay. There was no particular necessity for preparations, though some were probably made, for the popular mind was quite ripe, and in the face of an unanimous decision, there was no chance of resistance. Even the worthy Serb who had suffered himself to be lowered by the title of Gavril Pasha, and who was supposed to rule the Province, only talked of a protest in writing, and was placed under a mild arrest without a shot being fired. There was no bloodshed, for every one welcomed the change, which makes Bulgaria a stronger, richer and more independent State; and Prince Alexander, when he arrived at Philippopolis, found that he had nothing to do except proclaim himself Prince of Southern as well as Northern Bulgaria, and await a European decision. There was, of course, a possibility that the Sultan might resist; but it was only a possibility. The Sultan really lost nothing by the revolution, for he could not appoint a Mussulman Governor of East Roumelia; he could not, whomever he appointed, plunder the Province; and he could not make the people support any portion of his army. There was nothing to fight for, while fighting was extremely dangerous. If the Turks conquered the country they would have to give it up again; while in conquering they would probably rouse popular passion not only in Russia, which Turkey is accustomed to face, but in the Hapsburg Monarchy, which Turkey, with reason, greatly dreads. The Hapsburg Emperor, with two-thirds of his Army Slav, cannot allow Philippopolis to be treated as Batuk was; and an invasion of East Roumelia might cost the Sultan all his European possessions. The nervous and half-taught but keen-witted despot who reigns for a time at Constantinople forbade, therefore, any immediate action; and if the affair is limited to Bulgaria, we do not doubt that accomplished facts will speedily be acknowledged. Russia does not like the change, because a strong Bulgaria will be a nucleus for all South Slavs; Austria does not like the change, because she is not ready to march to Salonica; and Lord Salisbury does not like the change, because he helped to draw up the cancelled clause of the Treaty of Berlin. But none of them can interfere. The Czar cannot alienate Russian feeling; the Emperor of Russia cannot affront Slavic feeling, and Lord Salisbury cannot outrage English feeling, by restoring the withering dominion of the Turk in a Christian province which has just escaped it. There will be a quantity of writing; but if Prince Alexander is firm he will reign in both Bulgarias; and as the Turk cannot dismiss him, or fine him, or send him orders, his nominal position as vassal for part of his dominions will signify no more than the Queen's position as a vassal princess in Cyprus. It is a little discreditable and dishonouring; but that is all.

So far as Bulgaria is concerned, too much has been made of the revolution; but there is a question behind the Bulgarian one which may disturb the world. Will Macedonia consent to remain quiet for a few more months or years? The people of that grand Province are in a frightful situation. They are at present slaves, lying at the mercy of an Asiatic and Mahommedan soldiery, who detest them as Asiatics and Christians; who know that they are deadly enemies, always plotting insurrection, and who have no motive for sparing them, inasmuch as their own ultimate and final withdrawal is a mere question of months. The Macedonians, therefore, live in hourly dread of a visitation, to which ordinary "repression" by a military Government is child's play, while events all around them are calculated to drive cooler men than themselves frantic with excitement. Half of them are Greeks, and have recently seen Thessaly released; while the other half are Bulgarians, and are now seeing Bulgaria restored as a free and united State. It must seem to the Macedonians as if their hour also had arrived, as if further submission were shameful, and as if they could hardly have a better opportunity. They have shown much patience; and with Mr. Gladstone out of power, and Austria threatening in the distance, they may still remain quiet; but they may also rise, and if they rise, it is difficult to imagine how a final settlement can be hoped for without bloodshed. The Turkish soldiers, who are incurably convinced that terror is their best instrument, will crush the Macedonians in three months, devastating their cities and exterminating their villagers; and three Powers at least must, if the struggle once begins, set troops in motion. Greece must and will defend and claim Macedonia, if she perishes in the attempt. The Servian Government not only declares that it has rights in Macedonia, but has mobilised its whole army in readiness to support them; while the Austrian Government has projects in Macedonia which, if the province is absorbed in Greece or secures with its autonomy the means of forming alliances, may be baffled for this generation or for ever. The Austrian statesmen are cautious in the extreme, and are gravely embarrassed by Magyar feeling for the Turks and Magyar dread of Slav ascendency; but they never give up their plans, they believe that the economic prosperity of their empire depends on their possession of a direct route to Asia, and they dare not allow the Servians to take the lead in a war for the independence of the Balkans. They are slow to act; but we can hardly doubt that if Macedonia rose, the Austrian Army would be marched south "to maintain order in Macedonia pending the judgment of Europe upon the condition of European Turkey." The Servians are not strong enough to resist seriously, even with the assistance of the Greeks; the Germans would display a benevolent neutrality towards Austria; the Russians would only claim a slice for Bulgaria; and what remains?

England? The position of England would be one of extraordinary difficulty and complexity. The desire of Mr. Gladstone, and of an immense majority of all Liberals who have thought upon the subject, is that the great provinces of the Balkan Peninsula should all become free States; that they should form a strong federation for defence, controlling half a million of brave, though scarcely disciplined, soldiers; and that the head of this Federation, whoever he may be, should be regarded as the ultimate heir of Constantinople, whenever the Turk has retired, as he must retire, to his Asiatic dominion. That is the policy which Mr. Gladstone has defended in season and out of season, and it is both a sensible and a righteous one,—sensible, because it would involve a minimum of European disturbance; righteous, because it would leave to each State and race the control of its own affairs and its own future. Not to mention, however, that Mr. Gladstone is not in power, and that Lord Salisbury, who gave Bosnia to the Hapsburgs, is, armies in motion can only be stopped by armies, and it may be doubted whether this country would consent to fight in any such cause. The English people would declare war on Russia whenever their leaders bade them, but they have no jealousy of Austria, and no dislike of her; they did not oppose the transfer of Bosnia to her care, and they do not understand the intensity with which certain races dislike her ascendency or rule. To fight Austria, with the certainty that Russia would slip down to Constantinople during the struggle, would seem to them an unwise expenditure of strength; and they would, in all human probability, confine their efforts to protecting and strengthening Greece by the addition of Epirus, and inducing Europe to make of Macedonia an appanage of the Hapsburg family, as Tuscany formerly was, instead of an Austrian possession. So much could certainly be obtained, for both Trieste and Salonica are ports; but that is not equivalent to a defeat of the Austrian advance. If this country remained quiet, it is difficult to see whence the means of resistance are to come, or what Europe could do except ratify the accomplished facts and await the ultimate struggle or compromise between the Northern and Southern Slavs. It would be a most unjust and unwise settlement, for the States of the Balkans wish for Federation; and as federated States would not only be content, but furnish a new guarantee for the peace of Eastern Europe. That excellent settlement could, however, be secured only by using force; and, while it is doubtful whether Mr. Gladstone could use force, it is not doubtful that Lord Salisbury could not. He has no moral standpoint against Austria, and no power to demand sacrifices from the people of Great Britain. We trust the occasion will not arise, and that the Macedonians will wait; but in Servia, in Montenegro, and in Athens, it is evidently believed that their patience draws to its end.

OUR TRAMWAYS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The article quoted from Engineering, and referred to in your very able article in your issue of to-day, is only one of several that have appeared in that paper, all written with a view of prejudicing the professional mind in England against a certain branch of our public works department. The remark, "The locomotives are too large in view of the comparatively small loads drawn," of course is, as compared with locomotives drawing heavier loads on lighter grades. Who will dispute the excellence of design and workmanship on our Blue Mountain line? Yet on that line we see a monster locomotive that on any trunk line with ordinary grades would draw 60 loaded trucks leaving Penrith for the Mountains with 13 trucks, and loaded to her full power at that.

In our street railways we are bound to the grades already existing in the streets; these are in some instances very heavy, as much as 1 in 17 in one instance.

INTERCOLONIAL ITEMS.

A social reunion of the Prison Gate Brigade of the Salvation Army in Melbourne took place last Friday evening at the old Detective office, corner of Russell and Little Flinders streets. From a return furnished by Major Barker it appeared (says the Age) that since the establishment of the brigade there have been met at the Melbourne gaol and the Detective office 2000 men, who had been assisted in various ways by the brigade, provided with shelter, tools, clothing, &c.; 271 had been inmates of the Home for various periods ranging from three months upwards, whose united terms of imprisonment reached 946 years; while 20, at present inmates, reached the aggregate age of 858 years, with an aggregate of 116 years 3 months' imprisonment. The Ballarat and Sandhurst branches of the brigade had been in operation only a few months, yet at the former 44 discharged prisoners had been received, 2300 meals had been supplied, and 670 beds provided. Numbers of families had also been provided with food and clothing. At Sandhurst 60 had been met and relieved, some of whom were now in respectable employment; and at the Castlemaine branch 33 had been met and assisted. Since the establishment of the Melbourne Home, 16,213 beds and 48,078 meals had been provided.

Writing on the water supply to Melbourne, the Age remarks:—"With the rapid increase of population and the equally rapid extension of reticulation pipes, the demand upon the service mains is increasing at an alarming rate. Three years ago the maximum quantity of water drawn off during any one of the hot summer days was 20,000,000 gallons. This summer the maximum reached 24,000,000 gallons, and the cry is still for more water. Sufficient water can be brought to town in the present mains during each 24 hours to satisfy all the requirements of the entire metropolis if the consumers spread their consumption over the 24 hours. But the fact is upon a hot day everybody wants a supply at the same time, and the mains between Preston and Melbourne are not equal to this strain. The Cabinet will be asked to sanction an expenditure of about £100,000 to remedy this defect."

The Sandhurst correspondent of the Melbourne Telegraph reports that on Friday morning Mr. Harry Roberts, well known as a legal manager and commission agent at Sandhurst was arrested at the instance of the Rev. Daniel O'Reilly, charged with having by false pretences obtained the sum of £600. The alleged offence was said to have been committed on the 20th August last. Roberts was brought before Mr. Van Damme, J.P., and remanded until the 19th instant, bail being allowed in two sureties of £100 each, and the prisoner's own of £200. It appears that O'Reilly advanced £600 to Roberts on 300 United Devonshire shares, which were then at 52s., on the understanding that if the shares dropped to 40s. the 300 were to be sold. The shares did fall to the amount named, and were consequently sold, and it was afterwards discovered that the scrip was valueless, the 300 shares being an over-issue.

The Hobart Mercury relates the following instance of old-fashioned bush cruelty to bullocks:—Mr. Charles Ball, the Warden of Glenorchy, and Mr. George Richardson, the secretary to the Board of Education, deposited at the police station a bullock chain with a bullock's tail attached to it, which they took from two men, named Thomas and Samuel Joseph. From what can be gathered, it appears the animal's tail was lashed to one of the leading chains of a dray, which, it is asserted, is a common practice when a bullock in yoke is at all likely to prove skittish and unworkable. In this case it is presumed that the leading chain caried away, and that the animal hauled on his tail purchase, with the result that that appendage came out by the roots. Mr. Samuel Joseph, the owner of the team of bullocks, says the occurrence was purely accidental. His nephews were working some young bullocks, and had adopted the common practice of tying the tail of one which did not keep its place in the team to the drag chain. The chain broke, the bullock being frightened, strove to bolt, the knot securing its tail to the chain held fast, and some hair and a portion of skin from the tail gave way, and his nephews were powerless to prevent it.

A case of garroting occurred in Queen-street, near Flinders-street, Melbourne, at a quarter past 10 on Saturday night, when William Ashwin, the caretaker of the Bank of New Zealand, was set upon by four men, who took from him 3s. 6d. and a bunch of keys from his pockets. Constable Akeroyd, who was on duty in the vicinity, and hearing a faint cry for assistance and the noise of some money falling on the pavement, ran down the street, and found Edward Self, a young man, still holding Ashwin by the throat. Self was immediately arrested on a charge of assault and robbery, but the constable found no money in his possession. The keys were subsequently picked up near the spot.

A somewhat extraordinary case came up for hearing at the Friday's sitting of the St. Kilda court, in which the Rev. Samuel Ironsides (says the Melbourne Telegraph) was charged with attempting to defraud the Post-office authorities by posting a document on the 24th ultimo with insufficient postage. A second charge for a similar offence committed on the 28th October was heard at the same time. Mr. Eggleston appeared for the defence, and said that, whilst his client admitted the fault, he had no intention of defrauding the revenue. It was simply a fault of omission, not of commission. The Bench, however, took the view that, an offence having been committed and admitted, they had no alternative but to impose the penalties provided by the statute. The defendant was fined 40s. in each case.

From the report containing the statements and returns of Government savings banks of Victoria for the year ending June 30, 1885, we learn that the total amount received from depositors during the 12 months was £1,698,718 7s. 10d., the total amount of repayments to depositors being £1,525,260 3s. 7d., and the total amount of interest allowed to them being £70,242 18s. 11d., the rate being 4 per cent. per annum. The number of depositors' accounts at July 1, 1885, was 95,170, being 13,548 greater than at July 1, 1884, and the amount of depositors' balances at July 1, 1885, was £2,075,290 4s. 8d., being £243,701 3s. 4d. more than at July 1, 1884. The average of depositors' balances at July 1, 1885, was £21 16s. 1d., the average of deposits for the 12 months ended June 30, 1885, was £5 16s. 4d., and the average of withdrawals for that period was £9 0s. 3d.

An accident by lightning is recorded as having occurred on Mr. Hunter's farm, near Jamestown (S. A.) during the terrific thunderstorm that passed over the northern areas in the middle of last week. A man and a boy (says the Jamestown Agriculturist) were proceeding to take the horses engaged on the farm to the homestead, and while passing through a green wheat paddock both of them, who were mounted, were struck to the ground, and a horse near them was struck dead. The boy remained uninjured, but the man suffered so severely from the shock that he has not yet entirely recovered.

BRITISH SEAMEN.

(From the Naval and Military Gazette.)

Until a comparatively recent period the supply of seamen for the navy was largely obtained from the mercantile marine. Foreign-going traders, coasting vessels, and our fishing fleets were alike laid under contribution for this purpose. During times of peace recruits voluntarily came forward in sufficient numbers to keep up the complements of the ships in commission, there being always a goodly supply of men who had already served in other vessels of the navy, and were still desirous of similar employment. But in war times it was found necessary to supplement these with mercantile seamen obtained through the agency of the deservedly hated press-gang. In more recent times a better system has been in operation, and now the crews of her Majesty's ships are obtained by training boys in the first instance, and by retaining reserves of men in the receiving ships and barracks at the several naval ports. A vote of the House of Commons now provides every year for the maintenance of a certain complement of seamen, marines, and boys; and whenever it is thought necessary to increase the complement, an increase is made in the number of boys entered in the training ships. This system scarcely admits of improvement so far as regards the principles governing it. But it is not sufficiently elastic, for a boy cannot be trained to the efficiency of an able or an ordinary seaman in a few months, and consequently unless the Admiralty train a greater number of lads than would be required for peace service, there is sure to be a deficiency of men when the navy is submitted to the strain of a war with a powerful naval power. It is doubtful whether the present complement of seamen is sufficient for any other than ordinary peace requirements. There is a strongly marked indisposition on the part of all naval administrations to increase the vote for seamen and marines so long as men are found forthcoming when the ships are put into commission. To keep a considerable reserve of men in receiving ships and naval barracks without an immediate prospect of employment for them is a procedure which does not seem to be favourably entertained by the Government. It, however, is as necessary that this should be done as that we should have a strong reserve of ships. We can no longer depend upon the mercantile marine for our crews, seeing that British merchant ships are now largely manned by foreign seamen and commanded by foreign masters. This is a subject which demands attention upon many grounds, for not the least of which is the difficulty which may be experienced hereafter in satisfactorily manning our mercantile cruisers.

PATENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—A reference to the Act of the Tasmanian Parliament (1884), 48 Victoria, No. 2—"An Act to make provision for the mutual protection of Patents for Inventions and Trade Marks granted or registered in Tasmania, or the United Kingdom"—will, I think, show that our little Southern sister, Tasmania, was the first to avail herself of the provisions of section 104 of the Act of the Imperial Parliament to amend and consolidate the law relating to patents for inventions, Nos. 46 and 47 of Victoria, ch. 57, and that the credit given by your correspondent of yesterday to the colony of Queensland really belongs to Tasmania.

It is to be hoped that the great increase in cost proposed in the Act submitted to our Parliament in its last session may be regarded as unnecessary. The public complain of the Government fee of £20 for a full patent for 14 years. The proposed Act increases it to, I think, £35. I must say that I am antiquated enough to think that the present Act, with certain material alterations, would be more advantageous to the public, although it might not be so profitable to others, than the proposed Act.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

The first session of the twelfth Parliament was opened by commission yesterday. A large number of ladies graced the floor of the Legislative Council. The proceedings, however, were principally of a formal character.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Tuesday, November 17.

The President took the chair at noon, and directed the Clerk of Parliaments to read the proclamation convening Parliament for the despatch of business.

The proclamation was read accordingly.

The PRESIDENT acquainted the House that the Lieutenant-Governor, not thinking it fit to be personally present, had caused a Commission to be issued appointing himself, the Hon. G. Thornton, and the Hon. W. R. Piddington commissioners for the opening and holding of the Parliament.

The President then commanded the Usher of the Black Rod to acquaint the Assembly that the commissioners required their immediate attendance to hear the commission for the opening of Parliament read.

The members of the Assembly having attended, the President announced to them the issue of the commission, which was then read by the Clerk.

The PRESIDENT informed the members of the Assembly that it would be necessary for them to then return to the Legislative Assembly to elect their Speaker.

The members of the Assembly having withdrawn, the President and the commissioners took the oath and signed the roll, after which the members present also took the oath and signed the roll.

The PRESIDENT announced the resignation of Sir Alfred Stephen as a member of the Council, and the appointment of Sir Alexander Stuart and Mr. J. S. Farnell as members of the Council. The Hon. Sir Alexander Stuart then took the oath and signed the roll, after which the President announced the decease, during the recess, of the Hon. John Smith.

Mr. THORNTON moved that the House adjourn until the following day at half-past 11 o'clock. He also stated that at that time he would make an official statement as to his acceptance of office under the Government.

The House adjourned at two minutes to 1 o'clock until 11.30 the following day.

The following are the members who were sworn in:—The Hons. W. R. Piddington, W. Byrnes, J. Campbell, A. Campbell, S. Charles, G. H. Cox, J. M. Creed, A. Dodds, J. H. Neale, A. Gordon, W. Halliday, A. H. Jacob, G. Lee, W. A. Long, F. Lord, J. Lucas, J. Macintosh, C. K. Mackellar, W. Macleay, H. Moore, H. Mort, H. Moses, J. Norton, J. Eales, R. H. Roberts, John Smith, J. Stewart, W. H. Suttor, J. B. Suttor, S. H. Terry, G. Thornton, J. B. Watt, R. Webb, and J. White.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, November 17.

The members of the Legislative Assembly attended in the Assembly Chamber at 12 noon. On the front Government benches were:—The Hon. G. R. Dibbs, the Hon. Sir P. A. Jennings, the Hon. J. H. Want, the Hon. J. P. Abbott, the Hon. W. J. Trickett, the Hon. John See, the Hon. T. M. Slattery, the Hon. W. J. Lyne, and Mr. Day. The front Opposition bench held Mr. Burns, Mr. R. B. Smith, Mr. Wisdom, Mr. Suttor, Mr. Fletcher, Mr. Burdekin, Mr. J. H. Young, Mr. Garrett, Mr. Gould, and Sir Henry Parkes.

The Clerk of the Assembly, Mr. Jones, read the proclamation convening Parliament, and announced that he had received writs from 72 electorates, together with the alphabetical list of the members returned, certified under the hand of the Lieutenant-Governor to be correct according to the returns furnished by the returning-officers. He also announced that he had received a writ for the election of a member to serve for the district of The Hume, in the room of Mr. W. J. Lyne, whose seat had been declared vacant on his taking office as Minister for Public Works; and a writ for the election of a member for the Burrowa in the room of Mr. T. M. Slattery, whose seat had been declared vacant on his taking office as Minister for Justice; and in each case the gentleman mentioned had been re-elected, and the writ had been duly returned within the time specified.

MESSAGE FROM HIS EXCELLENCY'S COMMISSIONERS.

The Sergeant-at-Arms announced a messenger from his Excellency's commissioners.

The Usher of the Black Rod then entered the Chamber and delivered a message from his Excellency's commissioners, requesting the attendance of the members of the House of Assembly in the Legislative Council Chamber.

The members of the Assembly thereupon proceeded to the Council Chamber. On their return to the Assembly Chamber the Clerk read the commission appointing the Hon. G. R. Dibbs, the Hon. Sir P. A. Jennings, and the Hon. J. P. Abbott to administer the oath to the members of the Assembly. These three members, having been sworn in, proceeded to administer the oath to the other members. Sir John Robertson, on taking his seat at the head of the Opposition, was received with loud cheers.

ELECTION OF SPEAKER.

Mr. G. H. REID advanced to the table and said: Mr. Jones,—I beg to move that Edmund Barton, Esq., do take the Chair of this House as Speaker. (Hear, hear.) I feel sure, Sir, that this motion will prove eminently acceptable to every member of the House. We all know that Mr. Barton filled the office of Speaker during the whole term of the Parliament which was recently dissolved. (Hear, hear.) I stand among a number of hon. members who can speak with an authority more weighty than mine as to the manner in which the obligations of his position were fulfilled by Mr. Barton. (Hear, hear.) But I feel confident that I shall give utterance to an opinion universally entertained on both sides of the House, when I say that Mr. Barton, by his conduct in the Chair, more than justified the great expectation which attended his elevation. (Cheers.) The oldest member of this House would try in vain to recollect a Parliament in this colony, of which, when compared with the last Parliament, it could be said that the duties of Mr. Speaker, or the number and importance of the questions he had to decide, called for greater knowledge or ability, a finer sense of impartiality, or a larger measure of courtesy, than those with which Mr. Barton had to deal. (Hear, hear.) Yet the way in which that hon. gentleman, although new to the chair, performed all his onerous and trying duties, was I believe such as on the whole to give the highest satisfaction to the House. (Cheers.) We may find then, I respectfully submit, in the capacity, the dignity, and courtesy—(hear, hear)—which have been so abundantly revealed in the career of Mr. Barton as the Speaker of this House, a sufficient guarantee that on calling him again at this time to that high position the duties of the Chair will be discharged to the utmost satisfaction of the present Parliament. (Cheers.)

Mr. J. P. GARVAN said that it was his pleasing duty to second the nomination of Mr. Edmund Barton to the chair of this Parliament. Some time ago he thought he discovered in his friend Mr. Barton abilities fitting him for the position. He had a clear intellect, a breadth of view, and a mental grasp which would enable him under any circumstances to do his duty. The responsibility imposed upon him by the late Parliament had been fulfilled to the full satisfaction of Parliament and of the colony. It was not, however, a subject which needed much apology, and he had, therefore, great pleasure in seconding the nomination.

Mr. BARTON rose in his seat and said: It is with a deep sense of the honour proposed to be conferred upon me that I humbly submit myself to the will of this House. (Hear, hear.)

Amid loud calls for "Barton," and hearty cheers, Mr. Reid and Mr. Garvan rose and led the Speaker-elect to the platform.

Mr. SPEAKER then said: It is gratifying to me that the high honour of being called upon to preside over the deliberations of Parliament has been a second time conferred upon me. But my gratitude is doubled when the voice of the people calling upon me to take the chair of the highest representative institution is expressed through newly-elected members by acclamation. When, nearly three years ago, this honour was conferred upon me, I confess I approached the duties of the office with fear and trembling, and I do it now with a deep sense of responsibility. It would be idle for me not to confess now that I have fallen far below the idea that I set up for myself when I first took office. My errors of judgment have been frequent; inability to grasp principles placed before me for decision have been also frequent. There is only one principle in which I hope not to have disappointed the House. I made a promise of impartiality, and I think I have kept it. Before I again take this chair I should like to say to the House that my sense of the responsibility of my task is now as vivid as ever it was; and in performing the duties of this exalted office my only hope will be that I shall behave with the courtesy which is due to the chosen of the people, and also with the dignity and purity which must be born of any true conception of the greatness of the position. (Cheers.)

Mr. DIBBS said that on behalf of hon. members on that side of the House it afforded him considerable pleasure to be able to offer his congratulations on the position to which the Speaker had been chosen. Those who sat in the late Parliament were well aware that when he was elected three years ago to the same position his warmest friends could hardly have anticipated that he would have so satisfactorily performed the duties imposed upon him. During the sittings of long sessions of Parliament, often of a very trying nature, he had displayed unusual ability, and had worthily adorned the chair of the highest representative body in the land; and he (Mr. Dibbs) had not the shadow of a doubt that the office would be as worthily filled during the present Parliament, creditable alike to the position itself and to the House. (Cheers.)

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON then rose and said that the Premier had an advantage over him in this matter. He himself had not had the good fortune to vote for Mr. Barton three years ago, when he voted for another gentleman who had filled the position for a number of years, and he would have done so again, but there was no man now alive whom he would prefer seeing in the chair. (Hear, hear.) Those who had voted against Mr. Barton had been treated with the fullest fair play, as they hoped to be treated by a good, faithful, honourable, and able Speaker, and he had great pleasure, on his own behalf and on behalf of the gentlemen on his side of the Chamber, in offering Mr. Barton their congratulations. (Hear, hear.)

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. DIBBS stated that his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor would receive the members of this House at 11.30 a.m. next day for the purpose of presenting their Speaker. He moved the adjournment of the House to 11 a.m. to-morrow.

At 17 minutes to 2 o'clock the House adjourned till to-morrow morning.

MEMBERS SWORN IN.

The following members of the new (12th) Parliament were sworn in:—Sir Patrick Jennings (Colonial Secretary), Messrs. Abbott (Minister of Lands), Abigail, Baker, Barbour, E. Barton, Russell Barton, Bolton, Bowman, H. H. Brown, T. F. D. C. Browne, Bull, Burdekin, Burke, Burns, Butcher, Campbell, Cass, Chanter, Henry Clarke, William Clarke, Collins, Coonan, Copeland, Cramsie, Creer, Davies, Dawson, Day, Dibbs (Premier), Ewing, D. A. ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO MURDER.

At the Central Police Court yesterday a respectable-looking young married woman, named Ada Fuller, was brought before Mr. Abbott, S.M., on remand, charged with having shot at and wounded her husband, Edward Fuller, with intent to murder him.

Senior-constable Grice deposed that between 6 and 7 o'clock a.m., on the 6th instant, from information received, he went to the prisoner's house, No. 47, Denham-street, Glebe Point, accompanied by Senior-constable M'Dowell; there were blood marks on the floor, and, in reply to a question, the prisoner said that nothing had been the matter; he told her that her husband had reported to the police that she had shot him in the arm; she denied having any firearms, but subsequently handed over a six-chambered revolver, with five of its chambers loaded; the remaining barrel bore appearances of having been recently discharged; in reply to a charge of having shot at her husband with the intent to murder him, she said, "I did not mean to kill him, I only did it to frighten him;" she said that he had brought another woman into the house, and she added, "You can't blame me for doing what I have done."

Dr. Westrum deposed as to an examination which he made of the prosecutor's arm at a quarter to 6 a.m. in the Sydney Hospital; at the back of the left arm, about three inches above the elbow joint, there was a round wound of about a third of an inch diameter and probeable for an inch; this had been apparently caused by a bullet, which had passed through the entire thickness of the arm and lodged in the forepart; one large bloodvessel had been injured, and the man was in danger of his life for some days, but had now recovered; the bullet was still in his body, as owing to the vicinity of large blood vessels and arteries it was not advisable to operate for its removal; the wound might have been caused by a ball from the revolver which was produced in Court.

Senior-Constable M'Dowell deposed that whilst at the lockup, and before she had been charged, the prisoner remarked to her husband, "I must have been drunk last night, Ned, or I'd have taken better aim;" she also said, "He brought a girl home and insisted on keeping her in the house to annoy me; you can't blame me for what I have done."

The prosecutor, who stated that he had no wish to prosecute, stated that he believed that the accused was his wife, as he had been married to her at St. Peter's, Woolloomooloo, in 1873; on the night in question he took a young woman home and kept her till about 3 o'clock next morning; on leaving the house at that hour his wife was on the footpath, and he heard a gunshot; at the same time he received a wound in the arm from behind as he stood on the verandah; he went to the hospital, and reported the matter at the Central Police Office; they had been separated for a considerable time, and upon this occasion he took the girl to her house; she had never previously threatened him; the revolver produced he had previously taken from the house and had pawned it.

Arthur Turner, circus performer, deposed that on the night in question he had stayed at the prisoner's house; he lay down on a sofa, and having had drink, he recollected nothing more until a noise awoke him; he then heard the prisoner call out, "How dare you bring any woman into my house?" she then went outside, saying, "I'll go and get someone to make her come out;" Fuller followed her, and directly afterwards a pistol was fired and he came inside complaining that he had been shot; he (witness) said to the accused: "Ned has been shot through the arm," to which she replied "Yes."

Isabella Sullivan, the "girl" to whom reference was made, deposed to having accompanied Fuller to his wife's residence, where she remained until the accused found them, and ordered them out of the house; she was sitting in a back room when a pistol was fired.

The prisoner declined to make any statement, and she was committed to take her trial at the Circuit Court.

DEMOCRACY AND THE BENCH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—During the course of a desultory discussion which took place in Court one day towards the end of last week, between the Judges and some of the leaders of the Bar, on the ever-present problem of how to clear off the increasing arrears of work, Sir James Martin—while speaking of the desirability of appointing additional members of the Bench—gave utterance to the following expression of opinion:—"In these very democratic times there is an unreasonable jealousy manifested by legislators against the Judges, both here and elsewhere. . . . Why, the great statesman whom we call "the Grand Old Man," even struck three Judges off the list at home, and so diminished the strength of the Bench." Whether democracies are really to be credited with hostile feelings towards judical officers or not is easily proved by a comparison of statistics. It may be there are more Judges in autocratic Russia than in republican America, although it is popularly supposed that in the latter country every man who is not "General" or "Colonel," may be appropriately addressed as "Judge," or it may be the fact that the bench is stronger in imperial Austria than in democratic France. No doubt an appeal to Sir James Martin would prove it to be the case, but our Chief Justice was certainly most unfortunate in the example which he gave of the principle which he so emphatically enunciated. The consequence of passing the Judicature Act, which was effected during Mr. Gladstone's Administration, was to abolish two, not three, high judicial offices, viz., the Lord Chief Justiceship of the Common Pleas and the Lord Chief Barony of the Exchequer, but its effect also was to increase the total number of paid Judges. A comparison will show that under the old system the Bench consisted of 24 members in all, viz.: one Lord Chancellor, three heads of the Common Law divisions, the Master of the Rolls, two Lords Justices of Appeal, president of the Probate and Divorce Court, three Vice-Chancellors, twelve puisne Justices and Barons, and one Judge of the Admiralty Court. The Supreme Court of Justice, as constituted by the Act, is composed of 32 Judges, whose official titles may hereafter be altered, but without any diminution of number. This year's list shows them to be as follows:—The Lord Chancellor, three Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, the Lord Chief Justice, the Master of the Rolls, the President of the Probate and Divorce Court, five Lords Justices of Appeal, one Vice-Chancellor, four Justices attached to the Chancery division, 14 puisne Justices of the Queen's Bench divison, and the Judge of the Admiralty Court. So far, then, as English democracy is concerned, Sir James Martin's sweeping assertion is unwarranted by facts, and, as such, should be no longer left uncorrected. I am, &c.,

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—Tuesday, November 17.

In Banco.—(Before their Honors Mr. Justice Faucett, Mr. Justice Windeyer, and Mr. Justice Innes.)

SMITH V. A. S. N. COMPANY (PART HEARD).

In this case, which was a motion for a new trial of an action arising out of a collision between plaintiff's steamer Barrabool and defendant's steamer Birksgate, and resulting in a verdict for the plaintiffs, the arguments were commenced yesterday.

Mr. Darley, Q.C., Mr. Rogers, and Mr. O'Connor, instructed by Messrs. Daintrey and Gilder, for the defendants, moved to make the rule absolute.

The Attorney-General (Mr. Want) and Mr. Heydon for the plaintiffs, instructed by Messrs. Bull and Bull, showed cause.

Mr. Darley, having argued in support of the rule, and the Attorney-General having argued on behalf of the plaintiffs, Mr. Heydon followed on the same side. He contended that the verdict was consistent with the evidence. The engineer of the Barrabool, in giving evidence, said that they were going dead slow for some minutes before the collision; he had received an order to go half speed, then eight minutes afterwards the telegraph bell rang "dead slow," and four minutes afterwards "stop and full speed astern;" whereas the evidence was that the speed of the Birksgate had not been slackened at all.

Mr. Rogers then replied.

The Court reserved judgment.

CHISHOLM V. COLE.

This case involves an important question on the interpretation of the Land Acts of 1861 and 1875.

It was a motion for the new trial of an action of trespass to certain land near Goulburn, such land being, as was alleged in the declaration, a measured portion of 1000 acres known as Kinghorne. The defendant pleaded not guilty; not possessed; and that portions of the land had been taken up by the defendant as a free selector, and that they were now his freehold.

The trial took place in December, 1884, before the Chief Justice and a jury of four, and a verdict was entered by consent for the plaintiffs for 40s. A rule nisi was obtained on February 10th for a new trial, or to have the verdict entered for the defendant on the following grounds, which were reserved at the trial:—1. That the verdict was against evidence. 2 and 3. That his Honor should not have admitted a certain schedule signed by Sir Thomas Mitchell, and a certain plan signed by one Hoddle, and a certain map signed by one Willis, as evidence that the land in question was a measured portion. 4. That his Honor should have admitted in evidence a certain report written by Mr. Oxley, the Surveyor-General of the colony, dated the 4th June, 1827. 5. That his Honor should have admitted in evidence a certain letter dated the 21st May, 1854, written by James Kinghorne to the Colonial Secretary.

Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Heydon, instructed by Messrs. Slattery and Heydon, for the defendant, moved to make the rule absolute.

Dr. Donovan (Mr. E. Barton with him), instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Laurence, and Jaques, for the plaintiffs, appeared to show cause.

The questions were—1. Whether a measured portion of land over 640 acres in extent comes within the decision in Blackwood v. Dobbin (1 S. C. R., N. S. 75), under secs. 13 and 16 of the Crown Lands Act Amendment Act, of 1875 (39 Vic., No. 13) 2. Whether certain improvements alleged to be on the land were improvements that could be allowed for. These included a railway fence, and a fence along a population area bounding the land in question. 3. Whether the approval or authority of the Minister under sec. 16 may be subsequent to the application for a selection. At the trial the plaintiffs sought to establish a promise of lease to them made previously to the 22nd February, 1868, which under sec. 7 of the Crown Lands Alienation Act of 1861 would render the land exempt from sale.

Mr. Stephen, in the course of his argument, abandoned the second, third, and fourth grounds, on their Honors intimating they were not tenable after the decision in Moore v. Bernholdt (3 N. S. W. L. R., 9). He had not concluded his arguments when the Court rose.

In Equity.—(Before his Honor the Primary Judge.)

M'MILLAN AND OTHERS V. PILE AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Knox, instructed by Messrs. Slattery and Heydon, for the plaintiffs; Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., and Mr. Walker, instructed by Messrs. Norton and Co., for the defendant Pile; Mr. Lingen, instructed by Messrs. Ellis and Makinson, for the defendant M'Millan.

This is a suit brought by Wm. M'Millan, Mary Ann M'Millan his wife, and Charles Francis M'Millan, to set aside a contract for the sale of an hotel at the corner of Sussex and Margaret streets, made between their father, the defendant, Wm. M'Millan, and the defendant George Pile, on the 2nd June, 1884. The plaintiffs claim the property under a deed of settlement made by the defendant, M'Millan in favour of their mother, in 1861, and their case is that on their marriages they represented to their wives that they had half interest in the property in question. The father-in-law of William M'Millan, jun., has also stated that upon his inquiring from that plaintiff before marriage what means he had to support a wife he was informed that he and his brother would have the hotel in question. The evidence for the defence is not yet concluded.

In Divorce.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice Windeyer.)

DALY V. DALY.

This was the wife's petition for judicial separation, on the ground of cruelty.

Dr. Sly, instructed by Mr. Murray White, for the petitioner, moved to settle issues, and set the case down for trial.

Mr. Brady appeared for the respondent with consent.

The marriage being admitted, the issue settled was cruelty, and the case was set down for the first day of the next sittings.

In Chambers.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice Windeyer.)

IN RE MILLER.

This was a matter of some public importance. Alfred Miller, a Sydney cabman, was fined on the 22nd October on an information laid before Mr. O'Malley Clarke, S.M., by Inspector Seymour for a breach of the first bylaw regulating vehicles made under section 224 of the Sydney Corporation Act. This bylaw says that "No person shall drive any vehicle or ride any horse or propel any velocipede whilst crossing the intersection of George, Pitt, Castlereagh, and Elizabeth streets, with Bridge, Hunter, King, Market, Park, Bathurst, Liverpool, Goulburn, or Hay streets, at a pace faster than a walk." The defendant was convicted for driving his cab across the intersection of George and Market streets, and fined £2, with 5s. costs.

On November 11, Mr. Browning, instructed by Mr. C. T. Roberts for the appellant, moved before Mr. Justice Windeyer for a rule nisi for a prohibition against such conviction, on the ground that the bylaw in question only applied to private vehicles, cabs and other public vehicles being regulated by the Public Vehicles Regulation Act (36 Vic., No. 14), and the bylaws made under that Act (s. 15), by the Transit Commissioners. Of these bylaws the 30th is: "The driver of every vehicle requiring to turn for the purpose of proceeding in an opposite direction on any street, road, or lane in the city or police district of Sydney, shall bring the horse or horses to a walking pace before commencing to turn, and shall also go at the same pace in turning the corner of any street." The 31st bylaw is: "No vehicle, except a dray, shall be drawn through any part of the city or police district of Sydney at a walking pace, except as before provided, or on Sunday, when all shall be so drawn when passing places of public worship during divine service, or whilst in a funeral procession, nor at a pace faster than that of a trot, which shall not be at a less rate than six miles an hour, at which rate all carriages shall be drawn except when otherwise ordered by the hirer." The rule nisi was granted on the ground that the Sydney Corporation bylaw being inconsistent with the Transit Commission bylaws did not apply to licensed public vehicles, and that the conviction was therefore bad.

Mr. Pilcher and Mr. Browning, instructed by Mr. C. T. Richards, now moved to make that rule absolute.

Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Nash, instructed by Mr. Merriman, City Solicitor, for the respondent.

Mr. Pilcher contended that the power to deal with public vehicles being vested by the Public Vehicles Act in the Transit Commissioners the Corporation bylaws, must be taken, to apply to private vehicles only, with which the Transit Commissioners had no power to deal.

Mr. Darley argued that the Corporation bylaw only directing what an ordinarily prudent man would do, the two sets of bylaws would stand together.

Mr. Pilcher, in reply: No doubt, when necessity arose, a driver would be bound to slacken his speed. Here it was not shown that any such necessity arose. In the absence of any emergency, the cabman was bound, by bylaw 31 of the Transit Commissioners, to drive six miles an hour. Of course, if the Corporation bylaw repealed the Transit Commissioners' bylaw as a matter of law, the case would be at an end.

His Honor reserved judgment.

THE QUEEN V. SMYTHE.

Mr. C. B. Stephen, instructed by Mr. J. M. Curtis, moved to set aside an order for the examination of a garnishee, order which had been granted on an ex parte application. He cited Chitty's Archbold, p. 712, and Clarke v. Stocken, 2 Bing. N. C. 651.

Mr. Pilcher, instructed by Want, Johnson, and Co., in support of the order. Even if the order was bad, the irregularity had been waived by an application on behalf of the garnishee for an adjournment. The present application was only made in order to cause delay.

The Prothonotary was asked as to what had taken place in his office.

His Honor held that, though there was some doubt about the facts, the law was clear. The order ought to be set aside, but, under the circumstances, without costs.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—Tuesday.

(Before the Chief Commissioner.)

CERTIFICATE APPLICATIONS.

His Honor directed that on payment of Court charges and expenses, certificates should be issued to Henry Harry Cooke and Robert Dennis Dilly.

In the matter of James Charles Horatio Morland, Mr. Dickson appeared on behalf of the insolvent, and applied for a certificate. He stated that affidavits had been filed in explanation of the alienation of certain land which had once belonged to the estate.

His Honor, after considering the report of the official assignee, and the insolvent's affidavits and depositions, said that although the injured creditor had not proved express fraud, insolvent had no right to administer his estate in his own way, and then come to the court and ask it to do what he himself had already done. The moment he was served with a writ by Wright, Heaton, and Company, he ought to have surrendered his estate for the benefit of his creditors. He would suspend the certificate for four months from the date of the first application.

In the matter of Joshua Vickery and George Macnamara. Insolvents were directed to verify and file supplementary schedule by the 31st December, and also to furnish particulars by the same date in reference to a bill of sale given by them. The meeting was then adjourned to the 23rd March next.

In the several matters of Frederick Bowen, Robert Favell, Frederick W. Dumeldenger, Edward Tarleton, Edward Charles Campbell, and James Barnes. These matters were also adjourned, and insolvents were directed to file supplementary schedule by the 31st December. In the latter estate insolvent was also ordered to call a special meeting for proof of debts and to account for his insolvency, and to give his creditors 10 days' notice thereof.

In the matter of John Johnson. Mr. W. H. Mahoney appeared for insolvent. The affidavits required at the previous meeting had been filed, and his Honor reserved his decision, as he desired to consider the matter, which was somewhat complex.

In the matter of Joseph Frederick Dunn, there was no appearance, and the application was struck out.

In the matter of Charles Hodson, his Honor intimated that he would deliver judgment herein on Thursday next.

SURRENDERS.

Lawrence English Smith, of Armidale, labourer. Liabilities, £131 19s. 3d. Assets, £23 10s. Mr. L. T. Lloyd, official assignee.

PETITION AND AFFIDAVIT.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.—Tuesday.

(Before Mr. District Court Judge Wilkinson.)

GARLAND AND ANOTHER V. GAMMELL.

His Honor gave judgment in the case of Garland and Brooks v. James Gammell, heard on Monday, by nonsuiting the plaintiffs. Mr. Rogers, instructed by Mr. Freehill, appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Nash, instructed by Mr. P. J. Hourigan, for the defendant.

TATE AND ANOTHER V. COX AND ANOTHER.

In this case Messrs. Tate and Company sued Thomas Cox and Andrew White (trading as White and Company) for the recovery of £15 3s. 7d., balance of plumbers' account for work done at a restaurant in Clarence-street. The defendant Cox resisted the claim on the ground that the work was done before he became the partner of White, and therefore he was not liable. The defendant White resisted the claim on the ground that the amounts charged were excessive. A verdict was given in favour of the defendant Cox and against the defendant White, who was adjudged to pay the plaintiffs the sum of £9 10s.

TATE AND ANOTHER V. ROBINSON AND OTHERS.

This was a claim for £18 4s. 1d., brought by the same plaintiff firm as in the immediately preceding case against Messrs. Robinson, Rogers, and Andrew White (trading as Robinson and Co.), for plumber's work done at an establishment in Pitt-street. Judgment was given for the plaintiffs for £12.

BRUCE V. CONOLLY.

In this case Dr. James Bruce sued Mrs. Conolly, of Macdonaldtown, for the recovery of £27 10s. fees for medical attendance. Judgment was given for the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

MURRAY V. POWELL.

This was an action for the recovery of £12 14s. 10d., brought by James Murray against W. J. Powell, with respect to a promissory note and interest thereon. A verdict was given for the plaintiff for £11 10s., being the amount for which the note was drawn.

THOMPSON V. ARMSTRONG.

Claim £12 15s. 4d. for balance of a butcher's account brought by John Thompson of St. Leonards, against — Armstrong, of Temple Court. Judgment was given for the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

WEITZEL V. BLACKMANN AND ANOTHER.

This was an action brought by Ernest Weitzel against Messrs. Blackmann and Parkes, architects, for the recovery of £24—one month's salary—for alleged wrongful dismissal. Mr. Field, instructed by Mr. J. J. Langdon, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. E. Meyer for the defendants. The defendants pleaded justification. The plaintiff had been in the employment of the defendants, in the capacity of a draftsman, for about four years, but recently one of the members of the firm—Mr. Blackmann—expressed dissatisfaction with Weitzel, for being unpunctual and for undertaking private work as an architect. The outcome of this dissatisfaction was that Blackmann told Weitzel that he need not come to the office after the following Saturday, and the plaintiff then intimated that he had been about to give the firm notice. To avoid coming to court Messrs. Blackmann and Parkes had made certain offers to the plaintiff, including one of £15, all, it was said, without prejudice. The defendant firm now consented to a verdict for £15 without costs in favour of the plaintiff. His Honor, in recording the verdict, observed that unless the defendants had consented to the adoption of that course they must—in accordance with the law, which was as plain as possible—have got a verdict with costs against the plaintiff. The defendants, it seemed to him, had acted most considerately in the matter.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—Tuesday.

(Before his Honor the Chief Justice.)

Mr. Wise prosecuted for the Crown.

ALLEGED ASSAULT WITH INTENT.

Edward Jackson, charged with assault with intent at Cootamundra, was again placed in the dock, the case having been heard on the previous day, but the jury were then unable to agree, and were locked up all night. This morning on coming into court the foreman stated that they had not agreed and were not likely to agree. His Honor then discharged them, and the prisoner was remanded on another charge.

ALLEGED MURDER.

Combo and Johnny Gibson, aboriginals, were indicted for having on September 26, 1885, near Ghiny Ghiny, Manning River, murdered one Henry Kitz.

Mr. A. P. Canaway was assigned for the defence of Combo, and Mr. Harris for Johnny Gibson, the Crown Solicitor instructing them.

Andrew Guyler, a selector, Thomas G. Eames, post and telegraph master at Croki, Constable Patrick Hogan, Police-sergeant Usher, and Dr. H. J. B. Groves were the witnesses for the Crown. It appears from the evidence that on the night of the murder Kitz and two other Europeans named Guyler and Eames were at the Kingston Hotel, kept by Mrs. Longworth, and had several drinks. Eames and Guyler stated they had four drinks at the hotel, but the landlady stated that Eames and Guyler went to the hotel between 9 and 10 o'clock, and had one small bottle of beer each and about four small nobblers of spirits, one drinking whisky, the other brandy; and Kitz, who also was at the hotel with them, had five moderate drinks of whisky. The three men left the hotel in company about a quarter to 11 o'clock at night, having with them a bottle of whisky. On leaving the hotel the two prisoners were standing on the verandah. When the white men had got about 150 yards from the hotel they observed that the prisoners were following them. The two blackfellows overtook them and asked for grog, which was refused. The prisoners then walked about 20 yards ahead in the direction in which the white men were going and waited. The prisoner Gibson went to the fence at the side of the road, and Combo picked up a stick near the fence, and called out to Johnny Gibson to come and get the grog, at the same time coming back into the road. The three white men then commenced running along the road, looking for sticks with which to defend themselves. Eames, turning round, saw Kitz taking off his coat, and Combo close behind him. Kitz then turned round towards Combo and put out his hands, when Combo struck him on the head with a stick which appeared to be longer than the one produced. (The stick produced was about two feet long, evidently a piece of a fence rail.) The prisoner Gibson at the time was close behind Combo. Eames took his coat off, and ran towards Kitz, but before reaching the spot Combo struck Kitz a second time with the stick as he lay on the road, saying, as he struck the blow, "You ——, I'll kill you." When Eames reached him, Combo made a blow at him, and Eames turned and ran, followed by the two prisoners. The prisoners shortly afterwards separated, Combo pursuing Eames and Gibson following Guyler. After running about 30 yards Eames heard Guyler cry out "Tom," and turning round at the call was knocked down by a blow across the chest dealt by Combo with a stick. He lay where he fell, and heard nothing more till he heard the prisoners talking at the place where the deceased was lying. When he thought the natives had gone he called out, and getting up went through the fence, when he saw the prisoners about 40 yards off, and one of them called out, "There goes another ——," and they gave him chase. As they came through the fence he struck at them with a rail, but the rail slipping from his hand, he turned and ran, followed by them until he got near a house, and a dog came out. He then gave information of the murder, and on going back to where Kits had been murdered, the body was found to have been moved off the road. It was lying on its back with two coats under the head and one thrown over it. Constable Hogan stated that there was only one coat under the head and two over the body. Constable Hogan and Police-sergeant Usher made a smart capture of the prisoners about 5 o'clock in the morning, surprising them in the blacks' camp. Constable Hogan arrested Gibson, and both prisoners were taken to the place where the murder had been committed, and, pointing to the blood in the road, Hogan said, "That is the blood of the man you are charged with killing." Combo said, "I'm sorry for it." The other prisoner said nothing. He next showed the prisoners the body, which had been removed to the hotel, and the sergeant said to the prisoners, "That is the body of the man you are charged with killing." Combo said, "I know nothing about that man," but the prisoner Gibson made no reply. On the way to the lockup Gibson asked for a drink of whisky, and said that he had bought the bottle produced (about two-thirds full) at the public-house, and paid for it. The prisoner Gibson then said, "The white —— struck me in the legs, and that was the cause of the row." The constable replied, "You have no mark there." Gibson replied, "It don't matter, they caused the row." Gibson was wearing a coat, trousers, and shirt, the sleeve of the shirt having what were thought to be blood-stains on it, but Gibson said it was a paddymelon's blood. Sergeant Usher deposed to the arrest of the prisoner Gibson. In the absence of Combo the prisoner Gibson said, "You have arrested me for nothing." He also stated that he and Combo had pulled the body off the road, out of the blood, and put one coat under the head and the others over him. He said, "I was sorry when I seen him dead, and I cried; they called us black ——, and one of them kicked me in the shins, and that was the cause of the row." The sergeant stated that he had known Gibson for the last 14 years, and did not think he had been in any trouble before. When arrested he was not drunk, but was a little under the influence of drink. The blacks had means of getting drink. Dr. Groves gave evidence as to the cause of death, which resulted from a fracture of the skull. Two witnesses were called to testify to the good character of the prisoner Gibson, one of them stating that when sober he was a hard-working, quiet man. This witness stated, further, that when drunk the blacks were perfectly mad, and quite unaccountable for their actions.

The counsel for the defence then addressed the jury, and his Honor summed up.

The jury, after an absence of a little over an hour, returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter against both prisoners, and they were remanded for sentence.

UNNATURAL OFFENCE.

Timothy Scanlan was indicted for having been guilty of an unnatural offence at Port Macquarie on September 17, 1885.

Mr. Edmunds, instructed by Mr. W. J. West, appeared for the defence.

The jury found the prisoner guilty of the attempt.

Mr. Edmunds handed to his Honor a number of testimonials as to the prisoner's good character.

His Honor sentenced the prisoner to one year's imprisonment with hard labour in Darlinghurst Gaol.

POLICE.

The charge section of the Central Police Court business was dealt with yesterday by Mr. Abbott, S.M. William Wyke, who had been arrested, on warrant, by Detective Clough, was remanded to Brisbane to answer a charge of having obtained moneys by means of false pretences. Fanny Hogan, 63, was sent to gaol for three months, with hard labour, for having no lawful visible means of support. Edward Carter, 22, a dealer, for having incited a prisoner to resist arrest by Constable West, was fined £3, with the option of two months' imprisonment. He was similarly punished for having made use of indecent language. Joseph Kirkwood, 34, a seaman, was committed for trial at the ensuing court of Quarter Sessions upon a charge of having stolen a brooch and a knife, value 7s. 6d., the property of one Charles Bayliss. The same prisoner was fined £10, in default four months' imprisonment, for having maliciously damaged a quantity of chinaware, a looking-glass, &c., belonging to the prosecutor Bayliss. It was shown in evidence that Kirkwood had seized a chair in the prosecutor's residence, and that with it he had deliberately smashed everything that he could come across. Harry Thompson, a cabman, was fined £5, or two months' hard labour, for having carelessly driven his horse and vehicle, whereby a boy named James Mindham had been run over and injured on the 9th instant, opposite the Protestant Hall. The accused pleaded that his horse had shied, owing to the noise of a drum. William A. M'Donald, a warder at the Darlinghurst Gaol, however, gave evidence to the effect that Thompson had at the time a full control of his horse; but that he made no apparent effort to slacken his speed, which was at the rate of about six miles per hour. Mary Jane Higgins, 22, was sentenced to a month's hard labour for having stolen a shirt, a shawl, and some other articles, the property of one Bridget Mary Doyle.

Mr. Addison, S.M., disposed of the business in the Charge Court at the Water Police Court yesterday, and Mr. Yates, D.S.M., dealt with the cases in the Summons Court. A number of persons were fined for drunkenness and other minor offences. George Alford, 21, charged with having assaulted a constable whilst in the execution of his duty, was sent to gaol for three months, with hard labour. John Wilson, 40, charged with having a turkey in his possession reasonably supposed to have been stolen, was sent to gaol for 14 days. Ellen Tighe, 68, for having solicited alms in Oxford-street, Paddington, was sent to gaol for two months, with hard labour. Elizabeth Whelan, 26, described as a servant, was fined £5, in default three months' gaol, for having used indecent language in Riley-street; she was also fined for drunkenness. Daniel Green, 27, labourer, for having used indecent language in the bar of the Criterion Hotel, King and Kent streets, was fined 60s; in default, two months' imprisonment. Charles Cheers, 28, labourer, charged with wife desertion, was ordered to pay the sum of 12s. per week for 12 months towards the support of his wife. William White, 39, was sent to gaol for a month for begging alms in the Water Police Court. Julia Williams, 22, for having used indecent language at Chowder Bay, was fined £5; in default three months' imprisonment. John Elliott, 24, seaman, was sent to gaol for three months for having deserted from the s.s. Liguria.

At the St. Leonards Police Court yesterday, before Mr. W. Johnson, S.M., Enos Crowther, of Chatswood, was summoned at the instance of Catherine James, of the same place, for using threatening language towards her on the 10th instant. The case having been proved, defendant was ordered to find bail to keep the peace for six months, himself in £20, with two in £10 each, or one in £20, in default one month's imprisonment, and to pay 27s. 8d., complainant's costs, levy and distress, or seven days' imprisonment. Catherine James, for assaulting Enos Crowther, on 9th instant, at Chatswood, by striking him on the nose with a stick, was fined 20s., with 4s. 10d. costs of court, or 21 days' gaol.

At the Newtown Police Court on Tuesday, before Mr. G. O'Malley Clarke, sen., Joseph Cox was charged with casting nightsoil on Ricketty-street, St. Peters, on the 7th instant. Constable Garwood deposed to having followed defendant on the night in question, when he was driving a night cart on Cook's River-road; defendant turned into Ricketty-street, when he emptied the nightsoil on the road. Witness followed him back to Cook's River, took him into custody, and charged him with the offence. In reply he said he had taken it to Botany. The inspector of nuisances for the Borough of St. Peters, who was with witness at the time, corroborated the constable's evidence. Defendant, who said he did not know who did it, was fined 40s., 21s. complainant's costs, or 14 days. Henry Rose, aged 12, was charged with breaking and entering the house of Ernest Butler and stealing therefrom a gold watch, steel chain, gold chain, and two pocket-knives, valued at £7 10s., the property of Ernest Butler. Constable Skinner stated that at 5.40 p.m. on the 10th instant he arrested prisoner in Maria-street, Newtown, and took him to the station house, and there charged him with the offence. In reply prisoner said he got through the back window and took the things; witness produced all the articles named; he found the watch and chain on prisoner, and a boy named Redfearn gave him the rest. Ernest Butler, a boot clicker, living in Victoria-street, Macdonaldtown, stated that the gold watch, chain, and other articles produced were his property; on the 9th instant he left his house; the doors were securely fastened, but the windows were not fastened; the watch and chain were in a box in witness's bedroom when he left; he did not return till 5.45 p.m.; on his return he found the back door open, and the things all through the house ransacked; he then missed the gold watch and chain and steel chain. The prisoner was committed for trial to the next Quarter Sessions. Bail, one surety in £80. Thomas Alfred Davis, alias Williams, was charged with stealing two horses, value £20, the property of J. R. Thompson, of Marrickville, on the 27th August last. Sergeant Lee deposed that at about 10 a.m. to-day he charged prisoner at the Newtown Police Station with the offence. James Rowley Thompson deposed he is a cab proprietor living at Marrickville; he had seen the horses at the Police Station, one a bay horse, branded JK near shoulder, the other a bay mare, branded A over T near shoulder, which is his (witness') registered brand; on the 27th August last he lost them off the Wardell-road, Marrickville; he next saw them, one at Newcastle, the other at Maitland; he valued them at £20; he did not know prisoner, and never authorised anyone to take the horses or use them. Arthur Tighe deposed that he lives at Newcastle, and is an auctioneer; he had seen the horses in the possession of the police; he first saw them about 27th August last, when prisoner, who gave the name of Williams, brought them to the sale yards at Newcastle for sale; the horses were not sold that day, but were put up about a week after, when witness sold the horse and bought the mare subsequently himself; prisoner received the proceeds of the sales. Detective James M'Hattie stated that he had seen the two horses in charge of the police; he first saw the bay horse at Newcastle in custody of a man named Brown, when he (witness) took it; from information received he took possession of the bay mare at West Maitland on the 10th instant; it was in possession of J. Small the baker, of Maitland; witness brought both horses to Sydney; the mare is branded A over T on the near shoulder; the horse, JK on the near shoulder. Prisoner was committed for trial to the next Quarter Sessions at Darlinghurst on the 7th December. Elizabeth Walker was summoned by Samuel Smith for rescuing a cow, seized for the purpose of being impounded. Complainant was driving the cow to the pound when defendant and another person came up and drove the cow away by force. William Davies corroborated complainant's evidence, and defendant was fined 40s., with 4s. 10d., costs, or 14 days in gaol.

NUISANCE AT PADDINGTON.

TWO MEN COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

At the Water Police Court yesterday two men, James Cronan and Thomas Andrews, were charged before Mr. Yates, D.S.M., with having, on the 5th November, deposited offensive matter, to wit, nightsoil, on a public reserve at Paddington, from which smells issued to such an extent that the air became impregnated, corrupted, and rendered offensive, uncomfortable and unwholesome, to the great damage and common nuisance of persons residing in the locality.

Mr. Coonan appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Pigott for the defence.

Jean Baptiste Bassetti, licensed victualler, carrying on business at the corner of Sutherland and Elizabeth streets, Paddington, deposed that there was a reserve about 500 yards from his place; on the night of the 5th instant, soon after he closed his place, he saw lights on the reserve and heard carts there; he went across the way, between his place and where the carts were and saw five or six men, two of whom deposited nightsoil on the reserve; the smell was unbearable; the nightsoil was deposited on the side of a hill in a trench about three feet deep; witness thought the cart was tilted, but he had to get away, the smell was so offensive; it was a nuisance; the stuff was plainly visible on the grass below it, having percolated through the sand into which it was deposited; nothing had been done to abate the nuisance.

John Aitken, stonemason, residing at Hargraves-street, Paddington, deposed that he remembered the night of the 5th instant; he saw the defendant Cronan let the nightsoil run over a path or roadway some 20 yards down a declivity; the smell was unbearable, and witness could detect the smell at the police station, where he went, as the men refused to give him their names; Senior-Constable Blackburn returned to the place with him, and the men then gave their names as Andrews and Cronan; witness was a ratepayer, and as such complained of the nuisance. To Mr. Pigott: They carted it along the public road, and witness saw them deposit it on the reserve, in a road or trench cut in the reserve.

Senior-Constable Blackburn deposed that on the night of the 5th instant, in consequence of something he heard he went to the reserve in question, where he saw the defendants with empty carts; they had deposited nightsoil on the reserve, and the smell was very offensive for some distance.

Jeoffery M'Kay deposed that he was employed at a tannery near the reserve in question; on the night of the 5th instant he saw some nightsoil deposited on the reserve; it was just thrown into the trench, and a few shovels of sand were thrown on it; the smell was very offensive. To Mr. Pigott: There was no bad smell from the tannery.

Mr. Coonan: The smell from a tannery, according to the opinions of medical gentlemen, would be healthy.

Thomas M'Kay, tanner, gave corroborative evidence, and added that the smell from the nightsoil could, at the time, be detected in Hargraves-street, a distance of 400 yards from the reserve. To Mr. Pigott: Witness would not swear that he smelt it on the 6th instant. Henry Bell, Thomas Mackay, and Thomas Nailand, residing in the locality, also gave evidence, after which

John E. Begg, owner of the tannery in question, deposed that his workmen had complained of the nuisance, which was injurious to the neighbourhood; he believed traces of the nightsoil could be seen at the present time.

This concluded the evidence for the prosecution, and the following evidence was given on behalf of the defendants:—

James O'Neill, inspector of nuisances for the borough of Paddington, deposed that for some time past a great number of the waterclosets of the borough had been running over into the back yards of residents; it was a great danger to the public health; he had received many complaints from residents whose closets were overflowing; half a dozen of the residents at a time had frequently been in the Council-chambers complaining during the last six or seven weeks.

Mr. Pigott: Do you know that up to about six or seven weeks ago the Government took this offensive matter in punts out to sea?

Witness: Yes, up to about that time.

Mr. Coonan: The fact of the Government refusing to do this would not justify the nuisance in the present instance.

Mr. Pigott: Do you know that since the Government stopped taking the nightsoil away in punts that the Corporation has had no place to deposit it?

Witness: Yes.

Mr. Pigott: Can you tell me whether at the present time a large number of closets are full and running over into people's back yards?

Witness: There are at this very time a great many.

Mr. Pigott: Could you say whether the running over of those closets would be more dangerous to the public health than the depositing of the nightsoil on the reserve?

Mr. Coonan objected to the question.

Mr. Yates held that the answer to such a question could only be a matter of opinion, and stated that he should not decide the question as to whether the council had the right to authorise the removal of the nightsoil to the reserve in order to prevent the other nuisance.

Mr. Pigott contended that what the council had done was done out of consideration for the public health, and if the defendants were committed the council would stop, and the people would have to put up with the consequences.

Mr. Yates: It is only removing the nuisance from one place to another.

Mr. Pigott: No, it is minimising it.

Mr. Coonan, to witness: Do you know the contractor; and didn't he offer to get a place in which the nightsoil could be deposited for a slight increase on his price?

Witness: The contractor said he was losing money on the present contract, and he asked for an increase; the council had stopped placing the nightsoil on the reserve.

Mr. Pigott contended that as there was evidence that the nuisance complained of was abated there was an end of the case.

Witness: Nightsoil was deposited on the reserve on the 12th instant, but not since, by order of the mayor; there was no smell at the present time.

J. P. M'Guane, mayor of the borough of Paddington, deposed that six weeks ago they received notice (or a circular) to the effect that the Government would cease to convey the nightsoil out to sea in the punts; they had no time to prepare for the emergency; he had been endeavouring ever since to find some place in which the nightsoil could be deposited; there was no place in the borough with the exception of the reserve in question, and they only took that as a temporary measure.

Mr. Yates: Of two evils the lesser was chosen.

Witness: Yes.

Mr. Pigott: This action on the part of the Government has placed other boroughs in the same difficulty. I know one borough now that is applying for an injunction against another borough to restrain them from creating a nuisance.

Mr. Coonan: We know; it's Waverley, but we won't have the filth of any of them.

Witness, continuing his evidence, said he went to the reserve to see how the work was carried out, and he was satisfied that the nature of the soil was not absorbent, and in consequence of the clamour which was set up he said "let the people put up with it," and gave instructions to have it stopped; it was then discontinued.

To Mr. Coonan: He did not tell Alderman Brown that he would have the nightsoil put there in spite of him; it was true that when the matter was brought before the council five aldermen voted against the proposition to put the nightsoil on the reserve, and the rest voted for it, and he gave his casting vote in favour of it; he would do so again to-morrow; the thing was discontinued at present, but if he could not get a place within a week or fortnight he would have to place the nightsoil on the reserve again.

Mr. Pigott: My advice to you is to let it go; we don't want any more prosecutions.

The defendants were then committed for trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions. Bail was allowed.

LICENSING COURT.

A sitting of the Metropolitan Licensing Court was held on Monday at the Central Police Court, before Mr. Mearns, D.S.M. The postponed application for the tranfer of a publican's license in connection with the Sportsman's Arms hotel, George-street West, from William Johnson to Michael D. Spruhan, was granted. The following applications for the transfer of hotel licenses were also granted, viz.:—Michael Casey to John Trewern, Surry Hills Hotel, Gipps-street; Antonio Fontani to Antonio Pugliese (colonial wine license), Goulburn-street; Charley Ivery to Daniel Hogarth, Square and Compass Hotel, George-street; John Harris, to Charles Grant, Glassworks Hotel, Kingston; John Cochrane, to Mary Wishart, Alexandra Hotel, Garden-street. Several additional applications were either withdrawn, or were postponed for a week. The application of W. Robertson, as executor in the estate of the late Marian Briggs, to be allowed a renewal of license for the Salutation Hotel, Botany-road, was granted. A number of music permits, &c., were granted.

BURMAH AND THE BURMESE.

LECTURE BY DR. ROBERTSON.

"Burmah and the Burmese" was the theme of an ably prepared and exceedingly interesting lecture, which was delivered at the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association last evening. The lecturer was Dr. James M. R. Robertson, who resided in Burmah for a period of about 18 months, during which he acted in that land in a representative capacity on behalf of the Indian Government, and the subject was one that should prove peculiarly attractive to all persons interested in the growth of Great Britain. Yet, nevertheless, the audience was a remarkably small one. The lecture itself was brimful of interesting facts, which were presented with conciseness and in well-thought-out language; but the effectiveness of its delivery was seriously interfered with by the multiplicity of noises which were allowed to prevail in various parts of the institution. For a considerable time there was the frequent banging of doors, and these noises were accompanied by those proceeding from the gymnasium immediately over the lecture hall, and due to leaping, tumbling, and other exercises, which, judging from a peculiar, loud, rumbling noise, included the pastime of skating. The proceedings in connection with the lecture were under the presidency of Mr. Ebenezer Vickery, and included an introductory prayer.

Dr. ROBERTSON commenced by giving a graphic description of a voyage from Calcutta to Rangoon, the capital of Burmah, undertaken in the early part of the year 1878. Reference was made to the vastness of the littoral plain which is encountered before reaching Rangoon, and to the fertile delta of the Irawaddy. The lecturer went on to say that this delta is of vast extent, and is intersected by a network of creeks and rivers that serve as highways. Above the tangled jungle, near the entrance to Bassein Creek, a beautifully proportioned white tapering object arrests the attention, surmounted by a mass of gilded fretwork. This is the Bassein Pagoda. Far over the dark jungle to the right the famous Syriam Pagoda towers up, a graceful mass of pure burnished silver, to a height of 200 feet, surmounted by a golden htee, or umbrella, that reflects the sunshine with piercing brilliance. On the horizon, a faint streak of smoke is seen through the dazzling air, then little specks of reflected light, and gradually these merge into the white buildings of Rangoon. Behind the sunlit city is undulating country, apparently densely wooded, and from the highest and most commanding heights a cone of dazzling light streams upward. This is the enormous Golden Pagoda, the famous Shive Dagone, one of the greatest and most remarkable buildings upon earth, and the noblest monument of Buddism to be found in any land. As one gazes upon its marvellous proportions, its colossal size, with its htee towering 25 feet nearer the heavens than the vane of St. Paul's, the conviction is forced upon him that he is in a country and among a people one of the most ancient and civilised, practising a religion the most powerful, abounding in sound morality that has indoctrinated with its tenets one half of the whole inhabitants of the world. Rangoon is a picturesque city. The banks and Government offices are built on a lovely boulevard, which runs parallel with the river, and between the two are tastefully laid out gardens. Behind are the tapering spires of pagodas, and the quaintly carved terraced roofs of zayats or rest houses. Pagodas and zayats occupy the apex of every eminence. The barracks on a distant ridge, and the pure white colonades of public institutions, and bungalows embosomed among palms, add considerably to the natural charm of the situation. Surrounding the public works are clusters of hovels densely populated, built in the midst of gray mud. The environs of Rangoon are exquisitely lovely; beautifully kept roads lead everywhere. A detailed description was next given of the Great Golden Pagoda, which of all shrines is by the Burmese regarded as the most sacred, and is one of the oldest and greatest religious monuments upon earth. A religious festival was next dealt with, and it was mentioned that in the gardens beneath the Great Pagoda the educated mind finds congenial occupation in the contemplation of a very world of beauty—in artificial lakes, cascades, and rustic bridges, in charming flowers, and in an endless variety of luxuriant tropical plants and trees. Burmah, including under this designation the British provinces and the independent kingdom of Burmah, extends along the eastern shore of the Bay of Bengal from the Chittagong division of Lower Bengal to the Isthmus of Kraw. It is bounded on the east by the empire of Siam, and that of Cambodia to 21½ N. lat., and from thence to the northernmost extremity by the Chinese province of Yunan. Its northern limit is unknown, but, apparently, runs up into an angle among the snowy ranges of Eastern Thibet, about 30 N. lat. Thence it stretches westerly, bordering on Upper Assam, Munipuri, and the Lushai Hills to Chittagong. This region is peopled by races who in appearance, origin, in language, and in customs, are entirely distinct from any of the many races of Hindustan. The whole of the extensive seaboard is exclusively British territory, while the once mighty empire of Burmah, that stretched from Dacca to the Gulf of Siam, has now shrunk into an inland State, without a single avenue or outlet for her trade, or for obtaining the food supplies for her people except at the sweet will of Great Britain. Lower Burmah consists of three district provinces—Arracoan, Pegu, and Tenasserim. Tenasserim, the most southerly, is a wild mountainous tract, comprising about half of the total area of the country, and for the most part is peopled by wild tribes of Karens. Arracoan comprises the ricefields and mountain ranges along the eastern shore of the Bay of Bengal, while Pegu virtually comprises the great alluvial valleys of the Siltoung and Irrawaddi rivers. The total area of British Burmah is 94,000 square miles, being a few thousands larger than Britain. Of this area about 40,000 square miles are fit for cultivation, while in 1877 only about 3700, or one-twelfth, were actually ploughed. The two great valleys of the Irrawaddi and Siltoung are similar in character, though the latter is narrower; both unite below Rangoon to form the great littoral plain previously referred to, the fertility of which does not depend upon the uncertain advent of rain, but, like the Nile, on the annual rise of the muddy waters. About 100 miles from the sea the Irrawaddi bifurcates, and these divide and subdivide into innumerable creeks, forming a plexus of muddy rivers that intersect the delta. The main stream is navigable for about 1000 miles by the large flat-bottomed steamers belonging to the Irrawaddi Flotilla Company. It is only at the annual rise that its grandeur is seen. This annual inundation of the country affords one of the most curious phenomena of Burmah. Over a large area boats are then the only means of conveyance. The ricefields are not as in other lands prepared in terraces, carefully levelled for irrigation; but the grass and weeds are raked, pulled out by means of a rude wooden harrow, and the young rice plants, previously raised in nurseries, are inserted in the mud in a foot deep of water. From the limited area of the plains, there is an annual export of rice of upwards of 1,000,000 tons. The whole land, and all that it contains, is in the absolute possession of the Indian Government, who parcel it out on short leases, under for the most part native management. From all sources Burmah yields an annual profit of over £1,000,000. Instead of this money being laid out in extending roads and railways, or otherwise opening up the country, it is all absorbed into the ever-needful Indian Treasury. There are three seasons in Burmah—the rainy season, extending from May till October, a hot and steamy period; the cold season, from October till the end of January, when the days are hot and evenings bearable; and the hot season, from February till May. The rainfall of the coast districts is heavy, averaging 200 inches. At Thayet Myo (Mango City), on the frontier of Upper Burmah, it is only about 50 inches, and is considerably less at Mandalay, in Upper Burmah. The average temperature of Lower Burmah is about 95°, but this is considerably exceeded in Upper Burmah, where one is obliged to enjoy life in a temperature of 110° to 120°. The provinces of Pegu and Arracean practically contain no minerals of value. Tenasserim abounds in tin, copper, and argentiferous galena; but the wild nature of the country, and the expense of labour, render them worthless. Any tin that is exported is worked entirely by Chinese. Upper Burmah, although never explored by Europeans, is entitled to the credit of being mineralogically rich. The king has for ages derived very large revenues from his wonderful earth oil wells. Sulphur mines, saltpetre lakes, his amber, jade, silver, copper, lead, and above all his ruby and sapphire mines. The wealth of Upper Burmah is due to its teak forests—cutch, tealseed, wheat, and cotton exports, while that of British Burmah depends upon the fertility of the soil, and the increase of the population due to peaceful and remunerative pursuits. In such a country population is a proof of real and potential wealth, where the resources are yet undeveloped, or unused, and where labour can easily get at the raw material. It is sufficiently near the truth to say that the Burman peninsula is peopled by four great races of men. 1. The Karens, wild and savage tribes, who occupy the remote mountainous regions to the North and East. 3000 years before Christ these rude races occupied the confines of China, and were driven from thence by the arrival of the hordes that occupied and settled China. 2. The Mons or Tatain race, who occupy the plains of Pigu, and are supposed to represent some of the Dravidian races, who long ago held possession of the Ganges valley. 3. The Burmese, who have a close family resemblance to the Bhutans and Nepaulese of India, and who in turn immigrate from Thibet. 4. The Shans, who came from China in 1272, when the Chinese armies overran Burmah. The Shans occupy the mountainous "No man's land," surrounding and encircling the others. Burmah is sparsely, and for the world's wants is under-populated. It is computed that the total of these races does not exceed 3,000,000, and yet, notwithstanding this small population, Burmah has always stood forth before the world as one of the great empires of the East. The Burmese confine themselves to the cultivation of the soil. They shrink from town life, with its cares and sorrows, and avoid arduous steady work. They are too proud and too lazy to work as coolies—and they have no ambition to obtain manhood suffrage. Coolie labour is drawn from India, attracted by the preposterously high wages, which under-population and overdone competition among the owners of rice mills have produced. The Burmese races are not of a fawning disposition; yet they frankly acknowledge the superiority of the European, without showing them any marked respect. They are a plump, well made, and fairly tall race, possessing pleasant countenances. The skin is of a dark copper colour; in women often obscured by being dusted over with sandalwood powder. They are a well-fed race, and are of a remarkably cheerful temperament. Singularly alive to the ridiculous, grief sits lightly upon them, and they are not inspired with patriotism. They love their homes and villages, and are fondly attached to their wives and families. To them discipline and continued concentrated effort is irksome. As a nation they possess an unconquerable aversion for work. As a race they are remarkably cleanly in their habits, and are always respectful and polite. The dress, especially of the women, is exceedingly becoming; fond of colours, they have the art of blending these, so as to harmonise and create pleasant feelings. They are always dressed with admirable good taste, and always use flowers to complete the elegance of their attire. By nature a Burman is hospitable, and remarkably attentive to the wants of wayfarers or strangers. Attention having been directed to some of the other characteristics of the Burmese, it was pointed out that there was among them no aristocratic class. They were governed by a king who was a despot, and who was reverenced by the whole nation. Otherwise the nation was of equal rank and status. It was a beaurocracy. Outside of royalty every Burman was socially equal. There was no distinction between working-men, middle class, or gentry. Every man met every other precisely as an equal. Various customs of the Burmese as well as their religion were next described, and these were succeeded by a description of Prome, the ancient capital. Reference was also made to Minlah and to Magwaay, and some information was then supplied with respect to the earth oil wells, from which the king derived an annual revenue of upwards of £80,000. The sacred city of Paghan, which was said to be in many respects the most remarkable place in the world, was next dealt with; and then came a description of the Phoongies or Buddist monks. Dr. Robertson concluded his lecture, the delivery of which was frequently interrupted by applause, with the following observations:—While I feel that Burmah, and, for that matter, India—excluding the wild races of men, who, so far as is known, possess no religion—presents no very hopeful field for the evangelising work of Christian missionaries, I feel sure that it is yet in the power of these good men to achieve the realisation of their great aim in life—not by converting Buddhists, but by example and precept in ministering to the deplorable spiritual and moral infirmities of their fellow countrymen in India. A very high standard of morality is of first importance, demanded alike by the religion that we profess, and the civilisation that we claim. One's finer sensibilities are shocked at the deplorable life that too many of our countrymen lead in these climes. Many of those whose voices are raised highest in their righteous condemnation of Thebaw, are those whose inner life is irradiated by none of the virtues, but deformed by all the vices ascribed to that potentate. A religious crusade, earnestly and ably undertaken and conducted, could not fail to react beneficially on our prestige as a nation, and thereafter on the thoughts and customs, and, perhaps, in process of time, on the religious views of our Eastern subjects. For seven years or more many efforts have been made to trump up some excuse for overshadowing Upper Burmah with the force of our arms. It is true Thebaw does not rule as we might rule. His thoughts are not as our thoughts, or his ways as our ways. It is likewise true that his Ministers, knowing well the people with whom they had to deal, extinguished the career of many princes and princesses to prevent these illustrious personages from carrying out similar designs on the reigning monarch. It is difficult for any one of us to judge what would be the proper course to pursue in the case of a young king who has 128 brothers and sisters, each plotting his destruction. Thebaw may not be a king after our own heart; but he is, or was, the king of a nation's choice. His subjects may not have the freedom to pursue commercial pursuits such as their friends in British territory possess; but they do, or did, not grumble, nor do they show any desire to espouse the foreign yoke of Britain. Thebaw, I have no doubt, has many vices, some of which, as they are those of white men, may have been imbibed from his English tutors. They are not greater than the vices of those who most decry them. I cannot see any reason for a grudge against a king who has been often unjustly maligned by those whom he has baffled and defeated in diplomacy and in mother wit—with whom we have no business, and who, by religion and character, is as directly averse to war or cause a rupture with Britain as our military men are anxious to force one upon him. Meantime we exclude from view that though on the whole our rule is an upright and generous rule in India, yet it is neither faultless nor unassailable. We permit practices to exist as offensive and indirectly as oppressive as any to be found within the realms of Thebaw or the Sultan of the Turks. The subjects of Thebaw; while I was in Mandalay at his accession to the throne, were cognisant of the advantages of life under British rule, but they did not know or trust us sufficiently to solicit fusion. They have but too good cause to remember how in the past we forced war upon them, and despoiled them of their fairest and most valuable possessions, and this too on pretexts flimsy, and perhaps more imaginary than real. They fear the result of our perpetually aggressive policy. They dread the effect of our more than questionable habits and customs, and our peculiar morality upon their children and on their religion. They cling to their own easy-going conditions and modes of life. They shrink from the effects of the enormous pace at which we live. They, in consequence, evince no desire to give up their independence and rush into the gentle loving outstretched arms of the Kaiser-i-Hind. It is not by creating terrorism, or by threats of punishment for administering their own affairs after their own fashion—that we, as a nation, can become respected, or our names become popular in Mandalay. A third war forced upon Burmah will assuredly unhinge a rapidly-increasing trade, all of which is enjoyed by Britain, and will give us the inestimable boon of an exasperated nation and raise among them a storm of religious rancour and hatred that may be difficult to subdue. It would, however, be a popular war among our military officers; who, to judge by recent events, would be certain to obtain from an indulgent Queen empty titles without renown; but our soldiers may perish without glory and our treasure be lavishly spent without any solid or compensating advantage. It is likely to add one word that rapidly accumulating record of inglorious wars or victories, that to my mind are far more disastrous than defeats, and is certain to open up avenues to unknown difficulties and incalculable responsibilities by bringing us into immediate contact with China, Siam, and the turbulent nations of Central Asia. The effect of our increasing trade is no doubt rapidly breaking down many antipathies, and is fast dissipating the natural conservatism of the race. It is impossible to believe that a great country and a shrewd docile people, invested as they are by a section of their kindred, who, in a worldly point of view, have greatly prospered under a rule which, though frequently misapplied, has justice and freedom as its watchword, and where industry is unfettered, should elect to be entangled for ever in a state of commercial bondage without at some time making a voluntary effort to shake off the yoke. When that effort is made, depend upon it, if, in the meantime, it is not precipitated by the force of arms, that the effort will take the form of absorption into Britain. When the distraction arising from the fetish worship of annexation shall have passed away, we may, with dismay, recognise, as we have never done before, the terrible, weighty, and precious nature of the stewardship, and the prodigious responsibility involved in the enlightened government of well nigh 300,000,000 Indian subjects, and of boundless territory. A prolonged period of tranquility is necessary, not only to inaugurate and carry out reforms that the present condition of India demands, but also to undo the baneful evils that (among such people) are propagated during the turmoil and progress of demoralising wars. Behind us is a picture, resplendent with many triumphs, yet darkened by many wasted opportunities, and of misspent time. Before us, let us hope to see the many races of India, attracted by the matchless magnificence of a civilisation that has as an object the social and intellectual elevation of all mankind. Much of our energy as a race must, in future, be directed to ameliorate and improve the condition and happiness of these teeming millions; to stimulate the enterprise of the races to pursuits that will elevate and refine; to cultivate among them precise and accurate habits of thought, and the performance of honest and useful work; directing their attention to industries suited to their condition and surroundings. By some such means will the pulses of these intelligent millions throb with the exultation and pleasurable excitement of pursuits calculated to conquer the forces of nature and unravel the secrets of eternal law. That to my mind would be a worthy and a glorious strife—a battle that admits of no defeat, where the spoils of victory and of conquest are shared by the whole human race. In the loyal fealty of a prosperous and a contented people we may yet discover our most priceless possession and the most "scientific of all our frontiers," the most enduring and impregnable of our strongholds.

On the motion of Mr. CHARLES MOORE (Botanic Gardens), seconded by Mr. W. A. HUTCHINSON, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Dr. Robertson for his very able and highly interesting lecture.

THE BOOTMAKERS' UNION.

A special meeting of the Amalgamated Operative Boot Trade Union was held last night in Dr. Fullerton's schoolroom, Haymarket. About 60 members attended, the chair being occupied by Mr. H. Lander, the president. Among the correspondence was a letter from the secretary of the South Australian Bootmakers' Union, dated 13th November, 1885, intimating that the trade there was on the eve of a general strike; they had submitted their revised statement, and given the employers notice of their intention of taking it as the standard of prices on and after the 16th instant. A strike would probably take place on the following Monday, and the writer would telegraph at once, warning bootmakers not to come over there. It was thought possible that the matter might be settled without difficulty, but the prospect looked gloomy. In connection with this letter, a telegram was received from Adelaide, as promised, stating that a general strike had been declared there, and instructing the local secretary to advertise, so as to prevent any engagements being made. The meeting then proceeded to nominate office-bearers for the ensuing half-year; the election to take place next Tuesday night.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Lilly Curry, a little girl, aged three years, was, on the 3rd instant, admitted to the Prince Alfred Hospital, suffering from a number of bruises and contusions, besides other injuries of a severe nature, which she received through falling from a balcony at her parents' residence, No. 12, Darlington-road, Darlington. Little hope was expressed for her recovery from the time of her entry, and after lingering on in considerable suffering she died at an early hour yesterday. The Acting Coroner will be informed of the occurrence, and an inquest will probably be held.

In Austria 3000 women are employed in the railroad service, getting from £3 to £6 a-month.

THE KEROSENE TRADE OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

The United States Consul in Sydney (Mr. Griffin) has forwarded to his Government the following interesting report on the kerosene trade of this colony:—

"The quantity of kerosene imported into New South Wales during 1884 was larger than that of any other year in the history of the colony, and consisted of 676,704 gallons. The value was not so great as that of 1882 owing to the decline in price, but it reached the sum of 191,400 dollars. The quantity imported in 1883 was 592,207 gallons, valued at 168,625 dollars. The imports for 1882 were 629,993 gallons, and the value 197,580 dollars. The imports of kerosene into the colony of Victoria are much larger than those of New South Wales, as the former colony does not produce any oil. The value of the imports of kerosene into Victoria for 1884 was 362,615 dollars, against 269,935 dollars for 1883. The kerosene imports for 1885 into Victoria will, however, be much larger than those of any previous year, as the Customs returns from the 1st of January to 30th of June, 1885, show an importation of 1,096,033 gallons, valued at 365,680 dollars, being greater than the value of the whole exports for 1884. A duty of 6d. (12 cents) per gallon is charged on the imports of kerosene into both colonies.

"The following table shows the quantity and value of kerosene imported into New South Wales for each year, from 1875 to 1884 inclusive:—

Year.	Quantity.	Value.
	Gallons.	Dollars.
1875	181,027	68,900
1876	355,860	148,080
1877	464,944	228,580
1878	673,528	239,815
1879	482,669	175,205
1880	485,226	160,470
1881	498,527	153,685
1882	629,993	197,580
1883	592,207	168,625
1884	676,704	191,200

"All these imports were of American manufacture, and reached here either direct or by way of some of the other colonial ports. The imports of kerosene for 1885 will probably be much larger than those of 1884, as the Customs returns for the first six months of the year show an importation of 687,611 gallons, valued at 156,240 dollars.

"Restrictions on Sale and Storage of Kerosene.—The Sydney importers of American kerosene complain very bitterly against the law in New South Wales for regulating the sale of kerosene. They say that it places them at a great disadvantage in competing for the trade with the local manufacturers, as the law practically forbids the imported article from being stored anywhere except in a licensed kerosene bond. The charges incurred thereon together with the Customs duty of 6d. (12 cents.) per gallon operates seriously against the American product. The duty is equal to about 100 per cent. ad valorem, as the price of American kerosene free on board a vessel at Boston or New York is about 5¼d. (10½ cents. per gallon). The Kerosene Act which was passed in 1871 is still in force, and provides that no one shall keep more than 200 gallons of kerosene on his premises. The section referring to the subject is as follows:—'After the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, no person shall have or keep in any house, store-house, warehouse, shop, cellar, yard, wharf, or any other building or place occupied by the same person or persons within the boundaries of any town or municipality, more than two hundred gallons of kerosene at any one time, unless such house, storehouse, warehouse, shop, cellar, yard, wharf, or any other building be situate more than fifty yards from a dwelling-house, or from any building or place belonging to any other person in which goods are stored. And any person acting in contravention of this section shall forfeit all the kerosene so kept in excess of the said quantity, together with the cases or tins containing the same, and be liable to a penalty not exceeding 2s. for every gallon of kerosene so kept in excess, provided that nothing in this clause shall prevent the storage of kerosene in any quantity on the premises where it is manufactured.' The local companies are enabled to deliver kerosene from their works without incurring the heavy charges for storage.

"The Test of Kerosene.—The standard tests of New South Wales and indeed of all the Australasian colonies are flash tests instead of fire tests. The commercial meaning of the word test is the fire test, which is usually from 12° to 15° higher than the flashing point. For instance, oil at 130° fire test is equal to 115° flash test. I give below the directions for applying the flashing test of kerosene adopted by the New South Wales Government:—Directions for applying the Flashing Test to Samples of Kerosene Oil: The instrument to be employed must be similar in construction to that adopted by the Metropolitan Board of Works for London for similar purposes and registered W. C. Miles, 36, Great Pearl-street, London, and commonly called the Metropolitan Petroleum Oil-tester, and the test shall be conducted in a closed room, free from current of air. 16oz. by measure of water shall be placed in the water-bath of a temperature not less than 70° of Fahrenheit's thermometer. The oil vessel containing 2oz. by measure of the oil to be tested shall then be placed in the water-bath, and the temperature raised by the means provided in the apparatus. A small jet of flame shall be brought to the prescribed distance from the surface of the oil, as indicated by a wire across the mouth of the oil vessel as frequently as may be deemed necessary by the operator but not less frequently than once for every five degrees of heat as shown by the thermometer until a temperature of 90 degrees is reached, and then once for every two degrees until a temperature of 100 degrees is reached, and then the test shall be applied for every degree until the flashing point is reached; that is to say, the temperature at which a flame or flicker of flame first passes from the testing jet to the oil. The time occupied in performing the test shall in no case exceed 15 minutes, reckoning from the time the oil vessel containing the oil is placed in the water bath. The bulb of the thermometer shall be immersed half an inch in the oil, and the temperature or flashing point to be adopted shall be not less than 110 degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer.

"Price of Native and Imported Kerosene.—The Government has done what it could to encourage the manufacture of kerosene in the colony, by using the native product whenever practicable in the Government buildings and public works. It is employed almost exclusively upon all roads wherever repairs are necessary. Considerable quantities of it are also purchased by the Queensland Government. The latter Government, I understand, is much pleased with the Australian Comet brand, a good burning oil, which sells here for 1s. 5d. (34 cents.) per gallon. The native oil is not always used pure. On account of its low price, retail dealers not infrequently buy it to mix with the imported article. The average price of American kerosene is about 1s. 6d. (36 cents.) per gallon on board, or 2s. (48 cents.) per gallon duty paid. No one is allowed to sell kerosene that gives off an inflammable vapour at a less temperature than 100° Fahrenheit. There is a popular brand of Australian oil that bears the test of 200°. It has the same yellowish colour as the low test oils. The American high test oils, on the contrary, are always made 'water white.' The following are the prices of some of the favourite brands of American kerosene in bond in Sydney:—Diamond brand, test 125°, 1s. 4½d. (32 cents) per gallon; Paragon brand, 120°, 1s. 3d. (30 cents) per gallon; Devoe's brand, 120° to 130°, 1s. 4½d. (32 cents) per gallon; Aurora brand, 120°, 1s. 4d. (31 cents) per gallon; Devoe's Nonpareil brand, 150°, 1s. 9d. (42 cents) per gallon; Evening Star brand 150°, and Light of the Age brand 150°, 1s. 9d. to 1s. 10½d. (42 to 45 cents) per gallon.

"Kerosene Shale.—New South Wales has for many years carried on a profitable industry in the manufacture of petroleum and paraffine out of her shale product, which exists in considerable quantities in various parts of the colony. The output of the shale product, however, declined from 49,253 tons in 1883 to 31,618 tons in 1884. Those interested in the industry state that the depression in the market which occasioned the decline was of a temporary character, and that the industry is rallying again. They also state that the difficulty of obtaining the mineral at the mines is not so great as formerly, and that the cost of manufacturing it into oil has also been materially lessened. The subjoined table shows the quantity and value of shale produced in the colony of New South Wales for each year from 1865 to 1884 inclusive:—

Year.	Quantity.	Value.
	Tons.	Dollars.
1865	570	11,750

1883	49,250	454,305
1884	31,618	360,380

"Export of Shale.—The export of shale from New South Wales declined from 22,657 tons, valued at 236,725 dollars, in 1883, to 12,804 tons, valued at 119,870 dollars, in 1884. The heaviest export occurred during 1882, when it was 35,975 tons, valued at 398,575 dollars. The following table shows the quantity and the value of the export of kerosene shale from the colony of New South Wales for each year since 1875:—

Year.	Quantity	Value.
	Tons.	Dollars.
1875	3,527	51,015
1876	6,154	106,570
1877	4,667	70,815

1880	10,880	120,945
1881	17,846	191,155
1882	35,975	398,573
1883	22,657	230,925
1884	12,804	119,870

"It has been predicted for many years that the oil-bearing districts of the United States would soon become exhausted, and that the bulk of the world's supply must be looked for in Russia and Australia. Chance, however, plays such a prominent part in the production of petroleum that we can do little more than prophesy in regard to it. Although we may not reasonably hope for such unlooked-for development as was shown by some of the wells of Pennsylvania and New York in 1882, nothing as yet has occurred to indicate that the United States will not continue for many years to furnish the great bulk of the world's supply of kerosene. The production of crude petroleum in the United States for 1884 was 24,089,758 barrels, equal to 1,011,769,836 gallons, valued at 20,496,294 dollars. It was 689,529 barrels greater than that of 1883; but the total value, however, was 5,263,958 dollars less, as the price of petroleum declined during 1884 from 1·10 dollars to 85 cents per barrel.

"The kerosene shale of New South Wales covers a vast area. It is found at Lake Macquarie, and Greta in Cumberland county; at Mount Magallon, and Mount York, in Cook county; at Joadja Creek, Berrima, Mount Kembla, Cambewarra Ranges, Broughton Creek, and Toonali River, Burragorang, in Camden county; and at Blackheath, the Vale of Hartley, and other places, in the Blue Mountains. The mineral was known to exist in New South Wales as early as 1827. In that year, Dr. P. Cunningham, of the Royal British Navy, described a species of coal found at Bathurst, resembling Scotch cannel coal, 'being nearly as light, and breaking with a similar fracture.'

"The Rev. W. B. Clarke, in a very able and scholarly report, directed the attention of the New South Wales Legislative Council to this mineral in the year 1849. In the report he said that he had examined the mineral in 1841, and was then greatly impressed with its properties. Count Stirzelecki, in a work entitled 'Physical Description of New South Wales,' published in 1845, gives a brief description of the mineral. The Count at first thought it belonged to the Newcastle basin; but that theory was invalidated, on the ground that the seams overlapped measures of pure bitumen, a characteristic not found with the Newcastle coals. Mr. Clarke published some account of the discovery of the mineral in a catalogue for the International Exhibition. He stated that its specific gravity was 1·204, and that it would produce rock oil, and that it was found in masses from 6 to 12 inches in thickness. Professor Liversidge, of the Sydney University, one of the highest authorities on minerals in Australasia, does not think that the name 'kerosene shale' is a proper one for the New South Wales mineral, for the reason that the substance does not possess the properties of a shale; that is, it has not the characteristic lamellar or platy structure, but the reverse, being very compact, and breaking with large, smooth conchoidal surfaces, with equal readiness in every direction, and without any tendency to follow the planes of stratification. Professor Liversidge states that, when the mineral is in large blocks, there are occasional evidences of stratification, but even then they are mainly rendered visible by the presence of layers or films of earthy matter. The mineral does not differ very widely from cannel coal and torbanite. Like cannel coal, it usually occurs with ordinary coal in the form of lenticular deposits, and when of good quality it burns readily, without melting, and emits a luminous, smoky flame. In colour it varies from a brownish black with greenish shade to full black.

"The Vale of Hartley Mine.—The Vale of Hartley mine is situated in one of the most picturesque and romantic parts of the colony, about 83 miles north-west of Sydney, in the centre of the Blue Mountains, at an altitude of 3118 feet above the level of the sea. The railway up the mountains has aided greatly in the establishment of a number of important industries there. The iron works at Eskbank are carried on successfully, and the coal deposits are inexhaustible. The kerosene shale found there is said to be the richest in the world. Considerable quantities of it are used in the large cities of the colonies for the purpose of enriching gas. It is also exported for the same purpose to Holland, Java, and the States on the Pacific slope of the United States. Only the better quality of the mineral is exported, the scraps and inferior portions being retained for the extraction of oil. The seams are from 1 foot to 2½ feet in thickness. It is much more difficult to mine than coal, and is usually got out with iron picks and pointed rods. It does not run down readily into blocks, but has to be separated piece by piece, and splintered off into sharp thin pieces. It is easily lighted with a match, and burns with a steady flame like a candle, and emits a strong odour of kerosene. The company working the mine has a capital of £100,000 (486,000 dollars) in £1 (4·86 dollars) shares. Besides their operations at the mine they have extensive oil works at Waterloo, where they manufacture kerosene lubricants, parafine, &c. Their head office is at 102, Clarence-street, Sydney.

"The Joadja Creek Mine.—This valuable mine is situated about 95 miles from Sydney, and 15 miles from Mittagong. The property, consisting of 1944 acres, belongs to the Australian Kerosene Oil and Mineral Company. The plant was erected at considerable cost and is one of the best in the colony, the machinery being of the most improved patterns. The stationary engine for the purpose of winding the mineral out of the valley is an object of especial interest, and much can be said in favour of the company's method of separting the shale through their improved coal cutters run by hydraulic pressure. The valley in which the mine is situated is one of the most beautiful in the world, but the approaches to it are very difficult. The shale seams are believed to be the same as those worked in the Hartley district. Professor Liversidge states that the shale contains impressions of glossopteris and of the vertebraria. The company working the mine has given much satisfaction to the shareholders. They claim that their product is the best hitherto supplied in the colony, and that it is fully 25 per cent. richer than the best samples of Scotch Boghead mineral. They furnish shale to the gasworks in this city from £2 10s. (12·16 dollars) to £2 12s (12·64 dollars) per ton. The method of using it is to break it into small bits and mix from 3 to 6 per cent. of it with the ordinary charge of coal, according to the quality of the gas required. The manager of the mine states that it is not desirable to retort the shale by the usual process, from the fact that its extreme richness causes the heat to fall off and a large proportion of the volatile matter to recondense in the hydraulic main. When mixed with ordinary coking coal 3 per cent. will yield gas of 18 candle gas, and 6 per cent. with the same coal 22 candle gas. The use of the shale prevents the deposits of naphthaline, a substance very injurious to the manufacture of gas. Professor Liversidge examined two specimens of shale from the Joadja mine, which upon analysis yielded the following:—

No. 1.

Hydroscopic moisture	·44
Volatile hydrocarbon	83·87
Fixed carbon	8·03
Ash grey	7·17
Sulphur	·55
	100·00

No. 2.

Hydroscopic moisture	·04
Volatile hydrocarbon	82·13
Fixed carbon	7·16
Ash grey	10·34
Sulphur	·33
	100·00

"Another specimen examined by Mr. Charles Watt, Government Analyst, gave the following:—

Volatile matter	85·2
Fixed carbon	8·2
Ash	6·6

"William A. Dixon, F.C.S., F.I.C. of the Chemical Laboratory, School of Arts, at Sydney, obtained a number of specimens of this mineral, and found it much lighter than the Boghead shale of Scotland, the specific gravity being 1·098 against 1·20. The yield of hydrocarbon, he said, was much greater than that obtained from picked specimens of Boghead, whilst the ash was only half as great. A sample yielded the following:—

Moisture	0·41
Volatile hydrocarbon	77·07
Fixed carbon	12·13
Ash	10·27
Sulphur	·12
	100·00
Coke	22·30

"Mr. Dixon found the coke to be bright and lustrous in colour, and the ash white and aluminous. He said that on account of the very large proportion of volatile hydrocarbon in the mineral, the yield of gas or oil from it ought to be very great. He said further that its low specific gravity, together with the small quantity of sulphur it contained, warranted the conclusion that the product would be easy of purification and of high illuminating power. The shale has been used for several years with much satisfaction at the North Shore Gas-works. The managing proprietor there stated that its percentage of ash was unusually low. In London the mineral attracted much attention, and the question arose as to whether it was a Boghead coal or a mineral shale, and whether or not it should be subject to the city dues on coal. It was, however, determined to be coal, on the authority of Charles Heisch, F.C.S., and Professor Ramsay, director of the Geological Surveys of Great Britain. A similar discussion took place a number of years ago in the celebrated case of E. W. Binney against the Clydesdale Chemical Works, for the 'infringement of patent for the manufacture of paraffine from bituminous coal.' The case was tried at Edinburgh before the Lord President, and a jury, but the result showed a wide difference of opinion in regard to the character of the mineral. Professor Graham and Dr. Penny pronounced it coal. Hugh Miller called it an inflammable shale. Professor Chapman was positive it was a bituminous shale, and Professor Anderson was equally positive that it was very far from being anything of the kind. Professor Brande said it was 'a new peculiar mineral,' and Dr. Wilson called it clay impregnated with bitumen; three microscopists testified that it exhibited no trace of organic structure, and four others stated that there was the strongest possible evidence of vegetable structure.

"Mr. Dixon stated recently that nothing clearly was settled by the trial. In response to a letter from me requesting information in regard to the difference between shale and coal, he said:—'I distinguish shale from coal by the products which they yield on distillation, taking bituminous coal and cannel coal as those which yield such products in suitable quantities. Subjected to distillation, pure coal yields hydrocarbon belonging to the aromatic series, as benzola, nephthalines, phenols, anthracene, &c. In distillation of bituminous coal, the lower members of each of these substances predominate; in the distillation of cannel the members do so as a rule. Shale, on the other hand, if pure, yields hydrocarbons of the fatty series, olefines, paraffines, and acetylines. As both substances are derived from vegetable deposits neither is quite pure, and hence coal containing a little of the shale hydrocarbons gives a little of the fatty series, and shale a little of the aromatic, but the quantities are in both cases small. As, however, at a high temperature hydrocarbons of the acetyline series are converted into aromatic hydrocarbons, these are increased in shale when the gases arising from the heated shale comes in contact with the sides of a red hot retort, as in gas making. The use of a high or a low temperature affects considerably the proportion in which the individual members of the aromatic series are present in coal products, and also in the same way the proportion of the individual members of the fatty series are present in the shale products. But after a somewhat extended experience of the distillation of both on a large scale, I am of the opinion that with the exception of the acetylenes from shale, which are, however only present in small proportions, the radical character of the products remains the same at all temperatures until a point is reached at which both minerals are split up into hydrogen and carbon.'

"The managers of the mines at Joadja Creek and Hartley report that in addition to their export in 1884 of 12,804 tons of shale, they manufactured 36,000 cases of kerosene oil, 6000 cases of gasoline, 100 tons of paraffine, and 100 tons of sulphuric acid.

"The Capertee Mine.—The discovery of kerosene shale at Capertee, near the Mudgee line of railway, a few years ago, attracted much attention throughout the colony. A valuable report was made upon it by Mining Surveyor Seaver in August, 1883, accompanied by a map showing the mode of occurrences of the shale and coal seams as determined by aneroid measurement. Although a company was organised for working the mine and operations conducted with every appearance of success, work was suspended upon it for some unexplained cause. I learn from the report of Mr. Seaver that the formation of the country in which the mine is located is hilly, and that the coal measures are capped by from 300 to 600 feet of Hawkesbury sandstone and conglomerates, which are occasionally surmounted by basalts rising above the intervening valley from 1200 to 1600 feet. The formations in the valley consist of slate and limestone beds. The Hawkesbury sandstone and conglomerates form bold escarpments to the summits of hills consisting of cliffs and precipices. In some places the tops of the hills are worn by meteoric forces. Immediately below the base of the Hawkesbury sandstone, which is about 2900 feet above sea level, the coal measures commence. The measures for about 40 feet consist of clay bands, sandstones, iron bands, and light grey slates; and at 2900 feet a coal seam of about 5 feet 6 inches thick with narrow clay bands running through it then about 7 feet of clay bands much stained with iron oxide, and then another clay band, and 40 feet of sandstone, and another coal seam about three feet thick. At about 150 feet below the last seam is found the seam of cannel coal, varying from 3 feet to 3 feet 6 inches in thickness. Two tunnels have been constructed, one of which is 100 feet in length, and the other 300 feet. The mine is within three miles of the railway. But whether work will be resumed at this mine or not, I am unable to say; but it is certain that shale exists in considerable quantities in the neighbourhood. It is thought that the shale seams become more valuable as they advance toward the Queensland border.

"Axle oil.—The New South Wales Shale and Oil Company manufacture a fair article of black axle oil extensively used by the Public Works Department of the colony. Until recently, all the axle oil used here was imported from Europe. Mr. Downe, the superintendent of the Government railway stores, while on a visit to the United States, observed the use of a superior axle oil on the railway carriages, and obtained samples of it, for the purpose of introducing it here. Its use gave much satisfaction and large quantities of it were imported from time to time from America. Samples of this oil were at Mr. Downes' suggestion submitted to Mr. J. H. Fell, of the North Shore Gas Works of this city, for the purpose of having a similar oil manufactured out of the native shale. Mr. Fell, after a series of experiments with the shale, succeeded in producing an oil very nearly as good as the imported article, and at about the same cost. The native oil has been so much improved during the last year or two, that it is now used exclusively on the tramcars, motors, and all good railway stock."

SYDNEY CITY MISSION.

A public meeting in connection with the annual gathering of the Sydney City Mission was held in the Protestant Hall, Castlereagh-street, last night. There was a moderate attendance, and the chair was occupied by Mr. M. L. Stephen, Q.C. Amongst those on the platform were the Revs. Andrew Gardiner, A. Burdett, J. Penman, J. Adam, Messrs. A. Torning, J. P. Palser, and several of the missionaries, including Messrs. M. H. Bowmaker, J. M. Main, J. Hague, F. Freeland, and a number of others. The proceedings were commenced with devotional exercises, the singing being led by the mission band.

Mr. STEPHEN said that he felt very great pleasure in complying with the request which had been made to him to preside, inasmuch as he was always glad of an opportunity to testify to his very high estimation of the work of the society, and more particularly as for some time past he had felt that he had taken very little active interest, he was sorry to say, in participation of the duties of the committee. In fact, he was hardly aware whether he was still on the committee or not. Yet he could assure them that his absence had not been due to any desire not to further the interests of the mission. Some time ago he had had the pleasure and the privilege of being what was called the "superintendent" of one of the city mission. That word was rather a misnomer; and he would prefer to see it altered to counsellor, adviser, or friend. (Hear, hear.) As was customary in such cases, the missionary's book had been periodically left with him, and from a close scrutiny of it he had been enabled to learn what haunts of vice, degradation, and misery were visited; and as a consequence he had every reason for thoroughly honouring the missionary's vocation. They, as messengers of light in places of darkness, must have exercised a vast amount of self-denial and zeal in the cause of Christ to enable them to face the scenes that they had faced, and to undergo the trials which they were only too willing to undertake. The general public entertained some sort of an idea that the missionary's duties were confined to strictly spiritual functions, of the nature of reading, praying, &c. Of course, that was their first duty, as the winners of souls to Christ; but he would like it to be understood that their duties did not stop there; that they were, in various respects, the helpers and advisers of those with whom they were constantly brought into contact. Part of their duties lay in seeing that the children of necessitous ones were sent to school, and that, amongst other matters, employment for their parents was, as far as possible, obtained. It was not alone that they were preparing men's minds for the future, but they were also doing their best to alleviate those whom they visited, not only in the matters of this life, but also to prepare them for the life which has to come. He felt certain that there were hundreds who were ready to bless them for their elevation in the sphere of life, in having been rescued from poverty and distress, and in sending them upon their way in this world rejoicing. He bespoke their monetary, as well as their spiritual sympathy, on behalf of the mission. (Hear, hear.) He especially drew attention to a fund which should be more largely in existence, whereby their missionaries would be enabled to afford those who needed it a degree of monetary help. It should be borne in mind that, although the society was not an elymosynary one, or one which had been organised merely to dole out charity; still there were cases in which, in order to effect spiritual good, it was first of all necessary to afford some bodily help. (Hear, hear.) Numerous instances could be cited in which it was extremely necessary that missionaries should be in a position to afford some slight creature comfort and substantial help—if nothing more. (Hear, hear.) He trusted that such a fund would still continue in existence, and that those before him would provide the means for their workers to be of use in the direction which he had indicated, that they might thereby invoke the double blessing—upon him who gave and upon him who received. (Hear, hear.) He had just been given to understand that, although there was no regular fund of the kind which he had alluded to, donations came into the society annually to the extent of about £100. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. MAIN, who was called upon by the chairman to address the meeting, said it would have been a greater pleasure for him to have sat and listened to some of those who had obtained good through the mission than to stand there and tell them what the mission had been doing. However, the nature of the meeting was such that he was expected to tell them a little of what had been done during the past year in the district to which the committee had sent him—that was Waterloo. He then referred to a number of cases in which persons had been rescued from the paths of vice through the exertions of the city missionaries. In conclusion, he urged upon those present to the necessity of helping the missionaries in their work, and contended that the Sydney City Mission was an organisation which was doing a great amount of good, and deserved the full sympathy and support of the public.

Mr. HAGUE then addressed the meeting, relating a number of incidents in connection with his work as a missionary. In the course of his remarks he stated that he had worked as a missionary for six years—five years in the old country and one year in Sydney—and that during his labours in Sydney he had met with, and helped to rescue, some of the worst characters he had ever met with in his life.

Messrs. FREELAND and BOWMAKER also delivered addresses, in the course of which they referred to the rescue work done by the Sydney City Mission.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the chairman on the motion of the Rev. ANDREW GARDINER, seconded by the Rev. J. PENMAN. A vote of thanks was also tendered to the members of the Mission Band, after which the proceedings terminated with the benediction.

THE MUCH VAUNTED SURPLUS OF TWO MILLIONS AND A HALF.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Sir Henry Parkes and Sir John Robertson are never tired of flaunting this much-talked-of surplus in the faces of the people, as if it was the clear result of their own unerring wisdom and keen ability in the economic government of the State. How strangely different is the truth about it. The ability of a baby could have achieved such a result. It was no good guiding of the two knights that brought it about. It is simply the result of the sale of the people's land to that amount, and is more detrimental to the reputation of the statesman who resorted to such a policy than advantageous to his character as a ruler or financier. It was a policy as ruinous to the best interests of this country as would be the action of an individual in living beyond his income and selling a portion of the means from which he draws that income to meet a deficit occasioned by his own reckless, unprincipled extravagance. Sir Henry Parkes and Sir John Robertson talk as if the people were entirely ignorant of this, and constantly instance it as an example of their own ability and economy in the government of the country. It was the policy of a reckless spendthrift, who did not care where the money was got from so that it was obtained, and even consented to receive it on the understanding that it was gained by the sale of his patrimony—a policy that would ultimately leave him destitute and a beggar.

The Stuart Government wisely put an end to this unwise practice. They did so in the interests of the country, with the high approval of Parliament. Had they chosen to adopt the Sir Henry Parkes and Sir John Robertson policy, they could have very soon boasted, not of a two million and a half surplus, but of a 20 millions surplus; or, better still, they might have estimated the value of all the unsold waste lands of the Crown, and called that their surplus, which would be equivalent to the action of Sir Henry and Sir John calling lands valued at two millions and a half a surplus, as if it were an overflow of legitimate revenue.

The boast is a hollow delusion and a pretence, and should not be allowed without instant exposure. Sir John Robertson, whose health, I am delighted to know, is mended and restored, talks in his usual style on the Land Bill of the late Government. Admit that that bill is not a perfect measure, yet the country has just pronounced it preferable to the law of 1861. Forty-five members have been re-elected who voted for it, and not a single candidate had the courage to tell the people he would vote for its repeal. Sir John Robertson must take this fact into his astonished mind and try to digest it as best he may; digested it must be. The Stuart Government had great difficulties in constructing this measure—difficulties mainly caused by the many defects of the bill of 1861. All men will make every allowance for a Government working under such difficulties. Their difficulties were equal to that of a mechanic who is asked to make a wager boat out of a dung barge; and if the present law is faulty no one will be surprised at it. As defects show themselves, while the machine is in operation, they can be noted and amended. Let us all be thankful that we are rid of the law of '61, with its traps and snares and pitfalls, which brought so many people anxious to settle on the land to their ruin. Sir Henry Parkes and Sir John Robertson seem to talk against the new men of the present Government as if they were not fit to be there. This is the ground on which Sir Henry Parkes is to try and oust them. I appeal to those who know anything of our political history to say whether the men objected to by Sir Henry Parkes will not, in point of status, character, and intelligence, compare most favourably with any colleagues either Sir Henry or Sir John ever had. I dare say the present men, in some instances, would not feel honoured by such a comparison. Do Sir Henry and Sir John forget the Parliamentary history of some of their past colleagues, that they should indulge in such criticism of the present men? If this is done in Parliament by either Sir Henry or Sir John, a shot might be sent across their bows the very whistle of which would fill them with alarm and make them creep into themselves. The new members of the present Government are able, shrewd business men, preeminently successful in the management of their own private affairs without the shadow of a shadow's stain upon their unbending integrity. And although I do not argue that success in the ordinary business of life is a certain guarantee of equal success in dealing with national affairs, neither do I believe that total failure in this respect is any recommendation to any man aspiring to rule the State. Be all this as it may, the Government is there awaiting trial. They give as much promise of good as any Government I have seen these 20 years. Justice says let them be tried, and the country re-echoes the fair proposal. If the Opposition attempt to turn them out on the Address I still say they will be ignominiously and deservedly defeated. I know many of the new members, and I know it would be foreign to their whole nature and character to perpetrate an injustice so flagrant and so gross as to condemn men unheard, and thus play the game of faction in the interest of self-seeking professional politicians, and to the detriment and injury of the country's best interests.

I am, &c.,

DAVID BUCHANAN.

RABBIT DESTRUCTION IN VICTORIA.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

IV.

No description of the Western District rabbit-proof netting would be complete without some reference to that at Messrs. Bailey and Wynne's, Terrinallum, and Mr. Cumming's, Mount Fyans station. On the former run, which embraces about 50,000 acres, the rabbits were at one time very bad, but they succumbed to the vigorous operations taken against them, chiefly with the pick and spade. The boundary fence was then hung with 3-foot netting, of which 2 feet 6 inches was above and 6 inches below ground. However, it being found that the rabbits got over this, a 4-foot netting was substituted. The second fence in most places was sunk 9 inches in the soil, but 6 inches sufficed where the country was exceptionally hard. Consequently, the netting, as it now stands, varies in height from 3 feet 3 inches to 3 feet 6 inches. The mesh is 1½-inch. Wire 3 feet 6 inches high is also employed on the land, but only for divisional fences. A considerable portion of this latter kind is used on the coping of deeply-bedded stone walls. All these fences are found to be thoroughly reliable, and it is asserted that on Terrinallum the rabbit is a thing of the past.

Some of the wire netting originally employed on Mount Fyans station was only 2 feet high, and, being badly erected, proved but a poor check to the encroachments of the enemy, as they freely passed both under and over it. Subsequently the proprietors determined to try 4 feet wire, which, having been treated in a manner similar to that on Terrinallum, has also turned out very successful. Mr. Dodd's Poligolet property is that referred to in a previous article as having absorbed £3000 in the clearance of the pest from its 3000 acres. It joins Lara station, and its fences are very similar to that running up the side of Mount Elephant. The netting at another property, known as Mount Violet, may likewise be placed in the same class, as all of it is quite three feet six inches above the surface.

Mr. F. W. Armytage's Woolamanata station is also worthy of special note, not only by virtue of its excellent system of wire fencing, but also on account of the extensive method of rabbit destruction by the domestic cat. This property, which comprises 23,000 acres, is situated near Lara, on the railway between Melbourne and Geelong. It is bounded on the north and west by Staughton Vale, where stand the hills known as the Three Sisters. These hills and a large area of rocky, barren country running from the north-west are strongholds from which the rodents descend in swarms on the land below. To minimise the evil as much as possible, Mr. Armytage had erected two years ago, on the boundary between Woolamanata and Staughton Vale, a wire netting, which stands 2 feet 8 inches above ground. The plan of laying the netting on the surface of the earth with the flange towards the rabbit country has been adopted here in preference to burying it. The portion so laid is 4 inches wide, and is fastened to the ground at intervals of 3 feet by 9 inch staples and pieces of No. 4 wire. The upright netting is secured to top and bottom wires in two places, between each post, by the same means. A creek, which is often dry, runs through the property, and considerable trouble was experienced in rendering this rabbit-proof. However, such was effectually done by the sinking of uprights in the bed of the watercourse, and also about 20 feet on either side of its banks. Heavy joists were, of course, provided. A floodgate is an important feature of the work. It is constructed of ordinary battens, with the exception of the top beam, which is 6 inches wide. The wire netting as a whole is considered to answer its purpose admirably. Mr. Armytage is a great believer in the efficacy of cats for rabbit destruction. Accordingly he had a large number reared in wire cages on different parts of the estate. They were confined for some time, and fed on rabbits, until, having become familiar with the rabbit flesh and the locality, they were turned loose. So far as can be judged, they are a success.

Having seen fair samples of every kind of wire fencing that the western district could show, Mr. Myring decided to take a flying trip through the mallee country via Mr. E. H. Lascelle's Lake Coorong and Tyrell Downs stations to the New South Wales border. On the properties in question some first-class specimens of rabbit-proof fencing were reported to exist. Thus an early-morning start from Ballarat in the Murtoa train gave us a flitting vision of poppet-heads, mullock heaps, barren plain, and wooded mountain, and of townships in prosperity and decay, until flat, dusty Murtoa came in sight. The wonted monotony of the journey, however, was much relieved by the presence of Mr. Samuel Black, Chief Inspector of the Victorian Rabbit Branch, who in the course of conversation gave it as his opinion that there could not possibly be a better Act than that of New South Wales. He remarked that the great drawback in the Victorian rabbit law was the principle of local administration which it contained. By way of illustration he instanced the cases of two shire councils through whose boundaries the train happened at the time to be passing. The rabbit boards in these districts had faithfully done their duty in the matter of rabbit destruction, whereas the councils adjoining had quite neglected to take any steps whatever for the extermination of the pest, and thereby neutralised the good effects of the labours of their more energetic neighbours. With regard to the general means of destruction now adopted in Victoria, he said that the boards were getting great results from the use of green chaff and arsenic. Referring to rabbit-proof fencing, his opinion was that the fencing of small holdings was of direct benefit, but he did not believe in laying continuous lines of such, in consequence of the almost total inability to make them perfectly rabbit-proof, and also on account of the great outlay required for their thorough supervision. Touching the disease previously mentioned as having been fatal to numbers of rabbits on Pombornett station, Mr. Black observed that it had been very common amongst many of the tribe in various parts of the colony. He believed it to be tuberculosis, and ascribed it to the severe cold and wet weather prevalent at the time.

To get to the township of Warracknabeal, which, in view of its proximity to the mallee country, may be termed the last real hospice on the outskirts of civilisation, we have to face over 30 miles of terribly dusty roads, topped with a red dust, that grimes the clothes, fills the ears, blinds the eyes, and finds its way to the lungs. Though the country is very flat, the strain on the horses proves heavy, as the tires frequently go deep into the heavy sand-hills. There is also a fair chance of getting bushed, owing to the perplexing multitude of tracks each settler seems to have made for his own particular convenience. The country does not look very inviting for settlement, as the prevailing tint is brown, and the many thin, weak crops are languishing for rain. That the soil, however, is of fair quality, is evident from the pretty bits of green which occasionally mark the work of a very primitive kind of irrigation. Warracknabeal is an excellent example of a vigorous thriving bush town, and on every side new brick is usurping the place of the original weatherboard, or slab and dab. The stimulus which has called forth all these healthy signs of vitality is due to the anticipated approach of a railway. The town is dependent for its water supply upon the Yarrambiack Creek, the course of which we follow the next day for 40 odd miles to Lake Coorong station, whence it rises. After leaving Warracknabeal, we see numerous signs of rabbits, and occasionally one of the enemy in propria persona. They were very bad all over this neighbourhood once, but bad seasons and bran and arsenic wrought havoc amongst them, though the former were much more hurtful to them than the latter. For miles and miles the ground is still as bare as a board, and the desperate shifts to which the scourge were put is evidenced by their ravages on the trees, many of which they have barked as high as they could reach. Some of the selectors have had a terrible time in this country. First the almost unsubduable mallee had to be swept off their lands, and since then they have been at constant warfare with the wild dogs and rabbits. The latter have triumphed in many instances. One unfortunate whose hut we passed lost the whole of his 50-acre crop one year by the rabbits, while his modest little flock of sheep was reduced one-half by the dingoes. A reward of £1 per head is paid by the Vermin Boards for the wild dog, but it requires a very expert hunter to make the business pay, as it is almost impossible to follow the skulking rascal to his home in the heart of the dense mallee. One of the family has made himself so notorious by his depredations and his success at baffling all endeavours to capture him that the farmers of the district have offered a special reward of £10 for his head, but so far in vain. Our road, or rather track, runs through an apparently endless maze of mallee, between the stems of which not a blade of grass is to be seen. It is a heart-breaking country. Immense areas have been under fire, but the grim, blackened skeletons still stand, as cover for the young mallee which is springing from the parent roots. Firing this country is worse than useless, as it only produces a fresh crop of the all-powerful scrub, which grows at an alarming rate. It even threatens to overrun the road, and our driver seems to take a grim pleasure in viciously crushing it under his wheels. After 15 miles of this sort of work, we suddenly came upon a sheet of water known as the Norwegian Dam, which conserves a considerable quantity of the waters of the Yarrambiack Creek, now dry in many parts. This dam has been fenced by the Vermin Board with wire netting. The netting is about three feet above and 6 inches below the ground. It is galvanised, and of 17 gauge, with a 1½-inch mesh. The netting is supported by posts about 5 feet apart, to which it is stapled on the outside. It is also topped with three lines of barbed wire at intervals of about 6 inches, making the total height from 4 feet to 4 feet 6 inches. By these means the dam is rendered both rabbit and dog proof. In the summer time, when water can be got only in the dam, troughs of poisoned water are laid outside for the express benefit of the rabbits and wild dogs: but it is asserted by some people that they have proved more fatal to horses and cattle than to the vermin in question. There are several of these dams and tanks about the district, and report has it that a traveller, unconscious of danger, drank at one of these troughs, and speedily succumbed. Here the bad effects of local administration is apparent; for of the numerous tanks and dams in the district some are made dog and rabbit proof, while others remain open. This may account for the poor results of the poisoned water. We frequently pass huge warrens, which, owing to the porous nature of the country, could not very well be carbonised, while digging out would be of little use, as the escaped rabbits could quickly hollow out a fresh home in this soft soil. It is a great relief to get out of the monotony of mallee, if only for a few minutes, and meet an occasional piece of park-like land dotted with pine, quondong, and bull oak, which is in the sole possession of a herd of wild horses, several of excellent stamp, who take immediate alarm at our approach, and make for their fastnesses in the distant mallee.

The sun is far past the meridian when we reach the Coorong homestead, but sufficient time is allowed for an inspection of the 80,000 acres fenced in, under the guidance of the manager, Mr. Thos. Oppy. As previously remarked this, and Tyrrell Downs station, and all the property lying between, belongs to Mr. E. H. Lascelles, who leases altogether over 600,000 acres of mallee land from the Government, the best of which is, of course, included in the two stations. At one time the whole of Coorong ran 90,000 sheep; now it carries 5000 inside and 5000 outside the enclosed area. But the great change was not due solely to the rabbits, for the estate was in times past wofully overstocked, and has never yet recovered itself. There are 27 miles of stick-fencing and five miles of wire-netting on the Coorong. The sticks are of split pine, 6 feet 6 inches high, and sunk in the earth about a foot. They are supported by a 6-inch rail, which in turn is kept in position, at intervals of every nine feet, by stout forks embedded a foot in the ground. The whole fence has a slope of about one foot in six towards the rabbit country. Mr. Oppy has often seen rabbits run up the incline and over the fence to the outside, but has never known them come from the outside burrowing, though occasionally they have got through rather large slits, and he has frequently found their bodies jammed in the openings. Though the forks outside offer a good foothold for the foe, he does not seem to successfully avail himself of it, and Mr. Oppy contends that it is much better to have the fence slope outward, even with such props than have it perfectly upright. The most doubtful feature about this otherwise admirable fence is these forks. The wire netting has only been put on the open country where there is a lack of timber. Two kinds are used. The greater portion, extending for 4½ miles, is 3ft. 6in. high, of 15 gauge, and 1⅞in. mesh. Three inches above is a four-barbed wire, with barbs three inches apart, and again above that a two-barbed wire with barbs five inches apart. The posts are of split pine, 20 inches in the ground and 5 feet out. They are set at spaces of 10 feet, with a stake between, and to them the netting is stapled on the outside. The wire is merely galvanised, and no tar is used. The netting, unnecessarily strong for rabbits, is also intended to act in conjunction with the barbed wire against the wild dogs. This purpose it answers admirably. The manager considers it a better fence than the stub, and, though he has frequently driven the rabbits against it, has never found them go over. Its weakness is at the bottom, for being only three or four inches in the ground, the invaders, as we saw, had burrowed under in several places. In order to foil the intruders, Mr. Oppy had a small trench dug six inches deep on the outside of the fence, which, after being filled with mallee boughs and stakes, was covered with earth. This original plan has proved very successful, for the rabbits when burrowing down, have come against these stakes and given up the work. Thus, where bunny previously had free ingress and egress there is now "no thoroughfare." So satisfied is he with the result that Mr. Oppy intends to treat the whole of the wire fencing in a similar manner. He even prefers this system to putting the wire down six or seven inches, as it puzzles the rabbits more. In another place where the foe got under the netting very freely, an extra wire about four inches wide was run as a flange for about a quarter of a mile. The netting was laid towards the rabbit country. Not one rabbit has ever got under this, though many of them have often tried. Mr. Oppy has never known them go back and burrow from the selvedge edge, as in the Western district. Evidently, an interchange of ideas between the Wimmera and Western district rabbit would be beneficial to the former. But the flanging is not as good, in Mr. Oppy's eyes, as the mallee trenching, especially for a boundary fence, where each neighbour wants the flange turned from his land. There is only about half a mile of the other kind of wire referred to. This is much lower and lighter, being but 3 feet high, and having only a 17 gauge, though the mesh is similar. It is treated exactly the same way as the other netting. The difference in height is made up by placing a plain wire between the two barbed wires. Mr. Oppy thinks 17-gauge wire is sufficiently strong for all purposes provided it be 3 feet 6 inches high, though netting 3 feet 6 inches in height, and of 15-gauge, would even be stronger with posts 15 feet apart than the 17-gauge would be with them only 10 feet distant. It is worthy of remark that all the wire employed on Coorong has been carefully strained, and though the fence has now been up 10 months it has never needed repair notwithstanding that there are many wild cattle and horses running in its neighbourhood. A great many of the out-station tanks are fenced with similar wire; but Lake Coorong, which is a fine sheet of deep fresh water, embracing an area of over 500 acres, being within the boundary fence is, of course, allowed to remain open, but its contents are under tribute only to the rabbits, and not to the dogs. The benefits of irrigation could not be better illustrated than here. A heavy pump has been erected at the lower end of the lake, and several miles of troughing and drains have been prepared. When in full play the pump throws 5000 gallons of water per minute, and through it welcome succour has been afforded several thousand acres of the lower-lying lands, now knee-deep in grass, which even the rabbits can make no impression on. Most of this will be allowed to seed for the benefit of the barer country. The sand ridges on Coorong are very heavily-timbered, chiefly with pine; and though it seems a pity to kill so many beautiful trees, the axe has perforce been used on them in the interests of the grass, and with a view to the destruction of all rabbit-cover.

COOK WARD ELECTION.

Mr. John Davies, who is seeking election as alderman for Cook Ward, addressed a large meeting in Bourke-street last evening; Mr. John Walsh, J.P., in the chair. Mr. Davies delivered a long address, during which he reviewed his past services as alderman for the ward. The present condition and state of the ward he characterised as disgraceful. He declared himself in favour of a reduction in the water rates, amendment of the Paving Act, a general system of street watering, the enclosure and improvement of Moore Park. Mr. Alderman Kippax proposed, and Mr. John Roberts seconded, a vote of confidence in the candidate, which was supported by Mr. Walker, Alderman Hume, and Mr. John Riley, and carried unanimously. The meeting terminated with cheers for the Queen and the candidate.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

THE NEW GUINEA EXPEDITION.

Last night a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society of New South Wales was held at the Royal Society's rooms, Elizabeth-street. The Hon. G. H. Cox, M.L.C., occupied the chair, the following gentlemen also being present:—Messrs. Harrie Wood, Under-secretary for Mines; Gerard, hon. treasurer; S. H. Myring, joint hon. secretary; E. Du Faur, C. S. Wilkinson (Lieutenant-commander, R.N.), Dr. Belgrave (member of the administrative council), and Mr. Brett.

The following letters of apology were read:—

"Sydney, 30, College-street, 17th November, 1885. My dear Mr. Wood,—It is to me a cause of sorrow and heartfelt grief that I am unable to take my place at the important meeting of the Geographical Society to be held to-night, important under any circumstances as regards the interests of the society, but to-night rendered a thousand-fold more so by circumstances terrible and sad beyond anything which my power of language can express. Yet sad, terribly sad, must be the meeting to-night, when we shall have to proclaim and explain, as far as lies in our power, the terrible catastrophe which has befallen our collaborateurs and deprived our society and the community at large of any future services of as gallant, as brave, as intellectual a band of explorers as ever belonged to any nation or people. Australia may well be proud of them, and I trust that Australia will find means of publicly giving expression to her appreciation of their merits and the depth of her sorrow for the terrible tragedy which has befallen them, unless we are strangely misled by rumour. There is, however, room still for hope that all are not lost; indeed there are those amongst us, whose opinion carries weight, who deny the possibility of the dark story being true, and blame those who, on the simple vague story of wild irresponsible savages, permit our brave explorers to be held guilty of a carelessness and incapacity which brought about their destruction. Without being sanguine, I enter fully into their hopeful views, and believe that we have at least a very exaggerated story of some encounter between the explorers and the savages. But I adopt also, at least partially, the credulity of the gallant men of Thursday Island who, after all, are better judges of the reality of the case than we can be, inasmuch as they are nearer the scene of action than we are, and have amongst them those who only a few days ago were almost within gun-shot of the spot where it is expected the fight took place. . . . With best wishes for a successful meeting in every respect, believe me to be, sincerely yours,—E. STRICKLAND."

"Central Police Court, 17th November, 1885. My dear Sir Edward,—I would have attended your meeting to-night, at the Royal Society's rooms, and gladly endeavoured to assist as far as I could in attempting the rescue of the New Guinea Expedition, but I observe that an expedition under Mr. Frank Jardine—an old schoolfellow of mine, and a most intrepid explorer—has been equipped at Thursday Island, which, I presume, will do all that can be done. If not, you may rely upon my earnest help, if it is worth having. Yours very truly,—J. K. ABBOTT. Sir E. Strickland, K.C.M.G."

Mr. HARRY STOCKDALE, the explorer, read an account of his Kimberley exploration from 1884 to 1885.

Dr. BELGRAVE, referring to a statement made by Mr. Stockdale at the close of his paper with regard to the offers of assistance tendered by Sir Edward Strickland and General M'Iver in connection with the New Guinea Expedition, said that these offers had been made on the responsibility of the gentlemen named, and the administrative council were not concerned or implicated in the offers. At present the society was entirely free to adopt any arrangement which might be pointed out in the future, and to accept the services of any gentlemen of experience as explorers who might offer themselves. It would be a misfortune if they allowed that opportunity to pass without making some reference to the disaster which had occurred to their expedition, and he was sure he was expressing the opinion of every member of the society when he said that they viewed with very great gratitude the feeling of sympathy that had been elicited throughout these colonies with reference to the subject, and that the administrative council should certainly do all in their power with a view to recover the expedition or any remnants of it that might be alive. He believed that it was their intention that evening to fortify the administrative council by filling up the vacancies which took place at the last meeting by the election of gentlemen who had volunteered their services, and he hoped that they would be able to recruit their somewhat failing ranks by the assistance available to them. Latterly they had not been fortunate in having a quorum when they required it, and under the existing circumstances, it was very much to be desired that the ranks of the council should be filled up by energetic and zealous members of the society.

The CHAIRMAN said with reference to what had fallen from Dr. Belgrave that it was intended that evening to make a statement with reference to the New Guinea Expedition.

On the motion of Mr. WOOD, a cordial vote of thanks was given to Mr. Stockdale for his interesting paper.

Mr. T. H. MYRING, joint hon. secretary of the society, said: It has been thought desirable by our president, Sir Edward Strickland, that the members of the society should be made fully cognisant of the action of the administrative council since the time that the first news, throwing doubts on the safety of the New Guinea Expedition came to hand up to the present date; and, by his request, I beg to read the following precis:—On the 13th ultimo a communication was received by Sir Edward Strickland from the Hon. John Douglas, Government Resident at Thursday Island, which contained, amongst other information, the following particulars respecting our expedition. Yesterday I received a note from Mr. J. H. Williams, of Daroo Island, which contains some slight information of the expedition. Williams was at Kewai on the 22nd, and at Samioot on the following day (23rd September), just two months after Everill landed there. The natives told him "that the Bonito had arrived at the head of the river, and could get no further, and also that the natives on both sides of this river were going to attack the party." "The natives accompanying the party (there were two) had got frightened, took their canoe left in the night time, and came back to Samioot. But Mr. Williams adds, on my making further inquiry through an interpreter, I think it was the two natives themselves who made up the story as an excuse for their running away." Such is Williams' account; all I think that we can infer from it is that two natives accompanied this party, and that they left in a canoe, being probably induced to do so by fear of some hostile natives. They evidently ran away. I don't think that there is any cause for anxiety on this account. It is highly probable that the party would be attacked, but we may reasonably anticipate that they would succeed in repelling the attack without much difficulty. Mr. M'Farlane will probably be in the Fly at the end of this month, and we may hope ere then to hear something definite about them. The story we now have amounts to nothing more than this, that two natives who had started with the party are known to have returned to Samioot without bringing any letters from them. At a meeting of the administrative council held subsequent to the receipt of the above letter, the contents of such letter were discussed; but the members present took the same view of the matter as Mr. Douglas, and no action was deemed necessary. In consequence of the various rumours telegraphed from Cooktown and Brisbane to the local press regarding the expedition, a special meeting of the administrative council was convened on the 10th instant, and after discussion it was resolved that telegrams should be sent to Admiral Tryon, at Melbourne, and Sir Peter Scratchley calling their attention to the rumours current respecting the expedition, and urging that they should take such steps as might appear to them expedient with a view to ascertaining whether the expedition has met with any danger, and calling their attention to the fact that under ordinary circumstances the expedition is now almost due at Thursday Island, on its return journey. These telegrams were dispatched in due course, but the Admiral had left Melbourne for Sydney prior to the arrival of that addressed to him. Sir Edward, therefore, wrote to the Admiral, so that the letter would reach him upon his arrival at Sydney, urging that immediate measures be taken for the formation of a relief expedition; and he also placed himself in communication with the Hon. G. R. Dibbs, offering his services as leader of such an expedition. On Sunday the following telegram was received from the Hon. S. W. Griffith, Premier of Queensland:—"To Sir Edward Strickland, president Geographical Society.—Received the following from John Douglas, Port Kennedy, Thursday Island: —10th: 'Mr. M'Farlane arrived to-day from New Guinea; was at Kewai, on the Fly River, on the 28th October; saw there Korossa, chief of Sumaint (Samioot), who stated that he left the expedition at the head of the river building house; steamer high and dry; masts among the bushes; all well, except one Malay; he stated that he returned at Everill's request owing to shortness of provisions; party were shooting kangaroos for food; M'Farlane distrust Korossa's statement; some Bampton Islanders when visiting Sui, a village at the mouth of the Fly, west side, state that they heard the Sumaint men boast they had killed the expedition white men, and had their skulls; the teachers at Bampton Island then sent a party to make inquiries from a village near Sumaint; they heard through a Sumaint (woman?) that the whole party were killed, and that the skulls and whaleboat were at Sumaint; the mission party saw natives with table and bowie knives in their possession; they were bright and free from rust; Mr. M'Farlane fears that the statement of this woman has some truth in it; he strongly advises that a relief party be sent at once. Whatever may be the truth of unfavourable report, the exploring party have neither sent to Sumaint or Kewai for their mails, nor have they sent to meet Mr. M'Farlane as arranged; it may be that a depot had been formed, and that it was attacked after the island party left; would advise immediate communication with Admiral Tryon; steam launches might be sent up river from Mibu; will endeavour to send some relief from here as soon as possible; please communicate to Sir Edward Strickland; Mr. M'Farlane's detailed report will be forwarded by post.' (Signed), S. W. GRIFFITH, Brisbane." Yesterday morning our president received a courteous note from the Premier to the effect that the Admiral had the matter in hand, and would undertake the whole arrangements necessary for the relief of the expedition, if any of its members remained alive. All the Admiral's officers have been working indefatigably during the past two days, gleaning information on the expedition and the country to which it was despatched, and we confidently expect that we shall hear what the Admiral has definitely decided upon without delay. Since writing the precis I have just read, and during the course of the afternoon the following inspiriting telegram has been received from Thursday Island:—"Normanton. President Geographical Society, Sydney. At a public meeting held at Thursday Island on Wednesday, the Hon. John Douglas presiding, it was resolved to fit out and despatch an expedition to ascertain the fate of the Geographical Society's exploring party in New Guinea, and afford succour to the survivors. Much enthusiasm prevailed, and £250 was subscribed in the room in ten minutes. A committee consisting of Captain Boore, Houghton Brown, and Messrs. Clark and Stewart were appointed to make the necessary preparations. The schooner Wild Duck has been chartered, armed, and provisioned for two months. She has been fitted with barricades to protect the crew from spears and arrows, and carries 15 tons coal for use should the Bonito be discovered. The party will number about 30, and be under the leadership of either Mr. F. L. Jardine or Captain Boore. Volunteers are coming forward, and the expedition will sail on Saturday, 14th instant, and should reach the scene of the reported massacre within a week. The Rev. Mr. Macfarlane has given valuable information and assistance, and the services of the pilot who accompanied D'Albertis 500 miles up the Fly River have been secured. A pearl shelling boat will accompany the vessel to Sumatt, to obtain and return with the latest news. Offers of boats and crews are numerous, and the residents are entering into the matter heart and soul.—WALTER T. BOORE, Chairman Committee. Thursday Island, November 13th." A copy of this telegram was immediately furnished to the Hon. the Premier, and that gentleman also despatched a copy to the Admiral:—"While appreciating the motives which actuated the noble spirited Thursday Islanders, I, as a member of the society, would express a hope that, notwithstanding the departure of this expedition, the Government and Imperial officers here should proceed with the arrangements they have hitherto had in view, and despatch a strong and properly equipped relief expedition from Sydney with as little delay as possible. No doubt an expedition organised and equipped by the Admiral would be both strong and complete, and, what is more, would be under and strictly within the law, which is, perhaps, more than we could expect from any private expedition hastily sent out."

Captain J. F. MANN said he thought it was extremely possible that instead of the whole party being attacked and massacred a small portion of it which was left in the Bonito might have been attacked. The arrangement was this, that the greater portion of the expedition were to go inland, leaving the Bonito in charge of Mr. Shaw and two or three others. In accordance with that arrangement Captain Everill was to keep up communication with the depot as much as possible, and he thought it might be found that the natives had taken advantage of the absence of the main body of the party and attacked those on board the Bonito, and it was quite possible that the principal members of the expedition were still alive, inland. Of course, if they came back to the depot, and found it and the Bonito destroyed, it would be a very bad thing for them. They were all very good men. Better men never started, and they were not likely to be careless or anything of the sort. They were used to travelling, and knew what sort of men the natives of New Guinea were, and that they would entertain and carry out a scheme of vengeance for years. That being so, the party would naturally be very guarded in their movements. There was one thing that he could not understand, and that was the expedition being short of provisions. Now, they took a most elaborate outfit of provisions, certainly enough to last them over six months, and whether or not the party were attacked inland, and destroyed in detail, they could not, of course, state until they received further information; but as far as sending out relief parties was concerned, he, of course, thought it must be done at once. There was one statement which had been published in the newspapers, and to which he would like to refer. It was said that a native was thrown overboard by Captain Everill, and that the attack upon the expedition was made in revenge. This might have been done before they landed at all, and it might be that this native, thinking that the Bonito did not draw more water than his own canoe, kept continually running her into a mud-bank; and if it were true that he was thrown overboard, it was quite sufficient to make him thirst for revenge for months and months. As to that statement, however, all that they could do was to get the latest intelligence.

Dr. BELGRAVE said that, in a conversation he had had with Captain Everill before his departure, he assured him that the society need be under no anxiety with regard to his taking the Bonito up any part of the river which was not safely navigable. The boat was a very suitable one for the work, and it was hardly likely that he had actually taken the Bonito into such a locality as rumour now stated that he had taken her. And considering that Captain Everill was a man of considerable scientific knowledge and much practical experience as well, the rumour seemed to him incredible. It seemed incredible that he should have taken the steamer up the creek when his instructions were that the Bonito should go as high up the river as possible, but in a perfectly navigable part, and that the main body of the party should then go ashore to the mountainous ridge in the centre of the island; and further, that the steamer should remain where it had been originally left, or if it was found necessary to move about, that at all events it would leave some pre-arranged signal, so that the other members of the party ashore might know when it would return to the spot. While fearing that there was very much ground for believing that this report had great foundation in truth, he still thought there was very much reason to hope that if an expedition could be started at once the probability was that some members of the party would be saved. It was one of the chief features of the expedition that it was to be divided into a land and water party when it arrived at the highest navigable point of the Fly River. One remark had been made by Captain Mann which he thought called for some little criticism. He said that they were thoroughly able to repel an attack. He regretted to say that he thought that somewhat doubtful. At nearly the last moment, and after the expedition had left our shores, arms and ammunition were sent on to Queensland for them, which proved to be useless. (Hear, hear.) These arms and ammunition were in Sydney now, and the expedition were compelled to purchase whatever arms and ammunition they had in Queensland. He very much feared that they were insufficiently provided both with guns and ammunition, otherwise he was sure that such an athletic and splendid body of men as they were would have made a very good defence even against such overwhelming numbers as were reported to have attacked them.

General M'IVER said there was one thing to which he wished to draw their serious attention. It was rather strange that the council of the society did not take earlier notice of the warning he gave to Dr. Belgrave two months ago, when that gentleman expressed his fears that something was up with the expedition. He suggested to him at the time that in all probability a portion of the expedition had been surprised and cut off, and that the other portion had gone inland, and were still in existence. At the same time he asked Dr. Belgrave to present his application to the council of the society, and to convey his suggestions to them. At the time, he was trying to establish a private company to go to New Guinea, and, with Sir Peter Scratchley's permission, to explore that part of it within British jurisdiction; and he might state that if the council had worked with him he would have directed the efforts of the expedition in the direction of rescuing the members of the party, and in rendering all possible assistance to remove any doubt as to their fate. He would undertake to organise and lead an expedition, and if he could not return with some authentic news of the late gallant expedition, he pledged his word of honour that he would leave his bones in New Guinea. (Hear, hear.) There was nothing in the law to prevent an expedition from being raised here; they had a right to advance immediately to the relief of those whose fate was doubtful, and he called not only upon the gentlemen present but the public of all the colonies to take action, and with that object in view he offered his humble services.

Dr. BELGRAVE said it was not out of want of respect that he did not introduce General M'Iver to the council in a formal way, as he wished him to do. It occurred to him that the proper course for that gentleman to pursue was to make a written proposition to the council, so that it should receive that careful consideration which every proposition placed before the council had received. It was true that he expressed himself very despondently at the period mentioned by General M'Iver, and in a very great measure his fears were associated with what he believed to be the insufficient supply of arms and ammunition.

Mr. WOOD said that two months ago no one in Sydney, as far as he knew, had reason to suppose that there was any danger, and as far as he could understand General M'Iver he had no ground at the time for supposing that there was any danger. With regard to the arms and ammunition, the following was the equipment:—Four Winchester rifles, three Snider rifles, seven double-barrelled shot guns, twenty-three revolvers. Three members of the party had Winchesters (16-shooter) of their own, Captains Everill and Shaw each having Colt's revolvers. There was a mishap with references to the arms that were supplied in Sydney, but the arms he had enumerated were perfectly good, and were obtained at Cooktown and Thursday Island. (Dr. Belgrave: Did the ammunition fit them?) Yes. The society was misled as to the quality of the arms and ammunition supplied to the party when they left here, but the defect was remedied at Cooktown and Thursday Island, and the expedition took with them suitable ammunition. (Hear, hear.)

Dr. BELGRAVE desired to know whether any information had been received, or any expression of opinion from Admiral Tryon, touching the legality of a private expedition?

Mr. WOOD: We have received no information of that kind from him.

Lieutenant O'CONNOR said that perhaps it would be as well for someone to propose that, in the event of Admiral Tryon not seeing his way to an expedition under the auspices of the naval forces of this colony, a private expedition be got up by subscriptions opened immediately, and that at the shortest possible notice the expedition be despatched to bring back news of what was certainly their own expedition. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. WOOD thought it would be premature to submit such a proposition as that. Admiral Tryon was doing all that could be done, and no doubt his means of taking action were of the best possible kind. It would be unfair to him to carry such a proposition.

Dr. BELGRAVE: Mr. O'Connor's suggestion was simply a contingent one.

Mr. WOOD: Still it implies that we have no confidence at all in Admiral Tryon. (A voice: Not at all).

The CHAIRMAN also thought it was rather premature to put such a proposition, because there were two parties who were called upon to attend to this matter as a public duty. A party of British subjects were supposed to be in great danger, and Admiral Tryon and Sir Peter Scratchley when they received information that their services were required would be bound as a matter of duty to take steps at once to ascertain the fate of the expedition. (Hear, hear.) If it so happened that a portion of the party had been cut off, and the other party were on land without means of communication with them, then those who gave quickly gave twice—(hear, hear)—and to the residents of Thursday Island who had so nobly taken steps in the matter all honour was due. (Cheers.) And he was quite sure that the 30 men who had volunteered would give a good account of their proceedings. (Hear, hear.) Before they could take steps anything might happen, but those people on the spot had nobly taken the matter up. If anything had happened, for they knew what men were when their blood was up, those men would perhaps teach the natives what a very stupid thing they had done. He looked on the matter in the light that Mr. Mann had done when he started the discussion. He did not think that a number of experienced men could have been so foolish as to expose their lives by omitting the commonest precautions in having men always on the watch, and it was utterly incomprehensible that a number of British subjects, armed as the members of the expedition were, could have allowed themselves to be massacred by savages, and he could not think there could be much truth in the reports.

Lieutenant O'CONNOR said the question was, in any case, how far they were prepared to sympathise, and he was prepared to sympathise £1.

Mr. BRETT said he believed that the report was all bosh, but was there any necessity for them to sympathise in the manner suggested by the last speaker? Was it not for that society to write to the Admiral and ask him to instruct his officers on the spot to follow up the expedition already on its way. (Several gentlemen: That has been done.) He had come there to offer himself as leader. (Hear, hear.) If they wanted to make the natives fear the white man, immediate steps must be taken. Nothing more could be done here than to ask the first man on the station to his officers to follow up the private expedition, and see that they did not come to any harm.

Dr. BELGRAVE said that General Scratchley had informed the society in an interview they had had with him, that it would be impossible for him, in case of any accident such as that which had taken place, to render any assistance. Under those circumstances, and bearing in mind Sir Peter Scratchley's limited means, he thought they might congratulate themselves upon the fact that the colonies had instructed their Agents-General to communicate with the Home Government in the matter, inasmuch as the honour of the Empire was implicated. If they relied on General Scratchley they would be disappointed.

The CHAIRMAN said that there were several men-of-war in Torres Straits, and if General Scratchley informed any of their commanders that British lives were in danger, they would afford what help they could.

Mr. F. B. GIPPS moved,—"That this society begs to express its grateful thanks, and deep satisfaction, at the prompt and energetic action of Admiral Tryon, and the Premiers of Queensland, Victoria, and New South Wales, in lending relief to the exploratory expedition to New Guinea."

Dr. BELGRAVE seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. MANN moved, and Mr. VIVIAN seconded,—"That the thanks of this society are due to the Hon. John Douglas and the inhabitants of Thursday Island for their prompt and patriotic action in sending a relief party thence to the Fly River, in succour of the exploratory expedition to New Guinea."

The motion was carried unanimously.

Dr. SHAW said he thought they should all give their most ardent support to this object, because an expedition was necessary, for he knew that the men were not so well armed and supplied with ammunition as was supposed. His son, writing from Murray Island, said that he had a Winchester rifle, but only 25 rounds of ammunition for it.

A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.

THE NEW GUINEA EXPEDITION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It is very distressing to learn that there is any confirmation of the reported slaughter of the New Guinea Expedition, although that confirmation has only foundation in the cautiously expressed opinion of the Rev. Mr. M'Farlane. The best hope that the report is not true arises out of the statement of that gentleman that it may be wholly false, and I think this possible solution of the untoward rumours may be accepted after a careful examination of them. The only story of the massacre of the explorers which we have runs thus:—"Captain Everill, the leader of the exploring party, had cause of quarrel whith his pilot, the Chief Carossa, and enraged, threw him overboard into the river. Thereupon the other two natives deserted, and in two days afterwards the three succeeded in cutting adrift and stealing a boat belonging to the steamer Bonito, whilst the whole exploring party slept. In four days more Carossa arrived at Samioot, the head-quarters of his tribe and immediately commenced to organise all the fighting men of four of his villages to avenge the insult inflicted upon him. To assemble his fighting men and fit out the war canoes could not have taken less than four days, and it would require four days more for the hostile natives to reach the stranded steamer, or 14 days would have passed from the time Carossa was thrown from the Bonita into the river to the night when he was able to destroy the whole of the exploring party." An examination of this story shows that although the Bonita was fast on a mud bank, one of her boats was left floating in the river, and so unguarded that Carossa on the second night after his ejection from the steamer was able to steal it. It is very hard to believe that under the circumstances any boat was left floating in the river, and not hoisted on to the steamer, and it is certain that day and night too vigilant a watch would have been kept to render possible an assault ending in the destruction of a well armed and experienced exploring party. To render possible the theory that the whole party was destroyed we must further suppose that the stranded steamer could not be got off, and that Captain Everill had determined to stand by the vessel until by the setting in of the wet season in two or three months it could be floated off and taken further up the river. That is, short of provisions as he must have been, he would waste the precious dry months still remaining, and start on his exploration of the interior after the tropical rains had begun. The Bonita must have either been hopelessly stranded during the dry season, or she must have been got off long before Carossa could return and destroy the whole party who started in her. If the steamer was hopelessly stranded, Captain Everill would certainly not remain on board for a fortnight, but would within the first week have made all his arrangements for leaving a force in charge, and starting on his exploring expedition. This he would do, either at once by land, or by proceeding as far as possible up the river in his boats.

And then, if he had determined to delay his start for the interior for even 10 days, he certainly would have sent a boat to Samioot for his letters, and reported the stranded condition of his vessel. It is, however, possible that the small force left in charge of the Bonita may have used her as a depot, and that they may have been slaughtered by the Papuans and the vessel plundered. This would explain the possession by the natives of new table knives. But it is incredible that so large a party, and so well organised a one, as that under the command of Captain Everill could, if it held all together, be surprised and wholly destroyed as reported. Too many unlikely circumstances must be assumed before such a thing could have happened. Then, if the woman's story is a true one, it is very improbable that Carossa would have met Mr. Macfarlane in a manner so confident of impunity. Every explorer of countries inhabited by savage races knows how commonly it happens that reports are spread of the death of himself and party by the hands of some distant tribe. If the exploring party does not return when the natives think it ought they conclude it has perished. This has happened in the cases of African and Australian explorers, and so long ago as 1846, I had through the columns of the Herald to discredit the report of the slaughter of Captain Sturt and his party by the natives beyond the River Darling. I explained that the report was either the revival of the story of the killing years before of two of Sir Thomas Mitchell's men much farther up the river than where Captain Sturt left it, or it arose out of the disappointment felt by the natives at the long absence of one who by his kindness and gentleness had so greatly endeared himself to them. Having ascended the River Darling early in 1846, previous to Captain Sturt's return, I felt satisfied from conversations with the natives that there was no real foundation for their belief in his death.

It must not be forgotten that the New Guinea expeditionary party was thoroughly acquainted with the character of the Papuans, and they knew with what unremitting hostility other persons who previously visited the Fly River had been met. It may be true that Captain Everill treated the chief Carossa as reported; but if he did, which I doubt, he would have taken redoubled precautions against the added effect of his certain hostility. If the Papuan pilot purposely stranded the steamer, Captain Everill must have felt assured that his object was to surprise and plunder the vessel. It may also be observed that from Captain Everill's last letter it appears that he did not intend to communicate with Samioot until he had made discoveries worthy to be recorded. Notwithstanding this opinion I would deprecate any delay in sending search parties to the River Fly.

Sydney, Nov. 16. AN OLD EXPLORER.

The printing of steel engravings on celluloid is a new industry, which appears to have (says the Mart) a promising future. Marshall's engraving of General Grant, recently finished, has been reproduced by this process, and is a handsome work of art. The picture is said to be the best portrait of Grant in existence, and the manner in which it is brought out by the celluloid process is even superior to printing on india paper. George Wm. Curtis says of the picture, "It is by far the best likeness of him (Grant), as he appeared in these latter days, that I have seen, and it is very fortunate that so admirable a portrait has been obtained." D. Huntingdon, President National Academy of Design, says:—"The celluloid print represents the engraving remarkably well, retaining the extraordinary refinement and power of the original work."

ROMAN CATHOLIC ECCLESIASTICAL SEMINARY AT MANLY.

In accordance with the decision arrived at by Cardinal Moran previous to his departure for Europe, that the foundation-stone of the Roman Catholic Ecclesiastical Seminary at Manly should be consecrated and laid during the sitting of the Plenary Council, that ceremony will take place to-morrow morning. It will be performed by his Eminence in the presence of the bishops and other dignitaries now taking part in the Plenary Council, and of the reception committee. There will also be a luncheon at Shell Beach, at which it is expected that some 200 gentlemen will be present.

Concerning the building itself, it might be stated that shortly after his first arrival in the colony his Eminence approved of a site at Manly for the establishment of an ecclesiastical seminary, and on the eve of his departure for Europe in June last, the contracts were signed, Messrs. Sheerin and Hennessy of City-chambers, Pitt-street, having prepared the plans and specifications within the last few months under the personal direction of Cardinal Moran, with whom the proposal originated. On account of the magnitude of the undertaking and the character of the institution—the building will cost £60,000—the founding of this seminary for the training of Australian youths for the priesthood is regarded with special interest, not alone by the Roman Catholics of New South Wales, but by the members of the Roman Catholic Faith in all the colonies, for the college will be, as we are given to understand, an ecclesiastical centre for the whole of Australasia, all the bishops of the various Roman Catholic dioceses having expressed their approval of the college and their intention of supporting what will be the first purely ecclesiastical institution and school of theology founded in the Southern hemisphere. The site upon which St. Patrick's Seminary will be erected is portion of the estate of 60 acres at Manly, originally granted for an episcopal residence. Cardinal Moran is also having a residence which will cost £11,000, built on the estate. It may not be generally known that this estate, which was allowed to lie idle during the lifetime of Archbishop Polding and his successor, Dr. Vaughan, is situated near Fairy Bower, at Manly, and adjoins the quarantine reserve, from which it is divided by a fence. It is understood that Cardinal Moran's idea is to make this college equal in every respect to the historic institutions of England, Ireland, and the Continent. Mr. W. H. Jennings, one of the largest builders in the city, is the successful tenderer for the whole work. Some conception of the size of the Manly College may be formed when it is stated that the huge structure will cover nearly 60,000 square feet. According to the plans, the college will be a solidly-built and commodious edifice of stone throughout, and in the early Gothic style of architecture. The ground floor will be entered by a flight of three steps, and the porch, 14 feet by 14 feet, formed at the base of the tower, will lead to the spacious entrance hall, 73 feet 6 inches by 20 feet, and the end of which commences the principal stone staircase. There are to be four class-rooms on the right of the ground floor, each 30 feet by 16 feet 6 inches, also the rector's sitting-room, study, and bed-room, an office, bathroom and conveniences; whilst the left side will be taken up with two reception-rooms, 47 feet by 30 feet, and 30 feet by 22 feet respectively; refectory, 79 feet 6 inches by 30 feet; the kitchen departments, with scullery, pantry, housekeeper's room, &c. There will be communication with the first floor both by a patent lift and by the principal staircase. The staircase will lead to a hall similar in size to that on the ground floor, with cloisters 12 feet wide opening out of it at the rear of the landing. It is intended to have the vice-rector's room and seven professors' rooms, with baths, and all necessary accommodation, in the southern half of this part of the building, while the chapel (70 feet by 30 feet) and a library (79 feet 6 inches by 30 feet) will be in the northern half. The plan shows a stone colonnade running along the front of the building. The second floor contains 47 students' rooms and two large study halls, with an oratory formed in the tower in the centre of the building. Above the colonnade of the first story there is to be a walk 12 feet wide for the students. The space of the third floor will be occupied by two large dormitories 70 feet by 31 feet each, six rooms for students, and two large study rooms with lavatories attached. At the rear of the right wing, isolated from the rest of the building, the servants' dormitory will be erected, for which a separate staircase is provided. Within the embattlemented parapet of the front elevation there is to be a walk three feet six inches wide, specially designed for sight-seeing. The tower, which will rise to the height of 180 feet, will form one of the most attractive features of the edifice, and on the first stage of its front will be carved in two shields the episcopal arms of the Cardinal and the dates of the founding and opening of the institution. As is customary in the architecture of the Roman Catholic Church, images of saints will have conspicuous places. The tower itself will be surmounted by a large figure of St. Patrick, to whom the college will be dedicated, and the niches in the gables of the two wings in the main front will be filled by statues of St. Francis and St. Vincent de Paul. All matters of detail have been carefully attended to, and it is satisfactory to note that the sanitary arrangements have been properly regarded. All the lower floors will be tiled, and monastic style will be preserved throughout the building. Tobin's system of ventilation is to be employed throughout the whole building, and to admit as much light as possible the narrow and somewhat gloomy windows peculiar to most monasteries have been entirely omitted from the design. The architects have evidently endeavoured to preserve a purity and uniformity of style, and a good effect is produced, not so much by any strikingly handsome features, as by the general treatment of the whole structure, and the accurate proportions of the necessary departments. Architecturally, the college will be one of the best examples of massive stonework in the colony, and it will certainly be a very valuable possession to the Roman Catholic body. £60,000 is the amount of the contract.

DRINK AND POLITICS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It may be just worth the while to correct a few of the misstatements made by Mr. Alfred Allen, under the above heading, in your columns of this morning. I shall take them seriatim.

"There can be no question," he says, "as to the degrading character of the 'liquortraffic,' as it is at present carried on." "But," he continues, "we cannot look to those immediately interested in the sale of intoxicating drinks for a change." Of course not. That the hotel-keepers to a man have exposed the demoralising effects of the present licensing laws; that they have unceasingly protested against an Act which deliberately seduces an ordinarily honest and law-abiding public into offences which Bishop Wordsworth has denounced as much worse than intemperance; that they worked their level best, and not altogether without success, to purify the Parliament that passed the measure in its original form—all this they have done, and certainly not unknown to Mr. Allen. Could they do more? If one strives his hardest to effect a reform but fails, surely no discredit attaches to the failure? The hotelkeepers, however, have not wholly failed. The Parliament which brought Sir A. Stuart to power was the result of the hotelkeeping interest's first endeavour to purify the Legislature. It was a decided improvement, but was found inadequate to grapple with the difficulty. A fresh and stronger effort was made, and the present Parliament is the result; and from all appearances—and the certainty almost of the Government notifying their intention to-morrow of liberally amending the present Act—they have been unexpectedly successful.

"Our politicians," says Mr. Allen, "are waiting for popular opinion before they move on." On this ground alone, then, would the country be justified in expecting a liberal measure of reform from the present Ministry; although, according to Mr. Allen, who must have been too much engrossed in his own selfish interests at the time, "during the late elections the candidates, with very few exceptions, shunned the subject, and played a sort of political pitch-and-toss with the electors, using the double-headed 'local option' coin to please all parties." Coming from one of the disciples of the local option party, this admission is valuable, and is in startling contradiction to Mr. Knapp's vapid assertions. Judging from the analysis alone of members' opinions published in the S. M. Herald some few Saturdays back, Mr. Allen will observe that a large number were, on the contrary, very outspoken on the subject, and that whatever equivocation was indulged in was at the instance of the Local Option Leage itself, who set their friends and supporters the example of double-shuffling and dodgery; and if he is really anxious to be possessed of accurate information, I may tell him that no less than 48 members are distinctly and publicly pledged to oppose any extension of local option, whether with or without compensation. But probably Mr. Allen was only referring to his own immediate friends when making the remark.

He next ridicules what he is pleased to call "the stupid cry of the 'poor man and his beer,'" which he denounces as a slander on the working man. But then he goes on to tell us that the working man is a man utterly devoid of principle and morality, ready to sell his political birthright for a glass of colonial beer, and that large sums were spent in this way at the recent elections. If slanderer there be, who shall say it is not Mr. Allen? With a knowledge of election practices in more countries than one, I shall freely assert that the working man in this colony is generally, if anything, less open to corruption than elsewhere. He will take your glass of beer and tell you he is sorry he can't vote for you or your candidate, as the case may be; or, if less candid, will give a half promise in his favour, and, under cover of the secrecy of the ballot-box, follow the dictates of his own conscience. But that a glass of beer will buy his vote is false. Also, the effects of the beer-barrel were not very apparent either on the day or night of the elections in Sydney. Indeed, it surprised many that everywhere things were so quiet and orderly.

Mr. Allen winds up by quoting from a speech of Mr. Chamberlain a passage with which no one can quarrel, but which Mr. Allen would fain torture into an approval of his pet, local option. Although in the opinion of sober-minded men the picture he draws of England freed from the curse of drink must appear greatly overdrawn, all classes—temperance people and hotelkeepers alike, and no less so drunkards and full local optionists—are unanimous in admitting the seriousness of the evil. Where they differ is at the point of choosing a remedy.

There is a considerable amount of activity in the shipment of wool observable about the various wharfs, and several of the ships now on the berth will soon be speeding on their homeward voyages. At the Circular Quay no fewer than six fine clippers are stowing cargo. The Yallaroi, on the eastern side, has been doing first-class work, and it is fully expected that she will have her hatches on by to-morrow evening. Yesterday there were 7400 bales stowed, and by the time work at her is completed there will be very few short of 8000 bales below hatches, one of the largest freights of wool ever taken away from this port in a sailing vessel. Messrs. Dangar, Gedye, and Co. are the brokers, and Messrs. Flood and Co. the stevedores. Captain Brown has sails bent and everything ready for a start, and as the vessel looks every inch a "heeler," she should, with a fair chance, make a good run home. As soon as the Yallaroi hauls away from the Quay her berth will be taken by the Gladstone, which is at present in Iron Cove. The latter has already 1000 bales on board. The Aberdeen clipper Trafalgar, which is being loaded by Messrs. Montefiore, Joseph, and Co., is making steady progress with her loading, there being now 1800 bales on board, besides 106 casks tallow, 250 large shells, 1200 bags ore and sundries; and Captain Moir anticipates being ready to leave for London by the first week in December. The favourite old trader John Duthie, for which Messrs. Metcalfe and Co. are the brokers, and Messrs. Flood and Co. the stevedores, has just begun her loading, having a quantity of tallow, hides, &c., stowed, and an early start will be made upon her wool, of which a quantity is already engaged. The Dharwar is on the southern side of the Quay, and is being loaded by Messrs. Peele, Borradaile, and Co. There are 3000 bales on board, which were stowed by Messrs. Talbot and Co., besides a quantity in store. On the western side of the Quay is the Cairnbulg, which is one of the most faithfully-built, as she is certainly one of the handsomest, vessels in the harbour, and which, under Captain Murray, has achieved a first-class reputation in the trade between London and this port. As might have been expected, the Cairnbulg has had a fair share of the "good things," and the work of loading her is going on so briskly that she is expected to be ready to haul away from the wharf on Tuesday. The cargo-book yesterday showed that there were 3500 bales stowed, in addition to which she has 419 casks tallow, 385 casks ammonia, 3864 hides, 1526 bags manganese ore, and 344 bags chrome ore. The remainder of her wool is awaiting stowage. Messrs. Mason Brothers, Limited, are the brokers, and Messrs. Flood and Co. the stevedores. Messrs. Dangar, Gedye, and Co. have the Tweed also on the berth, and this fine old ship will, after the departure of the Yallaroi, receive more attention than she has done lately, and her departure will be expedited as much as possible. At present there are 1600 casks tallow, 7080 hides, 500 bales wool, and a quantity of ores, bones, &c., on board. The four-masted ship Port Jackson is now in Neutral Bay, but will take the berth at present filled by the Cairnbulg as soon as the latter hauls off, and as she stands high in the opinion of shippers, but little difficulty is expected in filling her up, especially as there are already 2000 bales in store. There are 150 tons tallow now in the hold. Messrs. Devitt and Moore's fine iron clipper Illawarra is being loaded at the Central Wharf by Messrs. A. Lamb and Co., and will probably be finished in time to leave by the 30th instant. There were yesterday 4506 bales wool, 2851 hides, 927 casks tallow, 630 bags bark, 1587 bags cobalt, below hatches. The Thomas Stephens, also at the Central, has made a start with her stowage, and as she has large engagements and is a noted fast sailer, she should make good headway. Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co. are the brokers. The steamship Pathan has 300 bales on board, but between 6000 and 7000 bales are ready for stowing, and it is intended to proceed with this as energetically as possible in order to allow of the steamer leaving early next week for Melbourne, where she will complete her loading. The White Star clipper Smyrna is at Dalgety's Wharf with 1500 bales stowed, and a large quantity in store; she has also 170 casks tallow, besides a quantity of ore and sundries, below hatches.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company's R.M.S. Australia, with the English and American mails via San Francisco, should reach port this afternoon.

The British India Company's steamship Rajpootana cleared the Heads at 5 p.m. yesterday for Melbourne and Adelaide, with original cargo from Calcutta.

The Orient Company's R.M.S. Potosi left Suez on the 14th instant for Australian ports.

The R.M.S. John Elder, hence to London, via ports, arrived at Suez on the 15th instant.

The E. and A. Company's steamship Menmuir, from Hongkong and Foochow, with mails, passengers, and cargo, entered the Heads at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, and proceeded to an anchorage in Spring Cove. After undergoing the usual fumigation there, the vessel was granted pratique, and came up to a berth at the company's wharf, Miller's Point, which was reached at about half-past 8. The Menmuir has 300 tons tea and 400 tons general cargo, consisting principally of rice and sugar, for this port; 100 tons tea and 100 tons general cargo for New Zealand ports; and 700 tons of general cargo for Melbourne and Adelaide. She is still commanded by Captain Helens, and arrives in her usual good order. The Menmuir left Foochow on the 24th ultimo, and experienced light N.E. winds and fine weather across the China Sea, and light variable winds thence to Cape Malanal. After that the wind was fresh from S.E., with considerable sea, till the steamer reached Port Darwin. Leaving there on the 4th instant, the Menmuir touched at Thursday Island on the 7th, Cooktown on the 10th, and Townsville on the 11th, arriving at Brisbane on the 14th, having had fresh S.E. winds and heavy sea right along the coast. The Menmuir left Brisbane at 6 a.m. on the 15th instant, and had light northerly winds and fine weather during the passage. Whilst the Menmuir was being berthed she ran into the wharf, which was considerably damaged, as were also two of the bow plates of the vessel on the starboard side, which had holes knocked in them. Repairs will require to be effected, before the vessel can resume her voyage to Melbourne and Adelaide.

The Cockermouth was granted pratique yesterday morning, and came up to an anchorage below Garden Island. The ship was last here in 1883, and was then, as now, under the command of Captain Rothery, who brings her into port in capital order; indeed, the vessel looks as if she were just about to begin a voyage. She sailed from Liverpool on August 14, and had moderate weather in the Channel. A departure was taken from Tuskar on August 14, and moderate winds were had thence across the Bay of Biscay. After that light N.W., S.W., and S.S.E. winds were had till the N.E. trades were struck off Madeira. These proved very light, and gave out in 10° N., whence the usual variables were had to 5° S., where the S.E. trades were picked up. The Cockermouth crossed the Equator on September 19, in 28·10 W., and had moderate to fresh S.E. trades to 22·40 S., and moderate E.N.E. and N.N.W. winds, with squally weather, for a couple of days afterwards, when the usual westerlies were encountered. At times these were very squally, and during one squall the topgallant yard came down with a run. The meridian of the Cape of Good Hope was crossed on October 12, and the easting run down on the parallel of 45° S., with strong gales from S.W. and W., veering round to N.W. and N.N.W., all the way along, accompanied by very high seas. The Cockermouth rounded Tasmania on the 10th instant, and had variable winds from there to port.

The following vessels were spoken by the Cockermouth:—August 22, Helen Denny, barque, from the Mull of Kintyre, bound to Wellington, eight days out, in 46·23 N., and 14·12 W.; August 23, Knight of Saxony, ship, from London to Queensland, nine days out, in 45·43 N., and 15·43 W.; September 8, Hoia, ship, from Cardiff to China, 23 days out, in 13·19 N., and 25·41 W.; September 15, Crown of England, ship, from Cardiff to Singapore, 31 days out, in 4·26 N., and 22·12 W.; September 20, Lady Lisgar, ship, from Singapore to Liverpool, 85 days out, in 1·30 N., and 25·47 W.; September 21, Melbourne, ship, from London to Melbourne, 31 days out, in 4·11 S., and 27·32 W.

Considerable briskness is observable at the Commissariat Stores, Circular Quay, owing to the approaching departure of H.M.'s vessels on the station. The flagship Nelson, is going to New Zealand, and will leave about Friday; and the Opal and Swinger are ordered to New Guinea in connection with the recent murders; but the date of their departure has not yet been fixed. The Dart is preparing for her new commission.

Messrs. Foster and Minty, who so successfully carried out the repairs to the Newcastle Steamship Company's steamer Kembla, have just completed a new steam steel lighter at their yard, Peacock's Point, Balmain, which will be launched to-morrow afternoon, at half-past 4, should the weather and tide permit.

The steamer Kiama crossed the Moruya bar at 2.21 p.m. on the 16th instant, and arrived at the Company's wharf at 7.20 a.m. on the 17th, having experienced light easterly breeze with dark cloudy weather and cross sea. Cargo: 6 kegs butter, 7 cases eggs, 40 bags bacon, 120 cheeses, 2 coops poultry, 2 bales leather, 12 bundles sheepskins, 4 bales wool, and sundries.

The steamer Bega left Bateman's Bay at 0.40 p.m. on the 16th instant, Ulladulla at 5.15 p.m., and arrived at the Company's wharf at 4.20 a.m. on the 17th, having had moderate S.E. winds and fine weather throughout. Cargo: 146 kegs 3 tins butter, 21 cases eggs, 42 bags oysters, 1 saw, 2 bales leather, 2 bales wool, 4 bundles sheepskins, 6 quarter-casks tallow, 1 bag hair, 1 bag bones, 1 bag horns, 3 boxes poultry, 4 buggy wheels, 5 cases 3 bags bacon, 1 case instruments, &c.

The Tasmanian Steam Navigation Company's steamer Flora passed Green Cape at 7 p.m. yesterday, bound to Hobart.

The schooner Peerless arrived on Monday morning from Mercury Bay, N.Z., with a full cargo of timber for here and Newcastle. She sailed on the 31st ultimo, and had an uneventful passage.

The steamer Suez, of Messrs. Gibb, Livingstone, and Co.'s line, cleared at the Customs yesterday for Hongkong, via Port Darwin, Thursday Island, and Queensland ports, with a large cargo, amongst which are 5 boxes of gold (£5350) and 2100 tons of coal for Shanghai.

Owing to the non-arrival of the steamer Duckenfield the departure of the Waireka has been postponed until to-night.

The well-known steam collier Phœbe, belonging to Messrs. J. and A. Brown, is at present laid up at the company's works, Hexham, receiving an overhaul.

The barque Renfrewshire arrived last night about midnight with a general cargo from Hamburg, and anchored in Watson's Bay for medical inspection. She sailed on August 8, and had a long passage to the line, but in making the easting had strong winds, and did some good steady work.

COLONIAL GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.
N. S. Wales Funded	—	—	Debentures, due 1902	—	—

From the Australasian Insurance and Banking Record we learn that the total average deposits in the banks of Victoria for the quarter ended September 30 amounted to £30,514,564, compared with £29,514,176 in the preceding quarter, showing an increase slightly in excess of the amount of the decrease in this colony. The advances amounted to £32,228,292, being an increase of £684,701 for the quarter. Coin and bullion amounted to £4,708,683, against £4,987,582. The note circulation was £1,411,464, being a decrease for the quarter of £57,675. The South Australian banking returns show deposits amounting to £5,804,799, against £5,397,070 in the preceding quarter. The amount of coin held was £1,325,440, against £1,264,982. The advances reached £10,179,679—an increase of £14,181.

As an indication of the unsatisfactory character of the business of the Australasian insurance companies of late years, we gather from the Insurance Record, of Melbourne, that whilst the aggregate market value of the shares of twenty-two of the companies which presented an unbroken and easily traceable record last month amounted to £2,076,764, the value in October, 1882, was £2,736,963. In three years there was a depreciation of no less than £660,199. And if the Record, from which we take this fact, had gone into the matter a little more closely, it would have found that the prices of some of these stocks are really less than the actual assets possessed by the companies. In other words, any investor might buy up shares at a discount on their intrinsic value; and this, too, in the case of some of the most prosperous of the companies. That this fact should be coincident with any disposition to take up shares at par in a new company also, presents a financial anomaly worthy of consideration. It is to be remarked that this low estimation of value of insurance stocks of the colonial companies is not paralleled by anything of the kind in England. There the stocks of the leading companies, having regard to the amount of their assets, realise far higher prices. Bank stocks, and all good dividend-paying stocks, no doubt yield far higher prices in England; but in the case of none is the disproportion so great as in that of insurance stocks. Whether the insurance business is as good in the case of the colonial as in that of the English companies, we do not say; but certainly insurance stocks are not so highly prized by the investing public of the colonies as they are by the capitalists of England. As far as can be gathered, the insurance experience of the leading British fire offices has been more favourable in England than in America or Australasia.

From the Record, some items of information respecting insurance business in other colonies indicate that the companies are giving attention to risks, with a view to securing more remunerative results. It is said that in the southern island of New Zealand the bad times on which the companies had fallen had led them to search minutely into the causes. Amongst these, the absence of inspection, with its natural concomitant of schedule-rating, stands pre-eminent. It is said that another year of losses would absolutely compel the companies to make a new departure. In Auckland, there has been a newly-established fire tariff, and it is said that an occasional perusal of past years' loss-sheets was likely to cause its maintenance.

In the import markets to-day no large amount of business transpired, buyers operating for little beyond small lines of goods, at prices marked by no variation in values. The flour trade continues as steady here as in other colonies and all parts of the world, and the following are the day's quotations:—Adelaide town brands £9 10s. to £10, country £8 15s.; New South Wales, £9 to £9 10s.; Victorian, £8 15s. to £9 5s. Wheat is worth 4s. 8d. In tea we hear of the quittance of about 300 halves at 40s. to 41s. A large parcel has also been placed at a price said to be equal to 6½d. per lb. Messrs. Bathgate and Co., of Foochow, in their tea report of 19th October report a very strong demand for congous, particularly in those grades costing from 12tls. to 15tls. o.b., which had had the effect of keeping that class of tea at full prices. Teamen had been ready sellers throughout, but the smallness of stock on offer had saved them from having to make any concession to effect sales, and indeed low common grades showed even an advance on rates ruling a month before. Prices for the few first crop chops remaining on hand had been fully maintained, also for good second and third crop Panyongs; although towards the close the latter seemed rather easier. Settlements had been more than keeping pace with the arrivals from the country, and the stock at date was much lower than was usual this time of the year. It seemed probable that the demand lately existing would induce fuller supplies of the third and fourth crops—more than enough, it was thought, to compensate for the shortness in the first and second crops formerly reported. The reason for the demand current lay in the fact that many buyers for England, seeing so much more than last year being shipped to Australia and a deficiency in the early crops, imagined that the export to London would be considerably less than last year. Their action, however, in paying full prices defeated itself, as it induced fuller supplies. Quotations were:—Dust siftings and broken leaf, 7¼tls. to 10tls. o.b.; low common to good common, 11½tls. to 14¼tls.; good common to good flavouring, 14½tls. to 16½tls.; medium to good medium, 16¾tls. to 20tls.; good medium to fine, 20tls. to 25tls. The above laying down costs are calculated at 3s. 6d. exchange and £1 10s. freight, and on tea packed in cut-down half-chests. Prices of scented orange pekoes had further declined, especially of common grades. Settlements had been: 14,106 boxes scented orange pekoes, at 15¼tls. to 16¾tls. o.b. for low common to common; 20¼tls. to 22¼tls. for good common to medium; 23¾tls. for good medium; and 1418 boxes scented caper at 16tls. o.b. for medium, to 18¾tls. for good medium. The settlements to date had been 577,409 chests of congou against 536,105 in the previous year, the stock being 37,591 chests against 70,895. Of scented tea, the settlements had been 82,498 boxes against 78,974 boxes in 1884-5, and the stock left was 4420 boxes against 5131 in the previous year. Exchange: On the 4th September, 6 months' sight credits were quoted 3s. 6¼d., from which rate there was a slow but steady decline, until 3s. 5¼d. was touched for one forenoon only, when an upward reaction set in, and carried the rate quickly to 3s. 6¼d. A gradual decline again began, and 3s. 5¾d. was done for one day. Rates were again on the move upwards, and 3s. 6¼d. was the best obtainable rate on the 19th October. Sympathy with movements in the price of silver in London had been the cause of the fluctuations. The shipments to the colonies, exclusive of the Menmuir's cargo, had been 21,214,160lb. against 19,236,071lb. to the corresponding date of last year. In our market an assorted parcel of coffee would be taken at 7d; No. 1 Ceylon Plantation Coffee is quoted at 7½d. In dried fruits the market is steady at late rates, with moderate sales. Inquiry for good brands of sardines, for which holders quote 7s. 6d. and 4s. 9d. for halves and quarters respectively. About 1000 pockets of colonial sugar were quitted publicly at from £18 to £20 for yellows, greys, and low whites. Over 1000 pockets of Fiji were also placed—ration at £17 and white to £25. Whybrow's salad oils are moving off at 5s. 8d and 8s. 6d. for half-pints and pints. London pickles at 7s. 10½d.; Eagle at 7s. The salt market depressed, with heavy stocks. Brewers' goods are moving at late rates. In liquors, a steady demand is noted for Bulldog and other good brands of bottled ale, at up to 10s. 6d. for quarts; second qualities also in demand at 8s. 6d. More inquiry for bulk ale of the new brew, now coming to hand. Bottled stout quoted to 9s. 9d. and 6s. 9d. for quarts and pints respectively. Hennessy's brandy moving off in ordinary lines at 34s. 9d. and 46s., for single and three star. Second-class brandy in limited request only. There is very little doing in rum, the market being still weak at 3s. 4d. for Lowndes', and from 3s. for other brands; Red Heart selling at 22s. For Walker's, Robertson's, and other favourite brands of whisky the demand is fairly good, at up to 22s. Geneva worth 11s. 6d. to 11s. 9d., but the trade is not active. Burnett's Old Tom, 11s. 6d. The wine trade is quiet. In oils, raw and boiled in drums is moving off at 3s. 1d. to 3s. 3d., according to brand; castor worth 2s. 11d. to 3s.; China, 3s. In drugs, soda crystals are selling at £6 to £6 5s.; sulphur, £13 10s. to £14, according to parcel; cream of tartar, 1s. 8½d., in kegs; tartaric acid, 1s. 10d., in jars. The metal trade discloses little of special moment. The range of quotations for galvanised iron is from £18 to £20 10s., the market being weak; sheet-lead, £15 to arrive, to £15 5s. quoted for spot lots. In fencing wire there is very little doing; £10 15s. for No. 8, and £11 15s. for No. 10, are the ruling quotations.

Messrs. Fraser and Co. will offer at auction, to-morrow (Wednesday) morning, China and colonial sugars, other groceries, &c.; and in the afternoon the Erricsson's cargo of Oregon timber, besides Baltic and other lumber.

The New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Company, Limited, held a sale of wool to-day, submitting a catalogue of 1328 bales. The offerings included several well-known clips from the Upper Hunter, Castlereagh, Bogan, and Wellington districts, but no superior Southern greases were brought forward. Biddings were animated, especially for well-grown parcels of lambs, free from seed or burr, and for light lots of broken and first pieces, and a clearance of about 70 per cent. of the offerings was effected at current rates, while biddings within a farthing of owners' reserves were received for two of the most important clips withdrawn. The following is a list of chief sales, viz.:—CB over Urawilkie, 207 at 7¾d., 18 first pieces at 4½d.; Goonoo over St., 86 at 8¼d., 69 at 7¼d., 7 bellies at 3d.; D&M over Bulgandramine, 20 1st lambs, 8¼d.; 44 hoggets, 7¾d.; 247 com and clo., 6¾d.; 9 2nd combing, 6¼d.; 62 1st pieces, 6d.; JAW over RA, 14 at 6¾d., 11 at 5½d.; AS over K, 13 at 6¾d.; 4 1st pieces, 3¼d.; Barsham, 8 locks, 1½d.; Benah, 4 rams, 5¼d.; TB over DUN, 16 at 7d., 6 at 6¼d.; R. M'Cormack, 5 at 5¼d.; WL, 5 at 6d.; ARM over Gorman's Hill, 25 at 8d.; 4 1st pieces, 6¼d.; JM over C., 17 at 7¼d.; WH, 9 at 5d.; JR, 4 at 5¼d.; scoured, D and JW over Islington, 6 3rd skin, 7¼d.; CA, 10 1st clo., 14¼d.; 7 1st pieces, 12¼d. A small catalogue of sheepskins was also quitted at very satisfactory rates, best making up to 5d. per lb.

Messrs. J. H. Geddes and Co. offered 1150 bales wool at their sale to-day, and report selling 700 bales under spirited competition, at prices rather more than commensurate with results recently received from London. Scoured parcels were especially in request, as were also inferior to ordinary greasy. Wool in heavy condition and tender stapled were a shade higher than at the last sale. Fine quality, light condition, and sound stapled wools ranged about the same, while bellies and pieces, locks, particularly in faulty condition, were the most difficult of sale. Parcels of greasy wool, in good condition and of good quality, were passed in, pending arrival of balance of clip in store. The principal lots sold were:—MK, 58 bales scoured fleece at 16¼d., 46 at 14d., 49 at 10d., 28 at 12¼d.; DM'C, 11 at 16¼d.; BCBC, 22 at 13d.; MK over Woodburn, 7 from 5¼d. to 8¼d.; JBABurne, 8 at 6¾d. to 12¼d.; IB over Coppymurrumbilla, 107 at 5¼d. to 13¼d.; KC over triangle, 8 at 5d. to 12d.; IB over P, 86 at 4¼d. to 14¼d.; GY over diamond, 8 at 4¼d. to 8d.; B&Co., 6 at 7¼d. to 12¼d.; EMP, 13 bales greasy wool from 1¼d. to 6d.; IB over Coppymurrumbilla, 76 at 6¼d., 27 at 2¼d. to 4¼d.

Mr. John Bridge brought forward a catalogue of 1107 bales wool for his sale to-day. The bulk comprised fair conditioned wools in the grease—several superior brands, some good lines of country scoured, and the balance washed fleece wools of faulty to good quality. Buyers were in full attendance, and biddings generally showed a marked improvement. Sound, well-grown, skirted, greasy wools were in most demand, prices ranging to 8¼d., at which figure the Wantabadgery over Q clip was placed. Lambs' wool, free, was in brisk demand, at to 7¼d. for good. Scoured wools of character, and free, were also eagerly competed for, the COC firsts reaching 16d.; pieces, same clip, 14¼d. Washed fleece wools can still be quoted in but moderate request, except for superior, and for those values showed no improvement. At auction and privately upwards of 700 bales were placed, amongst others the following:—MLK, from Murrumburrah, 7 at 7¼d.; EW over PP, from same place, 67 at 7¼d.; W over W, from Coonamble, 42 at 6d.; BSR, from Clarendon, 10 at 7¼d. The JHC clip, 60 bales from Burrows, was passed in at 8¼d. A catalogue of sheepskins was withdrawn for Thursday.

At the leather sales to-day the market was very dull, especially for sole and harness. Messrs. F. L. Barker, Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, and Mort and Co., Limited, report sales at the following prices:—Sole, 6¼d., to 9d.; kip, 12 to 14¼d.; bellies, 6¼d. to 6¾d., shoulders, 7¼d.; splits, 10d. to 10¼d.; calf, 24d. to 28d.; tweed, 15d. to 26d.; harness, 11d. to 12¼d.; bridle, 6s. to 11s.; bag, 7s. to 10s.; basils, 5s. to 11s.

Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, Hill, Clark, and Co., and J. H. Geddes and Co. report sales of green sheepskins to-day. There was a brisk market, and up to 2s. 10¼d. was paid for full-woolled; lambs, 9d.; pelts, 6d. to 7d. Messrs. Mort and Co., Limited, and John Bridge held sales of marsupial skins. For kangaroo and wallaby skins the market was firm, others dull of sale. Kangaroo skins sold from 6s. to 69s. 6d. per dozen; opossum, 1s. to 4s.; rock wallaby and bear to 2s.

Elder's Wool and Produce Company, Limited, Adelaide, report that at the wool sale yesterday they sold 2000 bales at very satisfactory prices, there being a strong demand.

The Menmuir (s.) arrived to-day from Hongkong and Foochow, via ports, with a cargo of tea, rice, sugar, and Eastern produce.

The barque Renfrewshire, from Hamburg, also with a general cargo, arrived to-day.

The following was the Customs revenue received to-day:—

Spirits, £2557 0s. 8d.; wine (still), £262 2s. 10d.; wine (sparkling), £196 8s. 5d.; ale, porter, and beer (in wood), £56 5s.; ale, porter, and beer (in bottles), £218 15s 6d.; tobacco and snuff, £53 8s.; cigars, £281 8s. 5d.; tea, £824 12s. 2d.; coffee, £22 5s. 3d.; sugar (refined), £1 5s. 10d. sugar (unrefined), from refinery, £937s. 1d.; molasses, 15s. 1d.; rice, £57 19s. 10d.; dried fruits, £822 6s. 8d.; nuts, 13s.; malt, £58 13s.; hops, £2 6s. 3d.; specific duty, £2743 14s.; harbour and light rates, £62 19s. 4d.; pilotage (Sydney), £162 18s. 6d.; harbour dues, £27; colonial distilled spirits £22 1s. 9d.; excise on tobacco, £541 9s.; fisheries royalty, £1 19s. The Sydney Morning Herald.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1885.

Honorable members must sit somewhere when they first take their seats in Parliament. It would be casting some discredit upon the House as a deliberative assembly to assume that, before a word has been spoken, their minds have been made up, and that they have entered Parliament, not to debate, and consider argument, and be influenced by reasoning, but simply to carry out certain foregone conclusions. The grouping of members on the Government side of the House and on the Opposition side yesterday was at the first glance unpromising for the Government. But the fate of the Government will be decided by the grouping after the ringing of the division bell, when a definite and well understood meaning will be attached to it. And before the division bell rings something will be said on both sides to which reasonable men in the House will pay attention. The House contains a considerable proportion of members new to parliamentary life, and these, at least, whatever position they may have been led by accident or by pre-existing impressions to take up, may be supposed to be willing to hear the trial through before assuring themselves that they are quite ready to pronounce judgment.

That there is to be a trial is now practically beyond doubt. So much had been expected before, but the proceedings at Sir JOHN ROBERTSON'S picnic throw fresh light upon the situation. The question unsettled before had been, Who should conduct the prosecution? for it was well understood that if the distinguished politician who had aspired to lead the country were to attempt to lead the House in this matter, he would probably lack a following. But, after miscalculating as to the leadership of the country, his sagacity has not been a second time at fault. He says now in effect "I cannot lead; to follow I am not ashamed." As the first place is not vacant for him, he will take a back place for the present, and look out for opportunities. "He came there to join in a constitutional and justifiable effort to put these men out of office, and it mattered not to him who succeeded them." It will be taken for granted by those who have watched the hon. member's career that it matters just so much that, if these men were put out of office, and he were not amongst those who succeeded them, he would find abundant reason for joining in constitutional efforts to eject their successors. "If the service of any public man would not speak for itself, it was quite useless for him to speak for his service." For "service" we may read "career," and then judge as to the value of the disclaimer.

If Sir HENRY PARKES is willing to follow Sir JOHN ROBERTSON, Sir JOHN is now apparently as willing to welcome the aid of Sir HENRY. Simple-minded critics have been supposing that they were permanently estranged. Rumour has been busy with certain alleged personal reasons for the estrangement. Political reasons have been patent to the world. Sir HENRY has condemned as a political crime an act of the last Government applauded and promoted by Sir JOHN. The opinions of Sir JOHN and Sir HENRY upon the land question (that is to say, so far as Sir HENRY is supposed to have any definite notions about the matter) have been at variance. Sir HENRY was with Sir JOHN in dissolving Parliament upon the land question; but when a new Parliament met to deal with it, and Sir JOHN had to do battle in opposition to the men who were sent in to repeal the law of 1861, Sir HENRY disappeared. But what are such reasons for estrangement when men are drawn together by the overmastering attractions of a common cause? "There had been times," says Sir JOHN, "when Sir HENRY PARKES and he had differed and had been unable to work together." We all remember that. Year after year they differed, and worked against each other with as much show of constitutional principle and justification, and all the rest, as is now displayed in their combined effort "to put these men out." The time came when this game of see-saw between these two antagonists became offensive in the public eye. On one occasion both were rejected at the polls. Both were in some danger of being superseded. Each then began to discern in the other merits which had before been unseen. Each recognised the value of the other as an ally. Each, if he felt that the possession of office was a necessity of life, discerned the equal necessity of his former antagonist's aid as the condition upon which it was to be obtained and retained. Even when the disagreement on the banks of Milburn Creek thrust them for a moment apart, although in the view of one the honour of the Assembly was inextricably bound up with the cause of dispute, they soon rushed together again with open arms. The public interest (not to speak of their own) demanded that they should sit together, notwithstanding such differences, on the front Treasury bench. And, as we all know, history repeats itself. The simple-minded critics forgot that.

The proceedings at the picnic served another purpose in revealing the policy of the Opposition. The leader had been reading in the newspapers that the Opposition had no policy. It was necessary to meet the charge, and so a policy has been disclosed. The disclosure is somewhat oracular, but it amounts to this. Six months ago the leader of the Opposition thought the new land law would be repealed. The general election, during which hardly anyone ventured to suggest such a measure, has given the coup-de-grace to such ideas as that. But now "Amendments must be made in this marvellous Land Act, to which a Chinese puzzle was a fool; but were the people of this country going to allow those who passed this Act, and who were plundering them of their land, to amend the Act? He was sure they would hurl these men from office on the first opportunity." The policy of the Opposition, therefore, is the amendment of the land law. It is something to have ascertained that. But will the Opposition be willing, in its struggle with the Government, to confine itself to that issue? Hardly. The cry is more likely to be, "Use every weapon that may be had to drive the Government out, even if you send us in only to amend the land law." But if that is all that the Opposition has any clear intention of doing, two questions arise,—Is it for the public good that there should be a change of Ministry for the sake of amending the land law? And is Sir JOHN ROBERTSON the man to undertake such a work?

Upon Sir JOHN ROBERTSON'S own showing, if the Land Act needs amending, that is a reason against a change of Ministry. "It was his good fortune, many years ago, to pass a Land Act. . . . No man dared to open his mouth in the country for fourteen years about it, and then in association with his friend Mr. GARRETT, he amended it." Now, while it is true that it was Sir JOHN'S good fortune to pass the Act of 1861—a good fortune that kept him afloat on the sea of politics for many a year—it is inaccurate to say that no man dared open his mouth about it for fourteen years. Voices that were raised against it, even before it passed, continued to be heard almost unceasingly, until, on a special appeal to the country, the voice of the country demanded and procured its repeal. But the point to be noticed is that, when the Act was amended in 1875, it was amended by its author and its friend. Is the new Act, passed under special instructions from the country—passed after the Assembly and the country had withdrawn the question from Sir JOHN ROBERTSON'S charge—to be hacked about, and mutilated, and emasculated by the very man to whom the country has cried "Hands off;" and who six months ago would, if he could, have caused its repeal? The Land Act may need amendment; it would, indeed, be a marvellous Act if it did not, seeing that twenty years' operation of Sir JOHN ROBERTSON'S legislation had made a Chinese puzzle of the whole face of the country, and made it almost impossible for any reformatory legislation to avoid all the pitfalls and traps which the old system had placed in the way. But the Act, if amended, should be amended after trial, and the trial and amendment should both be in the hands of men in sympathy with it, not prejudiced against it. The administration of the law is even now in danger of being compromised by the deadweight of the difficulties left over by transactions begun under the old Acts. Hardly anything more disastrous could happen to the colony than the disturbance which would follow if this question were placed in the hands of a man who regards the passing of the new law as a sort of poaching on his preserve, and from whom we might rather expect endeavours to prove it unworkable than any really beneficial amendment. If, as Sir JOHN ROBERTSON says, "Amendments must be made in this marvellous Act," that is an almost unanswerable argument against a change of Ministry under present conditions.

The re-election of Mr. BARTON to the Speakership will have taken no one by surprise. Three years ago Mr. BARTON was elected to this high office by a small majority; but now the House is practically unanimous. Not only was no opposing candidate proposed, none was seriously thought about. Much as the two sides of the House may differ in regard to other things, in the matter of the Speakership they had but one choice. Many will hold that although the choice was a wise one, the election is not a matter for unmixed satisfaction. Mr. BARTON is a young man, and a young man of ability and vigour, and men of his stamp are greatly wanted on the floor of the House. More than once during the last few weeks Mr. BARTON has been spoken of as the possible leader of a party. We do not know that he has consented to think of himself in that capacity. But though his experience may not have fitted him for the generalship of a party, he has had experience enough to qualify him for the position of a lieutenant, and it is sometimes more difficult to find suitable men of this class for the conduct of the business of the House than it is to get suitable men to preside over it. Houses like ours are in the habit of choosing their Speakers from men of years and experience, and there is much to be said for this course. Statesmen who have no longer the strength or the taste for political warfare might have energy enough left for the duties of the Chair. The arena of politics is not very liberally supplied with young men of exceptional ability. For some time past the shadow of more than one of our political leaders has been lengthening on the plain. One generation goes, but there is a sense in which it would be difficult to say that another comes. Mr. BARTON, however, cannot be in two places at once, and if he cannot be got for some other post of importance, it is something that he has been secured for the Chair.

It will also be admitted that, other things being equal, if a man has once filled the Chair there are reasons why he should fill it again. Speakers, like other great men, may be born, not made; but here, as well as elsewhere, it is necessary that as well as natural gifts there should be careful training. No man becomes an efficient Speaker in a day. The Speaker of a House like ours must study the precedents not only of our own Parliament, but of the Parliaments of other countries, and when he has familiarised himself with them he must know how and when to apply them. A Speaker must be both a full man and a ready man. Every one of the rules of Parliament he must have at his finger's end, and as well as being able to produce it when it is wanted, it is his business to see that it is not disregarded. Nor does his business end with the interpretation of the rules of the House, he is also expected to study its humours and to uphold its dignity. He must be equal to all ordinary occasions, and be prepared for an emergency. When he interferes at all he must have the courage to go far enough, and yet the caution that will keep him from going too far. Whatever else he may fail to be he must be impartial; but impartiality alone would be a poor equipment for a Speaker. He must be firm as well as impartial, and courteous as well as firm. A contentious Speaker would soon succeed in setting the Assembly by the ears. The firmness of the Speaker of a House must above all things be tempered by discretion. It is his duty to take the initiative, and to act as well as to think for himself. The Chairman of Committees may get, and as a rule does get, the assistance of the Speaker; but the Speaker must trust to his own resources. And in the colonies, as well as in England, the position of the Speaker becomes a more difficult one every year. It has been remarked that there is as much ability in the House of Commons as there ever was, but that, although there has been no decrease of ability, there has been an increase of disorderliness. That House used to be looked upon as the first assembly of gentlemen, but there are doubts as to whether it is entitled to be any longer regarded as such. In England, the tendency to defy the authority of the Speaker is a growing one, and what is true of the mother country in this respect is true of these colonies. Those who dispute this should turn to some passages in the history of the last three years. On more than one occasion the dictum of the Speaker was disputed, and his authority resisted, and more or less successfully. Like many another monarch, though the Speaker rules, he does not govern. It is for him to lay down the law; but whether the law is to be observed or not depends upon the House. In the realm of opinion the Speaker is the master of the House; but in the realm of action he is its servant. The increase of rowdyism in legislative assemblies has not been followed by any increase of power on the part of those who rule them. It is said that before incubination and disorder are put down, the authority of the Speaker will have to be increased. Meanwhile, it behoves those who place the Speaker in the chair to see that the little authority he has is respected.

That Mr. BARTON did well in the old House is testified by the cordiality with which he has been accepted by the new one. There were, of course, times in which he did not please everybody, and times in which he disappointed his friends, who thought that there were occasions on which he was just a little too fair. The case which is still pending, and which the Privy Council is to settle in February next, is sufficient to show that everybody did not take the SPEAKER'S decisions for granted. But nothing that can happen in London will alter the fact that Mr. BARTON was one of the successes of the late Parliament. Most of the qualifications for the Speakership he may be said to possess, and some of them he possesses in a high degree. His conduct in the chair was always marked by firmness and urbanity. When his judgments were wanted, they were ready; and if their soundness was disputed, it was always by a small minority. Now and then the SPEAKER had trying times, but under no circumstances was he betrayed into courses that were calculated to destroy either the harmony or the dignity of the House. So far as the Speakership is concerned, the House has done well to re-elect Mr. BARTON. A better man it would have been very difficult to secure, and all that it is necessary to desire is that he may be as successful in the future as he has been in the past.

Quickly as our Parliaments come and go, every Parliament brings its changes. The personnel of each Parliament, though to a large extent similar, is in many respects different. Old members disappear and new ones take their places, and though we see on either side of each House many of the old familiar faces, we miss others, and hope that the new occupants of the old seats may prove worthy of the position they have been called upon to occupy. These changes are naturally more numerous in the Assembly than in the Council. The inconstancy of the popular vote will send a man into political prominence to-day and dismiss him to private life and oblivion to-morrow, or the services of a member of the Assembly may suddenly be required in the Council, and the seat in the representative chamber which may have known him for years may know him no more. It is different in the Council. There, members being appointed for life, vacancies can only occur through resignation or death, and generally the latter is the cause. Too frequently lately we have heard from the President an announcement of the death of some member of the Upper House, and yesterday Sir JOHN HAY reported the recent decease of Professor SMITH. At the same time, though not necessarily in connection with this melancholy event, he announced the appointment to seats in the Council of Sir ALEXANDER STUART and Mr. JAMES SQUIRE FARNELL. Professor SMITH was one of the ablest members of the Legislative Council before his health became so bad that he was obliged to abandon his practice of regularly attending the Council sittings and taking part in the debates. His clear and comprehensive grasp of the question under consideration was equalled only by his concise and forcible mode of expression, and the outcome of his advocacy was generally such that it secured the support of those who were doubtful, and confirmed in the course they had determined to take those who had decided to act as he recommended. The death of a man like that is a serious loss, and it is difficult to fill his place. It is to a certain extent gratifying to find two men summoned to the Council of such ability and experience as Sir ALEXANDER STUART and Mr. FARNELL; but in the one case the chief object in the appointment was rest for a wearied and almost prostrated politician, and in the other to meet a political emergency. These are scarcely the kind of appointments that are likely to add to the efficiency of the Council. In vigorous health Sir ALEXANDER STUART would be an active and influential member of the Upper House; but we know that his contemplated visit to England will remove him for a considerable period from political life, and his best days in Parliament may, unfortunately, have passed. Mr. FARNELL'S position is somewhat different. Though not young in years, he is still full of activity, and will be able to take his part in the business of the Council; but having spent a long public career in the Assembly, he will probably find it difficult to accommodate himself to the calm and uneventful proceedings of the upper branch of the Legislature. Neither of these appointments, unassailable as they may be in some respects, is exactly of the kind that may be expected to maintain the prestige of the Legislative Council; but each exemplifies the great changes that are constantly going on in Parliament, and is of considerable interest to those who study the various phases of our political life.

The water from the Nepean is now flowing into the Botany dams, and it is expected that in a few days the quantity received from the flumes will be about three millions of gallons a-day. It is understood that the Government engineers are satisfied with the manner in which the contractors have performed the work entrusted to them, and have expressed the opinion that the flumes will last until the permanent conduits are completed. When the contract was given, loud complaints were made because the Government had let it without giving other firms besides Messrs. HUDSON BROTHERS an opportunity to tender. Mr. WRIGHT justified the course he took by reasons with which the public are familiar; and if these did not satisfy the Contractors' Association, they satisfied the people generally. It is possible that if abundant rain had fallen during the winter months we should have heard a great deal during the elections concerning the alleged partiality shown to the HUDSONS; but the season has been so dry that the would-be censors had perforce to keep silence, and the drought furnishes the strongest justification for the decision and promptitude shown by the Government. We have every reason to congratulate ourselves that we are now able to utilise the waters of the Nepean, for the Botany dams are rapidly becoming exhausted. They were not in a satisfactory condition this time last year, but they have many millions of gallons less in them now than they had then. The rainfall last year was comparatively scanty; but it has been more scanty this year. The difference, indeed, is about six inches. It follows, therefore, that, if we had not the additional supply from the Nepean, or any immediate prospect of obtaining it, we should probably now be on short allowance. It is certain that the Corporation could not have tolerated our using thirty-seven millions of gallons a-week, which is the quantity we have been drawing from Botany for some time. Although we have now the benefit of the additional supply, we shall not be justified in using the water extravagantly. We have been freed from anxiety, but we should not employ our freedom in encouraging wastefulness. The Nepean water will prove a great boon to the residents in several of the western suburbs. Their condition last summer was one that excited much sympathy; but they are not likely to be threatened with a water famine this summer. It is understood that a million gallons of water will be diverted every day into the Petersham reservoir as soon as it is completed, and that machinery is now in course of erection to assist in distributing this supply in the surrounding localities.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE first session of the twelfth Parliament of New South Wales was opened yesterday. The attendance of members of the Legislative Council was tolerably good, but in the Legislative Assembly there were no fewer than 114 members present (one more than the whole number that constituted the Assembly in the last Parliament) and the House presented a most uncomfortably crowded aspect. The proceedings commenced punctually at noon, at which time there were 56 members on the Government side of the House, and 58 on the Opposition benches. It is not to be supposed, however, that the seats taken by many of the new members on their first entrance into the Chamber form an exact indication as to whether they will support or oppose the Government; in fact, it was evident that many of them, in their somewhat natural nervousness on entering upon a new sphere, so to speak, took the first seats that offered, and, as the entrance to the Chamber from the ante-room is on the Opposition side, it was only natural that the seats on that side of the House should be filled first. In a very few minutes after hon. members had taken their places the Sergeant-at-Arms announced a messenger from the Legislative Council, and straightway Black Rod was admitted, cocked hat in hand; and that official, in the name of his Excellency's commissioners, invited hon. members to attend in the Legislative Council Chamber—an invitation which was forthwith obeyed.

THE Legislative Council Chamber, although quite large enough for the ordinary attendance of its own members, has miserably small accommodation for those occasions when the "faithful Commons" are invited to attend in that Chamber, and this was painfully apparent yesterday when the members of the Legislative Assembly—or rather, so many of them as could squeeze themselves in—attended to hear read the commission necessary for the opening of Parliament. There were 56 members of the Legislative Council present, who had to take seats in the body of the apartment, as the side benches usually occupied by them were devoted to the lady visitors, of whom the attendance was but sparse. Members of the Legislative Assembly had consequently to dispose of themselves in such odd corners as they could find, and they did not appear to be very much edified by the commission that was read: indeed, very many of them appeared to be unable to hear a word that was going on, and at the close of the ceremony the scamper back to the Assembly Chamber was performed with more celerity than dignity.

WHEN the members of the Legislative Assembly had returned to their own Chamber, the three commissioners who had been appointed for that purpose—Mr. Dibbs, Sir Patrick Jennings, and Mr. Abbott—having fraternally sworn each other in, proceeded to swear in all the rest of the members present, 114 in all. The ceremony occupied more than an hour. The next business was the election of Speaker, and, as there was no person in the chair to address, Mr. G. H. Reid, who rose to make a motion, addressed his remarks to "Mr. Jones," the Clerk of the Assembly. Mr. Jones thereupon, in accordance with time-honoured custom, "pointed" at Mr. Reid with his finger, to intimate that that gentleman was in possession of the chair, or, in other words, duly authorised to address the House. Mr. Reid, in a few graceful remarks, proposed Mr. Edmund Barton as Speaker, and the motion was seconded by Mr. J. P. Garvan, the proposer and seconder respectively of Mr. Barton in the previous Parliament. In response to calls upon him, Mr. Barton rose and expressed his willingness to submit to the desire of the House. No other candidate for the Speakership being announced, the proposer and seconder escorted Mr. Barton to the chair, hon. members on both sides of the House cheering heartily the while. On arriving at the dais, Mr. Barton, now Mr. Speaker, returned thanks to the House for the honour they had done him, after which he was congratulated on his election by Mr. Dibbs on behalf of the Government side and by Sir John Robertson on behalf of the Opposition. Shortly before a quarter to 2 o'clock the House adjourned until 11 o'clock to-day, when members will meet for the purpose of proceeding to Government House to present the Speaker to his Excellency the Acting-Governor. At noon Sir Alfred Stephen will attend and formally open the session, by declaring the reason why Parliament has been called together.

THE business in the Legislative Council yesterday consisted merely of the swearing-in of members and the announcement of the decease of the Hon. Professor Smith and the appointment to seats in the House of the Hon. Sir Alexander Stuart and the Hon. James Squire Farnell. The Hon. E. Thornton, as the representative of the Government, intimated that he would make a statement with reference to his official position in the House on the following day.

ADMIRAL TRYON has decided to despatch H.M.S. Opal to the Fly River, New Guinea, to ascertain the fate of the Geographical Society's Expedition, and rescue any survivors, and she will leave Sydney on Friday next. The Opal will take with her a paddle tug steamer, and every appliance necessary for carrying out her mission successfully and without delay. According to a telegram which appears elsewhere, a relief expedition has been fitted out by the European residents of Thursday Island. It was to leave for the Fly River on Saturday last. The whole subject was discussed at a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society last evening.

THE Servians in Bulgaria, we learn by cable, are fast gaining ground, and the invaders are advancing upon Sofia, the Bulgarian capital. The Turkish Government, we are further told, has declined to assist Prince Alexander of Bulgaria, who appealed to the Porte for help in resisting the Servians. The Sultan's Government considers that Prince Alexander has virtually brought his present trouble upon himself by his violation of the Berlin Treaty.

IT will be observed from our cable intelligence, which we publish this morning, that Louis Riel, the Canadian rebel, was executed at Ottawa, in Canada, on Monday last. Louis Riel, it will be remembered, was the leader of the rebellion which broke out some months ago in the north-west provinces of Canada. The rising of the half-breed Indians, which originated at the Saskatchewan settlement threatened at one time to assume serious dimensions; and indeed, it spread over a portion of the north-west provinces of the Dominion, but the rising was eventually suppressed by the Canadian troops and mounted constabulary, under General Middleton. The leader of the rebellion was captured, and placed upon his trial at Regina, on a charge of high treason. He was found guilty, and sentenced to death, and after an ineffectual appeal to the Privy Council for a mitigation of the sentence, he was left to his fate, and, as already stated, suffered the extreme penalty of the law on Monday last.

THE Telegraph Department are in receipt of advices from Madras stating that telegraphic communication on the Turkish route has been restored.

FROM a report which is published in another column it will be seen that the Nepean water which is to be carried through the temporary system constructed by Messrs. Hudson Brothers, is not likely to reach Botany before the expiration of a week from the present date.

WE are informed that the Chairman of the Eastern Extension, Australasian, and China Telegraph Company has had an interview with the Agents-General in London, who are combining to bring pressure on the Indian Government to obtain reduced rates by July next, when the arrangements of the new convention will take effect.

THE second public session of the Roman Catholic Plenary Council of Australasia will commence at half-past 10 o'clock this morning, at St. Mary's Cathedral. There will not be any public procession. The ceremony of formally unveiling and consecrating the Vaughan memorial window will be performed by Cardinal Moran. Dr. Reynolds, of Adelaide, will sing the High Mass, and the sermon will be preached by the Rev. T. Cahill, S.J., of Melbourne. On Thursday Cardinal Moran will perform the ceremony of consecrating and laying the foundation stone of the Roman Catholic Ecclesiastic Seminary at Manly. The bishops and other church dignitaries who are now taking part in the Plenary Council, and the members of the reception committee, numbering about 200, will be present on the occasion.

THE adjourned meeting of the Executive Committee of the North Queensland Separation League was held yesterday afternoon at No. 247, George-street. The chair was occupied by Mr. James Burns, of the firm of Burns, Philp, and Co., and there were present Messrs. R. D. Adams, J. Walsh, L. F. Sachs, W. P. Walker, S. F. Walker, J. Carey, A. Doudney, A. Ackers, Pulsford, and E. H. C. Bristowe, honorary secretary. A resolution was passed confirming the formation of the Executive Council at the last meeting. Several telegrams between the Townsville and the Sydney leagues were read, reporting the progress of the movement in each place. The hon. secretary laid upon the table the Constitution and rules under which the Executive Committee in Sydney will operate. These were to some extent amended, and on the motion of Mr. W. P. Walker, seconded by Mr. Walsh, they were adopted. The following officers were appointed for the ensuing 12 months:—President, Mr. James Burns; vice-presidents, Sir Edward Strickland and Mr. L. F. Sachs; committee, Messrs. J. Walsh, J. Cooper, R. D. Adams, Cansdell, A. Faveno, A. Forsyth, J. M. Purves, M.L.A., C. J. Royle, A. H. Doudney, W. Kilgour, W. H. L. Bailey, and S. Samper, with power to add to their number. Membership was fixed at half-a-guinea per annum, and a subscription list in favour of the funds of the league was opened, and resulted in upwards of £100 being obtained.

THEIR Honors Mr. Justice Faucett, Mr. Justice Windeyer, and Mr. Justice Innes sat in Banco yesterday. The arguments in the new trial motion in Smith and others v. A. S. N. Company were concluded, and judgment was reserved. The next case was that of Chisholm and another v. Cole, involving a point of law in the interpretation of the Crown Land Acts of 1861 and 1875. The arguments in support of the motion for a new trial or to enter the verdict for the defendant were not concluded. In order to meet the pressure of business, a further extension of the term was announced by the Court. The arrangement is that next week will be devoted to hearing Equity appeals; and at the same time, if the criminal business at Darlinghurst should be concluded, a Nisi Prius Court will at the same time be held. In any case three Courts will sit the week after next for hearing causes at Nisi Prius, and such sittings will last for three weeks. His Honor the Primary Judge continued the hearing of the suit M'Millan and others v. Pile and another, which is brought to set aside the sale of an hotel at the corner of Sussex and Margaret streets, which was made by the plaintiff M'Millan to the defendant Pile. The case stands as part heard. During the hearing of the Equity suit M'Millan and others v. Pile and another his Honor the Primary Judge found occasion to animadvert very strongly on the loose manner in which the examiners of titles often perform their duties. It was admitted by the counsel for the defence that the Titles Office accepted the declaration of the vendor of the property in question that the settlement upon which the suit was based was a voluntary one, without giving notice to the plaintiffs, who were the parties beneficially interested, in order that they might come in and controvert that statement. His Honor characterised the proceeding as one of the most monstrous and extraordinary that he had ever heard of. He had had experience of how particular the examiners were over small matters, but in a grave matter such as this they afforded no protection to the persons interested. Mr. Darley, Q.C., said he was aware of another matter in which a whole family had been deprived of their property through the failure of the examiners to do their duty. Mr. Walker, who appeared for the defendant Pile, remarked that there was an assurance fund in connection with the Act; whereupon Mr. Darley asked whether the Court had ever looked into the provisions with which the fund was hedged about. His Honor alluded to the fact that many complaints had been made public in respect to the manner in which the examiners did their work, but things seemed to be carried on as loosely as ever.

AN important case in re Miller came before Mr. Justice Windeyer in Chambers yesterday. Mr. Pilcher and Mr. Browning, instructed by Mr. C. F. Richards, appeared for Miller, a cabman, and moved for a prohibition against a conviction under a Sydney Corporation by-law, compelling drivers of vehicles, &c., to go at a walking pace across the intersections of certain streets in Sydney. Mr. Darley and Mr. Nash, instructed by the City Solicitor (Mr. Merriman) appeared in support of the conviction. The question was whether cabmen are bound by that by-law, or by one of the Transit Commissioners' by-laws expressly ordering them, except when turning corners, to go at a pace not less than six miles an hour. After hearing arguments his Honor reserved judgment.

THE sittings of the Central Criminal Court were continued yesterday at Darlinghurst, before his Honor the Chief Justice. The Court was occupied the greater portion of the day with the hearing of the charge of murder against two aboriginals. The jury returned a verdict of manslaughter, and the prisoners were remanded for sentence. In the case of Edward Jackson, charged with assault with intent, the jury, who had been locked up all night, were unable to agree, and were discharged, the prisoner being remanded for trial on another charge.

THE kerosene trade of New South Wales is dealt with in an interesting way by Consul Griffin, whose official report to the United States Government appears in another column.

THE usual monthly meeting of the board of the Hospital for Sick Children was held on Monday afternoon; the president (Mr. J. S. Mitchell) in the chair. There were also present Mesdames Gilles, Fairfax, S. A. Stephen, H. Mort, Brodribb, Wilkinson, Munos, Stangar-Leathes, Belisario, Messrs. S. A. Stephen, G. Knox, and H. C. Kent. The house committee's report showed that during the past month there had been: Admitted, 8; discharged, 12; deaths, 3; and that there were now 20 remaining in hospital. The expenses for the past month had been £188 5s. 3d. Among other subscriptions was noted one from the Bowral Church of England Sunday school, of £4 0s. 9d. Gifts in kind, principally of flowers, were reported from the Waterloo Congregational Sunday school, from the Canterbury Church of England Sunday school, from the Marrickville Congregational Sunday school, Bowral Church of England Sunday school, Christ Church Sunday school (North Shore), Burwood Church of England Sunday school, and Congregational Sunday school Union. It being reported that the hospital was now quite free from scarlet fever, and that the whole of the premises had been thoroughly fumigated and disinfected, it was resolved that the hon. secretary be instructed to advertise the reopening of the hospital to the public. It was resolved that during the summer months the hour of meeting be 4.30, instead of 4 p.m., as heretofore.

A MEETING of the New South Wales Commission for the Colonial and Indian Exhibition was held yesterday afternoon in the Colonial Secretary's office, Macquarie-street. Mr. Burdett-Smith, M.L.A., occupied the chair, and there was a good attendance of members. Several reports of committees were read and received, after which the meeting adjourned.

SEVERAL cases of military equipment for the Sydney Lancers have come to hand. The equipment includes such articles as regulation bridles, Martini-Henri carbine buckets, belts and pouches; but no swords or carbines have been sent, although ordered at the same time as the other things. The order was given in January last, with instructions for prompt delivery, and the cases above referred to arrived by the last trip of the Cuzco, but owing to some unexplained cause the goods were not delivered till yesterday.

A CORRESPONDENT who has recently been visiting Melbourne describes, in terms of warm approval, the Melbourne Benevolent Asylum for the aged poor. The writer gives various details concerning the buildings, the gardens, and the various workshops, sitting-rooms, and other premises, showing that every provision is made for the accommodation and comfort of the inmates, special attention being given to the sick and infirm. The cooking and food are described as being most excellent. There were 629 inmates in the Asylum when our correspondent visited it—412 men and 217 women—some of whom had reached very old age, in one case 103 years. The inmates lived in the most friendly relations with each other and with the attendants connected with the asylum, and every circumstance showed that "Charity comes to them with a beautiful face and radiant garments—a true representation of One who said, 'Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me.'"

AN Eight-Days' Mission was begun on Sunday last in the parishes of St. John's, Darlinghurst; St. John's, Ashfield; St. Mary's, Balmain; St. Jude's, Randwick; St. Thomas', Willoughby; St. Thomas', Enfield; St. Anne's, Ryde; St. Bartholomew's, Pyrmont; All Saints', Petersham; St. Clement's, Marrickville; All Souls', Leichhardt; and St. James', Croydon. Mission preachers are engaged at every church, and during this week services are being held at various times during the day, while a special mission service is held in the evening.

AT a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society held last evening, the Hon. G. H. Cox, M.L.C., was elected a member of the general council, and Lieutenant Connor and Mr. G. L. Gipps members of the administrative council.

IN the Hall of the Young Men's Christian Association last evening Dr. James M. R. Robertson, delivered a very interesting lecture upon "Burmah and the Burmese." At the conclusion of the lecture, which was given under the presidency of Mr. Ebenezer Vickery, a vote of thanks was, on the motion of Mr. Charles Moore, seconded by Mr. W. A. Hutchinson, accorded to Dr. Robertson.

AT the Water Police Court yesterday two men named James Cronan and Thomas Andrews were charged before Mr. Yates, D.S.M., with having on the 5th November deposited offensive matter, to wit night-soil, on a public reserve at Paddington, from which smells issued, to the great damage and common nuisance of persons residing in the locality. Mr. Cooman appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Pigott appeared for the defence. Statements of a somewhat startling character respecting the sanitary condition of the borough were made by some of the witnesses whilst under examination. A report of the evidence appears in another portion of the paper. The defendants were committed for trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions.

IT having been reported to the Board of Health that typhoid fever had made its appearance on the premises of Mr. William Farmer, which are situate between Victoria-road and Albert-street, Marrickville, the authorities, after consideration, decided to remove the patient, Margaret Farmer, to the Coast Hospital, at Little Bay, yesterday. The sufferer is 26 years of age. It is stated that Farmer keeps a number of cows on his land, which lies near the Marrickville Town Hall. The number of cases of typhoid fever is stated to be increasing in the city and suburbs.

A VERY enjoyable social gathering in celebration of the second anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. James Hill, B.A., took place in the Bourke-street Congregational Church last evening. There was a numerous attendance of friends and members. The chair was taken by Rev. James Hill, M.A., who in the course of his address alluded to the pleasant relations existing between himself and the worshippers at Bourke-street, and spoke of the signs of progress which were visible in their midst. He expressed a hope that the new year upon which they as a church had just entered would be marked by an increase of God's favour and fresh blessings to all. He also urged those present to devote themselves afresh to the service of the Most High, and to the work of spreading the truths of the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ. Addresses of a congratulatory nature were subsequently delivered by the Revs. T. Johnson, C. Bright, S. Savage, D. Jackson, and James Buchan, M.A. During the evening selections of sacred music were rendered by the choir, assisted by an excellent orchestra under the leadership of Mr. W. J. B. Mote. Two of the anthems, viz., "Glory to God in the Highest," and "Daughter of Zion," were given in fine style, the singing and orchestration in both being very good. The different numbers were much appreciated by the large audience. The meeting terminated shortly before 10 o'clock.

A PUBLIC meeting in connection with the annual gathering of the Sydney City Mission was held at the Protestant Hall, Castlereagh-street, last night. There was a moderate attendance, and the meeting was presided over by Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C. Addresses were delivered by the chairman and some of the missionaries, including Messrs. Main, Hague, Freeland, and Bowmaker. The proceedings were interspersed with hymns, the singing being led by the mission band. A report of the proceedings appears in another portion of the paper.

ON Sunday last the Rev. S. Savage conducted very successful anniversary and re-opening services at the Congregational Church, Manly, on behalf of the Sunday school. A special feature in the service was a flower service in the afternoon. Sundry much-needed repairs to the church had been effected; and the general effect was very pleasing, the wild flowers, ferns, and white Christmas-bush being dexterously arranged in solid grouping all around the rostrum, also in floral wreathing and bouquets. The children's display of bouquets was very pretty. This annual floral display delights the friends who take part, and also gives pleasure to some of the inmates of the hospital to whom the flowers are sent.

IT is stated that in consequence of the rapid sale of tickets for the picnic to the Mayor of Sydney, it will be necessary to close applications for them on and after Friday next.

AT a meeting of the Licensed Victuallers' Association of New South Wales, held at the Royal Hyde Park Hotel yesterday, the president (Mr. J. B. Olliffe, M.L.A.), presided. A draft bill for the amendment of the Licensing Act now in force was submitted for consideration, and, after some slight amendments had been made, was adopted. At the request of the council, Mr. Olliffe undertook to lay the draft before the Minister for Justice, and seek his concurrence. Subsequently, during the forenoon, Mr. Olliffe had an interview with Mr. Slattery, and, though we are not in a position to state what actually occurred, we understand that Mr. Olliffe expresses himself as being perfectly satisfied with the result.

YESTERDAY afternoon a lady visited Sydney from one of the suburbs, accompanied by several of her children. After having made purchases in Market-street, she placed a large purse, containing gold, silver, &c., in an outside pocket of her silk ulster, and entered the Central markets. Upon reaching the end of the building and having passed into George-street, she found that her pocket had been picked, and that she was without a farthing wherewith to return home. The matter was at once reported at the Central Police Office.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

At a meeting of the Victorian Wine Association to-day, it was resolved that a deputation should wait on the Premier and ask him to promote the co-operation of the Governments of the other colonies in an endeavour to obtain the introduction of Australian wines into the British markets, up to 30 per cent. alcoholic strength, at a duty of one shilling per gallon. The Tasmanian reciprocity treaty was referred to in terms of approval.

On Saturday morning last a deputation from the directors of the Victoria Squatting Company, which owns stations in the Kimberley district, Western Australia, waited upon Sir F. N. Broome at Government House, and asked him to secure the remission of rents for their stations, and the suspension of the stock regulations. It was pointed out that they had already paid £10,000 in rents, besides having undertaken the exploration of the country. The cost of transit and the preliminary difficulties in stocking were very great. Sir F. N. Broome said he was convinced that Western Australia could only be properly settled by men of capital in the other colonies and England. He could hold out no hope of the remission of rent, but would try to secure the relaxation of the stocking clauses.

The breadstuffs market was quiet to-day. There was a moderate inquiry for flour, and several parcels were cleared at from £7 17s. 6d. to £8, a portion being for export. Wheat had not much attention; at auction 3s. 11d. was obtained, and privately 3s. 11½d. In feeding grains there was but little doing. Oats sold up to 3s., and maize was moving off quietly at 3s. 9d. There was a good demand for sugars, and a parcel of 2793 bags and pockets of Queensland was cleared at from £18 to £25 for whites. A line of 5000 packages of Queensland, and 1000 bags of Mauritius brewing crystals, was cleared privately at full rates. Small shipment of Indian teas quitted at an advance of 1d. per lb., and medium Foochows were placed at full prices.

Arrived: Burrumbeet (s.), from Sydney; Flinders (s.), and Mercury (s.), from Launceston; Gunga (s.), from Sydney; R.M.S. Iberia, from London, via Adelaide; Aidgowan, from Calcutta. Sailed: Australian, for the River Leven; Hauroto (s.), for New Zealand; Wendouree (s.), and Cheviot (s.), for Sydney; Balmain, for Circular Head; Loch Garry, for London.

The Sydney rifle team to compete in the intercolonial contest arrived here this morning. They were met at the railway station by Major Blanin (hon. secretary to the V. R. The members of the team had practice during the afternoon at the ranges. The Tasmanian team will arrive on Friday.

Flour was quiet; ordinary brands at from £7 15s. to £8; leading brands, £8 10s.; patent roller flour, £9 to £9 5s. THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY'S EXPEDITION.

RELIEF PARTIES TO BE SENT.

The preparations for the despatch of a properly-authorised and fully-equipped expedition to the Fly River, New Guinea, to ascertain the truth or otherwise of the telegrams which have been received concerning the Geographical Society's Expedition, are being rapidly proceeded with. Admiral Tryon, who is taking a very active interest in the matter, and is desirous of doing everything in his power to rescue any of the Bonito party who may be in danger, has decided to send H.M.S. Opal to the scene of the reported massacre, and it is expected that she will leave Sydney for New Guinea on Friday. From the moment the information which apparently confirmed the previous rumour of the murders was received the Admiral has had the preparations necessary for making the Opal ready for sea proceeding night and day, and by this means work which under ordinary circumstances would occupy a fortnight, will be completed within the next two or three days. The Opal will take with her a paddle tug steamer, which is to be supplied by the Government from one of the rivers on the coast, and suitable appliances for doing what is necessary on arrival at the Fly River, and when the Fly River has been reached no effort will be spared to carry out the object of the relief expedition with rapidity and completeness. Though there may appear to be a little delay here, it is necessary that nothing essential to success should be overlooked, and the two or three days that will pass before the relief expedition will leave Sydney will be more than compensated for by the completeness of the equipment and rapidity of action when the Opal has arrived at New Guinea.

In the meantime, as will be seen from a telegram published below, the inhabitants of Thursday Island have taken action. A meeting was held last Wednesday, at which it was decided to send a well-equipped vessel, with 30 men, to the Fly River for the purpose of ascertaining the fate of the expedition. The relief expedition was to have started on Saturday last, and was expected to reach the scene of the reported massacre in about a week.

The monthly general meeting of the Geographical Society of New South Wales was held last night at the Royal Society's room, Elizabeth-street, the chair being occupied by the Hon. G. H. Cox, M.L.C. The principal business of the meeting was the discussion of the fate of the New Guinea Expedition, and the subject was debated for upwards of an hour. Ultimately, resolutions of thanks were passed to Admiral Tryon, and the Premiers of Queensland, Victoria, and New South Wales, for lending aid, and to the Hon. John Douglas and the inhabitants of Thursday Island for their noble work in sending a relief party to the succour of the New Guinea exploring expedition.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

NORMANTON, TUESDAY.

At a public meeting held at Thursday Island on Wednesday, November 11, the Hon. John Douglas presiding, it was resolved to fit out and despatch an expedition to ascertain the fate of the Geographical Society Exploring Party in New Guinea, and afford succour to the survivors, if any.

Much enthusiasm prevailed, and £250 was subscribed in the room in 10 minutes, and a committee, consisting of Captains Boore, Houghton Brown, and Messrs. Clark and Steward, was appointed to make the necessary preparations.

The schooner Wild Duck, has been chartered, armed, and provisioned for two months. She has been fitted with barricades to protect the crew from spears and arrows, and carries 15 tons of coal for use should the Bonito be discovered.

The party will number about 30, and be under the leadership of either Mr. F. L. Jardine or Captain Boore. Volunteers were coming forward, and the expedition was to sail on Saturday, 14th instant, and should reach the scene of the reported massacre within a week.

The Rev. Mr. M'Farlane has given valuable information and assistance, and the services of the pilot who accompanied D'Albertis 500 miles up the Fly River have been secured. A pearl-shelling boat will accompany the vessel to Sumait to obtain and return with the latest news.

Offers of boats and crews are numerous, and the residents are entering into the matter heart and soul.

BRISBANE, TUESDAY.

This morning the Colonial Secretary received the following telegram from the Hon. John Douglas, dated Thursday Island, November 13:—"At a meeting held here last night the sum of £250 was subscribed towards the formation of a Fly River relief party. A number of men have volunteered to join the relief expedition, and the Wild Duck, a 40-ton ketch, has been chartered. Steam launches will be required to effect a thorough search, as nothing effectual, I think, can be done without them."

In connection with the application from Admiral Tryon for a steam launch to be placed at his disposal in order to inquire into the alleged massacre, the Government are placed in rather a difficulty, as there is no Government steamer at present available, nor even a sailing vessel. It is understood that in order to encounter the north-west monsoon, the steamer must be of considerable size, and in all probability the steam launches will be required to thoroughly search the Fly River. The Government are, however, considering what steps they will take in the matter.

THE UNEMPLOYED AGITATION IN ADELAIDE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ADELAIDE, TUESDAY.

The adjourned meeting of the unemployed, held this morning, was attended by upwards of 200 men, mostly of the labouring classes. It was resolved that the mayor be asked to convene a public meeting in the Town Hall to consider the matter. Messrs. Furner and Bews, the members for Wallaroo, brought under the notice of the Commissioner of Works this morning the fact that 150 men are in want of work in that district. A lively scene occurred outside the Parliament Houses just before the sitting began, when nearly 500 men assembled there, it being evident that it was their determination to show the members that they want work. Messrs. Kingston and Burgoyne addressed the men, who shortly afterwards dispersed, it being understood that the Commissioner of Works would meet a deputation from the unemployed in the morning.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

In the Legislative Council this afternoon the Licensing Bill was further considered in committee. Mr. Beaver's new clause, prohibiting bars in connection with theatres, was rejected by 17 votes to 8. Mr. Jenner, for Mr. Bromel, moved the insertion of a new clause, providing that publicans may obtain the transfer of licenses from one house to another in the same district. The Government opposed this clause, but it was carried by 18 votes to 8. The committee decided to allow married women to hold licenses, but that no femme sole under 30, other than a widow, should obtain a license; such females, however, who held licenses at the time of the passing of the new Act to be allowed to retain them. The bill was again reported. A bill to consolidate the law relating to Justices of Peace and to extend their jurisdiction was read a second time, and committed. Four clauses out of 164 were agreed to, and progress was reported. Lieut.-Colonel Sargood announced that he would move the second reading of the Federal Council Bill next Tuesday, and the House adjourned till to-morrow.

In the Legislative Assembly, Mr. Bell gave notice that he would ask the Minister of Mines if the Government, in view of the depressed state of mining, will send a commission to California and Europe to investigate the methods for extracting gold in use in those countries. The debate was resumed on the Tasmanian treaty. Mr. Mirams continued his speech and spoke two hours. He was totally opposed to the treaty. Mr. Langridge replied, and declared that it could not be said that the treaty was at all in favour of Tasmania. In Tasmania many of the people thought that it was all in favour of Victoria. Mr. Harper moved the adjournment of the debate.

QUEENSLAND.

SETTLEMENT OF THE DEADLOCK.

BRISBANE, TUESDAY.

The report of the joint select committee of the Council and Assembly was presented to both Houses this afternoon, and was adopted after some discussion in the Council, and without discussion in the Assembly. The committee's report recommends that, for the purpose of obtaining an opinion as to the relative rights and powers of both Houses with respect to money bills, a case be prepared and joint addresses be presented to her Majesty, praying her to refer such case for opinion to the Privy Council. They also recommend that it be an understanding that while the questions so submitted remain under discussion no appropriation of money should be included in the annual Appropriation Bill for a purpose substantially the same as any purpose for which an appropriation has, during the same session, been submitted to the Legislative Council and rejected by them. Finally, the Committee recommend that on the adoption of this report by both Houses, and the adoption of the joint address to her Majesty as recommended, the Council do not further insist on amendments in the Appropriation Bill. Appended to the report are the draft of the address to her Majesty, and the draft of the case for submission to the Privy Council. The questions submitted for consideration are, whether the Constitution Act confers on the Legislative Council powers coordinate with those of the Legislative Assembly in the amendment of all bills, including money bills, and whether the claims of the Assembly, as set forth in their message to the Council on the 12th November, are well founded.

On the adoption of the report in the Legislative Assembly the House formally decided to insist on their disagreement with the Council's amendments on the Appropriation Bill, and a message to that effect was transmitted to the Council, who thereupon decided not to insist upon the amendments, and the Appropriation Bill was finally passed. Both Houses adjourned till Friday, when Parliament will be prorogued at noon.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, TUESDAY.

In the Legislative Council this afternoon Mr. Tomkinson moved that notice be given to terminate the payment of any subsidy by South Australia, towards the protection of New Guinea by an Imperial force. He argued that the colony would get no benefit from an expenditure for which there is no Constitutional authority. The Government representative will resume the debate on the question to-morrow.

In the Legislative Assembly Mr. Ward gave notice of motion that a Royal Commission be appointed to inquire into the report upon the advisability of promoting a fiscal union between South Australia and such, if any, of the Australian colonies as may be willing to join the colony in such an agreement on the basis of free interchange of the products and manufactures of each colony.

TASMANIA.

HOBART, TUESDAY.

A stonewalling scene took place in the Legislative Assembly to-night, on the occasion of the second reading of the Appropriation Bill. The Opposition profess to be afraid that the Ministers will not carry on the Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill, and some others, although the Ministers have pledged themselves to go on with the bill named to-morrow night, and only ask that the second reading of the Appropriation Bill shall be agreed to. The whole business of the session is being raked up, and also a great many personalities. The Ministers have a clear majority, and are quite content to let business go on, only the Opposition profess to believe that Parliament would be prorogued if the Appropriation Bill were passed. The stonewalling is still going on.

INSTALLATION OF THE BISHOP OF BRISBANE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BRISBANE, TUESDAY.

The installation of Dr. Webber as Bishop of Brisbane took place this morning at St. John's Church, which was crowded, the attendance consisting largely of ladies. His Excellency the Governor, Lady Musgrave, and suite, were present. A procession of the choir and clergy was formed in the diocesan council-chambers, and proceeded to the western door of the church, where they were joined by the bishops, and then passed up to the chancel. The service was commenced by rendering the Te Deum. Bishop Webber then made the usual declaration, and the mandate for his installation was read. Archdeacon Glennie then conducted the bishop to the throne, and formally installed him as bishop of the diocese. The Primate of Australia afterwards delivered an eloquent sermon from Philippians, chap. iii., verse 12. The office of the holy communion was then celebrated by the Primate, assisted by Bishops Webber and Stanton. The service, which was largely choral, and very impressive, lasted over two hours. The address adopted at a recent meeting of the Diocesan Council was presented to the Primate by the members of the council, at Government House.

PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY OF VICTORIA.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

The Presbyterian General Assembly to-day passed the usual motion in favour of Scriptural instruction being imparted in State schools, and urged upon the Presbyterians to support the candidates at the next general election who are favourable to this principle and will stand by it. Several of the speakers said that they were engaged in giving voluntary instruction in the State schools, but the work had been hampered by the prevalent disinclination of the teachers to facilitate it, as they are apparently under the impression that it is best to please the Education Department by having as little as possible to do with it. The formulated basis of federation adopted at the late conference of delegates from the Churches of Australia was agreed to, except the clauses relating to theological halls and missions to the heathen, which were postponed. St. Andrew's Church, Suva, Fiji, has been united to Victoria, and the Albury Church has been disjoined and added to New South Wales.

COUNTRY NEWS.

BEGA, TUESDAY.

The Rev. Mr. James, who has been pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here for 18 months, has just been appointed to the charge of the church at Hunter's Hill. He preached his farewell sermons here on Sunday to large congregations. Last night he delivered a lecture on the subject of, "Is there a future existence?" giving a most eloquent discourse, the building being fully occupied. At the conclusion of the lecture a presentation was made, consisting of a purse of 84 sovereigns, as an expression of kindly feeling. Mr. James left for Sydney to-day, to enter on his new duties.

BOWENFELS, TUESDAY.

The weather here is extremely dry and sultry.

CAMDEN, TUESDAY.

The Mount Hunter Creek has ceased running. Such a thing has not happened for the last 40 years. Bush fires are now raging around this district.

DENMAN, TUESDAY.

The heat experienced here during the last four days has been something intense, registering over 100 degrees in the shade. There are no signs of rain, and the country in consequence presents a dreadful appearance. The oldest inhabitants are agreed that this is the most disastrous summer they have ever experienced in the colony.

GUNNEDAH, TUESDAY.

The official declaration of the poll for aldermen was made to-day, when a protest was formally lodged, which will probably invalidate yesterday's elections. Several prominent and useful citizens were rejected, much to the surprise of the majority.

The weather here is intensely warm.

GUNDAGAI, TUESDAY.

Dr. Thomas, the Anglican Bishop of Goulburn, arrived here on Saturday afternoon. On Sunday morning he took part in the service at St. John's Church, when the ceremony of inducting the Rev. Ross Edwards into the incumbency of the parish was gone through. In the afternoon the rite of confirmation was administered to about 30 candidates. In the evening the Bishop preached an effective sermon.

During the last four days the weather has been very hot, the thermometer registering up to 95°. Many of the wheat crops in this district will be a comparative failure this season. A few look promising, but the majority of them will not be worth reaping. In many places the farmers are unable to cut down the crops for hay, and have turned their stock into the paddocks.

NEWCASTLE, TUESDAY.

A petition against assisted immigration in circulation amongst the mining townships under the auspices of the miners' lodges is being largely signed, and will also be sent to the various federated societies in the colony.

At the miners' delegate meeting to-day, the general secretary was instructed to communicate with Mr. Binney, the masters' secretary, asking him to request the representatives from the proprietors to meet the miners' executive officers, so as to make arrangements for carrying out the eight-hour principle at the commencement of the year.

A miner named Pomeroy, at Minmi colliery, was injured this afternoon by a fall of coal, and has since died.

The arrangements in connection with the temporary pumps at Maitland for supplying this district with water have been set in motion at last.

Complaints are being made of want of wharfage accommodation for unloading cargo.

A long discussion was held in the Newcastle Council last night on Mr. Frogley's contract for laying down piping for the water supply. It was finally arranged to hold a conference with Mr. Frogley on the subject.

Considerable indignation was manifested at Merewether Borough Council last night upon the Mayor stating that the plan of the Glebe estate required for the dedication of streets in the new municipality had been refused by the Church authorities. It was resolved to invite the assistance of Messrs. Creer and Melville, members for the county, to get a plan by the intervention of the Parliament, if it were necessary to proceed to such an extreme step.

The export of coal for the last week amounted to 22,962 tons.

QUEANBEYAN, TUESDAY.

A man named George Morgan was killed to-day near Felled Timber, Bungendore-road, through a dray capsizing on him.

WAGGA WAGGA, TUESDAY.

Michael Noonan was brought before the local police court to-day, charged with wilfully obstructing the railway line near Bowen on the Prince of Wales' Birthday. The proceedings lasted for four hours, a large number of witnesses having been examined. The evidence of the black tracker and others was purely circumstantial, and the accused was committed for trial to the quarter sessions to be held on the 26th instant. The prisoner, who is about 18 years of age, asked no questions, but simply said, "I am not guilty." He states that he is a native of Kilmore, Victoria.

WALGETT, TUESDAY.

The Royal Hotel was entered by burglars on Saturday night last, and several articles of apparel were stolen. The thief, having cut his hand whilst breaking the window, left traces of blood on the tills and drawers. The police are making a vigorous search.

Charles M'Garry, an ex-policeman, and Edward Cummins, a groom, were committed for trial yesterday at the local court, charged with having attempted to rob three men named Cameron, Flynn, and Kervan, who were partly intoxicated at the time. A charge of personating the police in connection with the same case was withdrawn.

BOURKE, TUESDAY.

The local land board have decided that the Diamenta Creek is not a water-course in the meaning of the Act; and in reference to the objection raised by Mr. Bloxham, land agent, on behalf of Mr. Wall's application for a homestead lease, against paying for a dam across the creek as being an illegal improvement, the board decided that the dam must be paid for as an improvement.

WEST MAITLAND, TUESDAY.

Yesterday the local land board held its first sitting in the offices of the department at East Maitland. The board consisted of Messrs. Jos. Vernon (chairman), J. N. Brooks, P.M., and John Mitchell, J.P. Twelve cases were dealt with, but on account of regulation 33, relating to marking the land, not being complied with in nine cases, they were referred to the District Surveyor for survey and report. The chairman stated that in cases where the provisions of section 25 of the Act, and regulation 32, were not complied with, the board intended to disallow the applications.

TUMBULGUM, TUESDAY.

A large and influential meeting of the residents of the Tweed River was held at the Junction Hall on Monday evening, for the purpose of petitioning the Minister for Works to take immediate and effective measures to improve the navigation of the river, which at present is in a very bad state and scarcely navigable. The meeting decided that the deep-water site surveyed by the Government for a wharf at Tumbulgum was the proper one.

TUMBERUMBA, TUESDAY.

The first lot of this season's wool from the Upper Murray district, consisting of several waggon loads, passed through the town this morning, from Tooma station.

The weather is hot and dry.

It is reported that the surveyors will commence work here on the permanent survey of the railway line to Wagga Wagga this week.

YOUNG, TUESDAY.

The business at Young railway station for the month of October was as under:—Coaching, £512 6s. 10d.; goods, £4982 0s. 2d. The number of bales of wool despatched during the month was 5250, and for the season 9288.

Mr. W. J. Watson, the junior member for Young, left by train to-night to attend his Parliamentary duties. He is now completely recovered from the effects of the slight accident he met on Saturday.

The weather here is very hot, and it is feared that the forthcoming harvest will be very short. Many of the farmers are cutting their crops for hay. Nothing can now save the early sown crops.

Mr. Molloy, of Jemalong, on two consecutive days, made a very large catch of fish in the Lachlan River. On the first day Mr. Molloy caught 47 fish, among which was one which weighed 53lb., and the following day he got 34 more.

The Brewarrina Express thus compliments the Land Office:—"No less than 52 homestead leases dealt with by the local board are now in the hands of the surveyors in this and the Bourke district, whilst not a single case forwarded from the board to the Minister from previous courts remains unattended to. Such promptness, unusual in official circles, promises well."

The Forbes Times is in receipt of a letter from a gentleman on the Bogan, telling us of an extraordinary clip of wool from 1200 hoggets, the property of Messrs. Martell Brothers, recently shorn at Dandaloo. They were bred by Mr. S. Phillips, of Wallenbillen, and the average weight of the fleeces cut from them was 10lb. Mr. Jago Smith, of Dorowie also informs us that his 10,490 sheep, just shorn, cut 77,160lb. of wool, being at the rate of rather more than 7lb. 5ozs. per sheep.

On Monday evening last (says the Milton Times) considerable consternation was felt in Milton, when it was known that old Mr. Goodsell, of Woodburn, had been killed by a fall from his horse. The deceased was 81 years of age, hale and hearty. The old man, though over 80 years of age, was a splendid horseman, and was regular in his visits to Milton, always riding on horseback from his home and back, a distance of about 22 miles, and it is not many months since he broke in a young horse for his own use. Deceased had reared a large family, all of whom are married and settled.

Six hundred bullocks (says the Maitland Mercury) were being brought to Pallamallawa station last week from the M'Intyre. Upon reaching Carroll within about eight miles from home, 160 head died within an hour, supposed to be through eating some virulent poisonous weed. We learn that about May and June last several cattle died near Gunnedah, under similar circumstances. Some of the supposed poisonous weed was sent to Sydney and analysed, when it was ascertained to contain the most deadly poison.

The [illegible] runs, recently divided, were (says the Glen Innes Examiner) open to selection on Thursday. There were a number of applicants for land. It is not a little strange that dull times, dry seasons, or other disadvantages, have no deterrent effect on the sale of land. If the land is available, and gives promise of a rise in value in the future, people will find ways and means to buy it. In some instances—in very many, indeed—the purchasers have no actual need of the land. On Thursday there were more applicants than there was land, and many had to go without.

The Southern Cross relates that a strange accident, by which a railway labourer, named Joseph Clark, lost his life, occurred on Tuesday evening last on the South-western line, about 33 miles from Junee. Clarke and two other men were riding on a trolly at the spot indicated. They had finished the day's work, and were journeying to their camp, when they noticed the smoke of the engine attached to the mail train. They were endeavouring to get through a cutting, when one of the men got his propelling stick jammed in the wheel. This caused Clarke to lose his balance, and he fell in front of the trolly, the wheels of which passed over his neck. He was picked up in an insensible state and conveyed to the Wagga hospital, where he expired on Thursday evening.

On Sunday (says a recent issue of the Mackay Standard) one of these kanaka fights which are by no means uncommon in this district took place at Pleystowe plantation. Shortly after dinner the attention of Mr. Steedman, the manager, was called to a fight which was raging in the vicinity of the mill-yard. On proceeding in the direction of the affray it was found that a general free fight was proceeding among the Pleystowe kanakas, they being armed with bows and arrows, spears, and, in a few instances, tomahawks. After considerable difficulty order was restored and an examination made of the sufferers by the row. One boy was found quite dead, the back of his skull having been smashed in by a blow from the hammer head of one of the tomahawks. Another was dangerously wounded with a spear, which had penetrated the body in the near neighbourhood of the heart; a third had received a wound which had severed the Achilles tendon; and others to the number of six or seven had received cuts and wounds of varying severity. The immediate reason of the fighting cannot be ascertained, but that the common practice of supplying kanakas with drink was in a great measure the cause of the disturbance there is every reason to believe.

The weather is very hot and dry.

BANQUET TO MR. W. SAWERS, M.L.A., AT BREWARRINA.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BREWARRINA, TUESDAY.

The banquet which was given here last night to Mr. W. Somers, senior member for the Bourke electorate, was a great success. The guest was met by a large party a few miles out of town and escorted in, when a formal reception was accorded him. The banquet followed in the evening in the School of Arts; Mr. W. Dickson, of Yarrowin, chairman, and about 50 gentlemen were present. In his response to the toast of "The Guest of the Evening," Mr. Sawers briefly reviewed the opinions expressed by him at election time, dealing chiefly with the compensation improvements, and the abolition of the present arbitrary increase of rental. Whilst he was anxious to see both water conservation and irrigation carried out, he did not consider that the country was ripe for any extensive scheme; but he blamed the authorities for not experimenting practically. He trusted that the day was not far distant when local government boards would be sitting throughout the country. He concluded by stating that he would endeavour to make his return to the Legislative Assembly conducive to the honour of the country, the dignity of Parliament, and the welfare of his constituents. Mr. Sawers, who was received with the utmost warmth, was repeatedly applauded during his speech.

A CHAMBER of COMMERCE for NEWCASTLE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEWCASTLE, TUESDAY.

This afternoon a meeting of citizens representing the shipping and mercantile interests was convened by circular, at the Great Northern Hotel, for the purpose of forming a Chamber of Commerce. Mr. R. B. Wallace, J.P., acted as chairman, and there were 28 gentlemen present.

The chairman explained that it had been considered by a great many persons desirable to form an association of that kind, and he enlarged at some length upon the advantages of such a chamber to Newcastle, especially as similar institutions had already been established in most of the large cities in Australia. He felt that had the mercantile interests been united in a similar body here, they would have been able to deal with questions such as postal and telegraphic reform and the labour complications, in a better manner than before. He dwelt at great length on kindred subjects in which a Chamber of Commerce would be of immense value.

Mr. H. J. Cordon (A. J. S. Bank) moved,—"That in the opinion of this meeting an association should be formed, called the Newcastle Chamber of Commerce."

Mr. Alex. Brown, J.P., seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. J. Dawson and Mr. J. Murrell were appointed hon. secretaries pro tem., and a large committee was appointed for the purpose of framing rules, &c. The meeting then adjourned for a fortnight to receive the committee's report. A considerable amount of enthusiasm was manifested in the proceedings.

FLOWER SHOW AT HUNTER'S HILL.

The Hunter's Hill and Gladesville Horticultural Society held their monthly show in the Council Chambers, Hunter's Hill, on Monday evening last. Owing to the continued dry weather there were very few cut flowers; but the exhibitors, who managed to stage what were on view, deserved every credit for their pains. Miss Ettie Manning showed a very tastefully-arranged tray of bouquets, and Misses Daisy and Ida Weeks some pretty buttonhole bouquets. Mr. Hughes had a very novel exhibit in the shape of a drawing-room ornament, consisting of a stone water-jar completely covered with a growing mass of maiden-hair fern, very cleverly put on, the jar being supported on a very pretty tripod. Mr. D'Arcier showed verbenas and carnations. Mr. Omen, who was represented by his gardener (Mr. T. Purcell), had a good show of cut flowers and plants, taking first prizes for verbenas, carnations, gladioli, and geraniums. Dr. Sinclair, of Gladesville Hospital, secured prizes for pot plants and gloxinias, the gardener, Mr. Durrant, being deserving of some praise for his carefully grown exhibits. Mr. C. J. Manning had some very beautiful adiantums, a collection of cut flowers, some very fine pentstemons, which secured the prizes, and a very nice collection of potatoes was also awarded a prize. The fact that Mr. Manning has taken the prizes for this very valuable vegetable every time for some years says much for the skill of his gardener, Mr. J. M'Rae. Mr. Weeks staged a table of pot plants that were very well grown for an amateur.

ICE CREAM VENDORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The public mind has lately been much exercised by the recent proceedings in the Redfern Police Court, caused by the cruel conduct of the Salvation Army in continuing their discordant blurtings after being requested to desist, much to the worrying and annoyance of two invalid ladies, who were compelled to listen to them. I would now draw the attention of a long-suffering public to the annoyance caused by the peripatetic vendors of ice cream.

From an early hour till late at night the districts of Chippendale, Ultimo, Darlington, Redfern, Waterloo, and other suburbs are visited by a constant stream of purveyors of these "delicacies," and you can readily imagine the annoyance caused to invalids by the persistent tootings of the loud-voiced owners of the brazen trumpets which accompany them, who, with stentorian lungs, announce themselves as being the only manufacturers of the true, original, reliable, genuine ice cream. The late Sir Peter Laurie, Lord Mayor of London, suppressed the bell-ringing nuisance of muffin and crumpet sellers, and also brass bands, by stringent police regulations; and in view of this increasing evil, I think that something similar will shortly be required in this growing population. The late Charles Dickens, in one of his delightful sketches, said that poverty and oysters appeared to go together; and it would appear that in the humblest of neighbourhoods these itinerant sellers of something savoury meet with a large and increasing trade. Yours, &c.,

November 16. ROB.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

THE TURF.

The approaching meeting of the Murrumbidgee Turf Club on next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday is not creating much interest, and the few wagers that were booked yesterday in Sydney are hardly worth recording. No doubt backers are somewhat cautious after their experience of non-starters during the season, and they will defer speculating until the horses for the Wagga Cup are saddled up. What little betting there is is almost confined to the Cup race, there being only a few bold enough to attempt the task of picking the double event in the Cup and Handicap. For the Cup Minerva and Despot are quoted at 3 to 1 each, the latter being slightly the better favourite. Coriolanus has found a few supporters at 5 to 1, which price can easily be obtained about any of the others.

THE VICTORIAN TURF.

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

While the hurdle-racers Dundreary and Castleton were being schooled over the fences at Flemington to-day, both of them fell. Castleton was killed, and his rider, H. Morris, was greatly shaken.

At the betting clubs this evening, there is a fair amount of speculation over the Wagga Wagga Gold Cup, Despot coming in for most attention. He replaced Minerva for favouritism. The grey was firm this evening at 3 to 1, taken and wanted, while the mare receded to 4 to 1 offered. The next in estimation was the Queensland representative, Petronel, at 5 to 1, taken. A commission was executed in favour of New York (the winner of the Narandera Turf Club's handicap on Thursday last), to win about £1000, the closing price being 6 to 1, offered. Coriolanus came in for some attention at 100 to 12, whilst 10 to 1 was on offer against anything else engaged.

NEWCASTLE JOCKEY CLUB.

NEWCASTLE, TUESDAY.

At the meeting of the Newcastle Jockey Club held in the Ship Inn, Mr. A. Watt being in the chair, a letter was received from Mr. C. H. Hannell, the judge and handicapper, tendering his resignation after more than 20 years of service. The letter was received with great regret, and a hearty vote of thanks for his past services was recorded. The election of officers for next year resulted as follows:—President, Mr. C. H. Hannell; vice-president, Mr. W. A. Sparke; treasurer, Mr. J. Wood; committee, Messrs. N. Johns, E. Chippendall, J. M. Sweet, H. Alderton, M. Moroney, G. Gatton, J. Grisdale, R. Harvey, C. Parker, Percy Hodgkinson, and A. A. Farthing. Efforts will be made to induce Mr. Hannell to reconsider his decision.

CRICKET.

The St. Leonards and Nomad clubs met at St. Leonards on Saturday last, when the game resulted in a win for the former, but it would have ended in a one-innings victory for the St. Leonards had the Nomad team stayed to complete their second innings, the bowling of Connelly and Gilfillan proving too good for them, the former getting eight wickets for 18 and the latter six for 26 runs. For the winners Russell played well for his 25. Thornwaite, for the losers, obtained his 11 runs very freely. St. Leonards obtained 104 in their innings, and the Nomads 36 in the first and 8 for the loss of three wickets in the second.

A match is to be played to-day on the Manly cricket ground between an eleven from the Department of Public Instruction and a team from the Department of Audit. As there are some excellent cricketers on each side, a good display of cricket may be anticipated.

The first elevens of the Queen's School and Royston College met at Rushcutter Bay last Wednesday to contest the supremacy. The Royston College boys were the first to take the wickets, and succeeded in making only 46 runs, Williamson and Weymott each contributing 15. The Queen's occupied the wickets for the rest of the afternoon, and at the fall of the last wicket had compiled 127—Beegling 46, Ross 23, and Thompson 13, playing well for their runs. The game thus ended in a victory for the Queen's School by 81 runs.

Our Gundagai correspondent telegraphs that the cricket match for the Engelen Cup between the Gundagai and Coolac clubs, commenced on the 9th instant, was concluded on Saturday, and resulted in a win for Gundagai by eight wickets.

ATHLETICS.

The annual Highland Gathering sports to be held on the Association Cricket Ground, on New Year's Day, promises to be a most attractive affair. The committee recently met to consider the prizes, and they decided to give £345 for competition in the various items on the programme, which is of a novel and interesting character. There will be the usual flat races, walking matches, pole vaulting, Highland dancing and piping, wrestling matches, and other athletic contests. Given fine weather, the committee are confident of making the affair the most successful of the kind yet held in the colony.

The prizes won at the Double Bay regatta will be presented by the Hon. W. J. Trickett, M.L.A., at Doyle's Hotel, King-street, on Friday evening next, at 8 o'clock.

FIRE AT QUEANBEYAN.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

QUEANBEYAN, TUESDAY.

About 3 o'clock this afternoon a fire broke out in the premises occupied by Mr. Jennings, in Monaro-street. The building, which was constructed of wood, was soon ablaze, and the flames quickly spread to Mr. Brock's saddler's shop adjoining. A large concourse of the townspeople at once assembled, and, aided by the local police, they set to work to rescue such property as could be promptly removed, and also to prevent the flames from extending further. The water had to be conveyed to the fire from the river, and every available vehicle was pressed into the service. Owing to the well directed efforts of the citizens the conflagration was confined to the premises aforementioned, despite a strong wind that prevailed at the time, blowing in the line of a large block of buildings, and property representing many thousands of pounds was saved from destruction. Senior-Sergeant Cornett, with the men under his control, and Messrs. Nugent Bros., C. J. Jones, and others, deserve special praise for their prompt and plucky actions during the fire. Steps are now being taken towards organising a local fire brigade.

THE STRANDED SCHOONER GOLDEN ISLE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

CLARENCE HEADS, TUESDAY.

The schooner Golden Isle is still aground here. Two punts have been obtained from the Colonial Sugar Company with the tug boat Uuka, which arrived early this morning for the purpose of lightening the vessel, but after working for some time, a heavy roll coming in compelled the removal of the punt, which had then 30 tons on board. The pilot and his crew, with those on the schooner, went to work on the top of the tide to drag her by means of a cable towards the channel, for which purpose he had laid the schooner's anchor in deep water. The tides will improve every day, and it is confidently expected that the vessel will soon be got off. The condition of the hull is quite sound. The weather on Saturday and Sunday was very favourable, and had the punts been then available the whole discharge of the cargo might have been accomplished. The vessel has worked a bed in the sand, and a bank has been formed on the inside, on which there is not more than 4 feet 6 inches of water at high tide.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

GUNDAGAI, Tuesday.

At the Harford Company's machine, Kimo Reef, near Gundagai, the following lots of stone have been put through:—George Cellouridge, 10½ tons for 19oz. 17dwt.; Field and Mitchell, 8¼ tons for 11oz. 15dwt.; and Thomas Grubb, 14 tons for 19oz. 2dwt. Jas. M. D. Williams is getting out some nice ore from the Hidden Treasure Mine, Tarrabandra.

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

Prince of Wales and Old Poverty Company, No Liability, Tarnagulla, November 14.—During the past week the west drive has been extended 12 feet; total from chamber 23 feet. We passed through a flat leader which was quite dry. The east drive has been in a hard bar of sandstone, but we are now through it. This drive is now in 14 feet, having been driven 6 feet for the week.

Duke Company, Limited, November 14.—No. 3 east extended a further distance of 4 feet, when wash dipped away under foot. Have started reef drive, which is 8 feet deeper: will be in wash in about nine days. Horse drive extended 35 feet for week. Yield for week, 59oz. 16dwt.; No. 1 tribute, 11oz. 10dwt.; No. 2 tribute, 29oz. 11dwt.

Duke Consols, Limited, November 14.—Drive going south extended 14 feet four days; ground is still keeping very hard. This drive has been stopped for the present, as I have opened a drive to go west from same; the other faces going on as usual. Yield for week: No. 1 tribute, 22oz. 13dwt.; No. 3, 50oz. 1 dwt.; No. 4, 6oz. 1dwt.

Last Chance Tribute Company, Ballarat East, November 14.—Bottom Level: Main drive north extended 9 feet for the week; no change in country. All stoping going on as usual. Stone making larger going west, and showing gold in faces. Will clean up battery end of this week.

North Woah Haup, Ballarat East, November 14.—Jewell and party crushed 86 loads for 11oz. 6dwt.; Thomas and party crushed 180 loads, yield 38oz. 13dwt. 12grs. Endey and party crushed 86 loads, yield 21oz. 5dwt. Yield for week, 71oz. 3dwt. 12grs.

Kelly's Freehold Gold-mining Company, No Liability, 16th November.—Since my last report of the 7th instant, I have kept the main drive continuously going, and have driven for the week 67 feet, making the total distance from the chamber 90 feet. The reef is soft and easily worked, with very little water near the face; principal water at entrance to drive, where I found a little quartz. I have put up two bores of 7 feet each; No. 1, 62 feet from chamber; and No. 2, 79 feet from chamber, but neither broke through the reef. I expect to reach deep ground about end of the week, but will bore up every 10 or 15 feet in case I should pass under the wash.

The Silver Hill Mining Company, No Liability, 16th November.—Have driven a further distance of 13 feet for the week, making a total distance of 23 feet. We are now driving through soft sandstone, carrying a great quantity of water.

The Silver King Mining Company, Limited.—The manager reports the extension of the drive south from the winze a further distance of 4 feet, and that the lode is just the same as reported last week. The cross-cut has been extended west from the south drive 19 feet, making a total distance of 60 feet from south drive. The lode looks well, and there is a large quantity of ore in this part of the mine. This cross-cut was holed through on Saturday to a surface shaft. The cross-cut will be continued for about 67 feet more, to where the tram-road in front of the shed will be reached. The large reservoir will be completed about the 23rd instant. All the wooden American tanks are more than half filled with water, and are holding well. The furnaces are now being dried, and immediately the elevator is completed ore will be hoisted to the top floor, and smelting will then begin at once.

Lumpy Lead Gold-Mining Company, Limited, November 14.—I have pushed the lower level ahead a further distance of 7 feet, making total from shaft 97 feet, and the upper level 15 feet, making distance driven through wash 25 feet. The dirt averages 3 feet in thickness. A sample of the gold is sent herewith. I expected to meet with better working ground in the lower level, but no change has occurred. The rock in the upper level does not dip any now, so I am making preparations for putting up the rise from lower level. I would advise that a move be at once made to secure a large plant, as the output of dirt in a short time must necessarily be a very large one.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

The water which is to be brought to Sydney from the Nepean by means of the auxiliary system constructed by Messrs. Hudson Brothers will not reach the city as early as was expected. It arrived at the Prospect reservoir at 6 p.m. on Saturday, but it was then in a very turbid condition, in consequence of its having to cleanse the channel on its way. The first flush was turned into a watercourse by means of a sluice designed for the purpose, and shortly after, while the water was still discoloured, it was let into the 30-inch pipes that traverse the site of the reservoir, and was delivered into the permanent aqueduct, along which it runs a distance of about seven miles to Pott's Hill, where it enters the flumes on the trestling erected by Messrs. Hudson Brothers. The water reached the flumes about 5 p.m. on Sunday. The stream has not yet attained its full volume on account of absorption by the masonry and soil forming the channel, but it is thought that as soon as the stream of 3½ million gallons in 24 hours has reached its maximum flow the slight clayey discoloration that now characterises it will disappear. There is little doubt but that several weak places will be found in such a long line of flumes and mains, but every exertion will be made to speedily effect repairs. The water, however, is not likely to flow into Botany for several days, especially as it will be incumbent on the Corporation officers to see that it is not admitted into the dams there until it is perfectly free from discolouration and impurity. During last week the stream, as it passed the Camden-road, near Kenny Hill, was quite limpid, but it had many miles to travel before reaching Prospect, and when there it had become sluggish and dirty. The interstices of the masonry, the dryness of the soil, of which portion of the channel is composed, and other causes of loss, reduced the stream first let in very considerably, and this being the season during which gum-leaves fall, special care was required to prevent them choking the gratings en route. The City Engineer was present at the arrival of the water at the upper side of the Prospect reservoir, as were also Professor Warren and Professor Gurney, and several members of engineering classes who were curious to see the condition of the water and its passage through the various canals. There are several sluices on the line of pipes, at any of which the water can be flushed out until it is perfectly clear and fit to be mixed with the waters of Botany. It will, when clear, be permitted to flow into a separate dam, and it will be retained there until the authorities are satisfied that it is fit for potable and culinary purposes. Meantime there is sufficient water in the dams at Botany to hold out against the present rate of consumption. When the new system of supply is completed, the City Engineer will intercept about a million gallons a-day at Marrickville, for distribution amongst the residents of Marrickville, Petersham, Newtown, Stanmore, Macdonaldtown, Leichhardt, and Balmain, who it is hoped will then have the benefit of an uninterrupted supply. It is anticipated that the new water will not reach the metropolis in a fit condition for use before the expiration of a week from the present date.

MICROSCOPICAL SECTION OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

On Monday evening last the usual monthly meeting of the microscopical section of the Royal Society was held—Mr. Pedley in the chair. A very useful pattern of portable microscope was exhibited by Mr. Walker. The maker was C. Baker, London, and the price it is sold at is most moderate. Instruments of this description are found to be valuable helps for natural history or botanical excursions, as they take the eye-pieces and objectives of the ordinary microscope, and are carried in a small leather case slung over the shoulders. Dr. Morris showed beneath his microscope with Spencer's 1-10 and Powell's 1-6 objectives, some slides of bacillus and test diatoms, admirably defined with these celebrated lenses. The bacillus was taken from the centre of a small ulcerating nodule found in the large intestine of a foal that had died from a mysterious epidemic which seems to be at the present time somewhat general throughout the colony. Young foals running with their mothers pine and waste away, constant diarrhœa sets in, and if the disease proves fatal it is because the animal dies from exhaustion. On examining the intestines the doctor found in a length of eight inches only no less than 70 small circular ulcers ⅛in. in diameter, and eating through the mucous membrane. Under the microscope these bacilli appear to be of comparatively speaking large proportions, possessing from two to six nucleole, the terminal one being larger than the others. For many months past Dr. Morris has been investigating the nature of various mounting media for the purpose of finding one possessing great stability, easy of application, and having the highest angle of refraction, so that by its means the owners of the older forms of microscope objectives of low angle may render them nearly as effective as the splendid but very expensive lenses now constructed, and known as "homogeneous objectives." In a pecuniary sense the advantage is great, as an ordinary one-twelfth objective costs £14 14s., whereas a one-twelfth homogeneous, expected to arrive shortly, and by the same makers, will cost £40. Dr. Morris gave the result of his researches in a paper read before the last meeting of the Royal Society, and exhibited a slide of the high power test diatom Amphipleura Pellucida, mounted in tellurium, as the best result then attained. Since then he has excelled the tellurium with a mixture of chloride of tin and chloride of thallium, as well as when using them separately. From time to time the doctor has received from Europe and America slides from the most celebrated mounters, but in no instance do they excel Dr. Morris's preparations; moreover, the methods of their preparation are kept strictly secret, whereas the doctor's methods are published in his recent essay.

THE COLONIAL AND INDIAN EXHIBITION.

A meeting of the New South Wales Commission for the Colonial and Indian Exhibition was held at the Colonial Secretary's Office, Macquarie-street, yesterday afternoon. There were present:—Mr. R. Burdett-Smith, M.L.A. (in the chair), Professor Liversidge, Messrs. Critchett Walker, John Pope, R. G. Higgins, Richard Jones, jun., Louis Phillips, John Walsh, R. D. Adams, John Mackenzie, Charles Moore, Augustus Morris, E. Fosbery, W. H. Vivian, Harrie Wood, Russell Barton, M.L.A., W. A. Hutchinson, M.L.A., and C. S. Wilkinson, F.G.S.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read by the secretary (Mr. Alex. Cumming). They were confirmed.

The following reports of committees were read and received:—

Report from Committee I., on Fine Arts: "Your committee has the honor to report, for the information of the Commission, that it held a meeting last Friday afternoon, the 13th instant. Mr. Fairfax having resigned his position as chairman, Mr. E. L. Montefiore, by request, agreed to act, on the understanding that only one or two meetings will require to be held prior to the final despatch of the exhibits. Your committee viewed and made a selection from proffered exhibits within the section entrusted to its care. The collection of landscape photographs formed a special and interesting feature. They have been furnished by various municipal councils and private exhibitors throughout the colony. Some of the series have been exceedingly well executed, and the whole should form an attractive display in our court in London."

Report from Committee II, on Education, &c.: "At a meeting held on the 6th instant, your committee decided to recommend to the Commission that there be printed 50,000 copies of the local edition of the catalogue of New South Wales exhibits, and an equal number of copies of small pamphlet on the 'Progress and resources of New South Wales.' The latter pamphlet on the basis of those issued in connection with our representation at the Amsterdam and Calcutta international exhibitions will be set up in type as revised by public departments, and the proofs sent to these departments for further revision. Mr. Byron will be asked to collate all figures in this pamphlet with those in his more exhaustive work, so that full agreement may be assured. A small map of the colony, illustrating its resources, furnished by the Surveyor-General, was approved, and it was decided to make use of it for the illustration of the pamphlet referred to. Birds from New Guinea and other natural history specimens are now set up and on view at the Australian Museum."

Report from Committee IV., on Raw Products: "Your committee met on the 6th instant, and took into consideration the matter of wool showcases, and decided upon the adoption of case as per design herewith, which, if approved by the Commission, may be remitted to the Show Cases Committee. It is recommended for the better showing of the wool in fleece that the cases be ebonised, relieved by slight gilt beading on top. There will be some 62 exhibits of fleece wool, which, at six fleeces to each exhibit, will make a total of 372 fleeces, for which case accommodation requires to be provided; and at eight fleeces to each case this would necessitate the preparation of 47 cases. Your committee recommends that the cases be glazed here. Your committee, at the close of the meeting, visited the timber yard of Messrs. John Taylor and Co., at the foot of Margaret-street, and there saw the large collection of New South Wales timbers, which, at the instance of your committee, has been collected and prepared through the Forest Branch of the Department of Mines."

Progress report from Committee IX., on Mining and Metallurgy, &c.: "In the section on mining and metallurgy the colony is unrepresented. The Department of Mines will exhibit—Coal from all the seams worked; specimens of alluvial and reef gold from the various goldfields, including large blocks of reef-stone; silver ores, from Silverton, Sunny Corner, Boorook, and other districts; copper ores, from Cobar and other districts, and copper in ingots; tin ores, and tin in ingots; ores of iron, manganese, cobalt, bismuth, mercury, antimony, and lead; building stones; diamonds and other gems; asbestos; collections of rock and fossils, illustrative of the various formations; geological and mining maps; sections of coal measures; and photographic views of gold-mining. The mineral specimens will be exhibited partly in glass cases and partly in large blocks. Amongst the private exhibitors the Newcastle Coal Company is sending a section of the coal seam; and blocks of coal, sent by Messrs. Vickery and Sons, from the Greta Colliery; by the Osborne and Wallsend Colliery Company; by the Coalcliff Coal Company; by the Lithgow Valley Colliery Company; by H. Walker, from near Rylstone; and kerosene shale from the New South Wales Shale and Oil Company, Hartley Vale; and from the Australian Kerosene Oil and Mineral Company, Joadja; iron ore from G. Harper, Newbridge; gold specimens, from M. Isaacsohn, Nundle; J. H. Blatchford, Braidwood; A. Oppenheimer, near Rylstone. Silver ores from the Broken Hill Company; Barrier Ranges Silver-mining Company; Umberumber Silver-mine; Sunny Corner mine; Wiseman's Creek mine. Tin ores and gritstone from Tenterfield; manganese ore from the Hon. John Sutherland, Glanmire; tin stones from Professor Liversidge; plumbago from H. F. Robinson, Tenterfield; chromic iron from Messrs. Blackall and Hunt, Tamoo; fireclay and firebricks from G. Cochrane, North Shore. Mr. Robert Saunders, of Pyrmont, exhibits of building stones and photographs. Mr. J. B. R. Robertson and Thomas Brown, both of West Maitland, will also exhibit building stones. Mr. W. H. Vivian, a member of our Commission, will also exhibit in this class."

The finance report showed that the total expenditure incurred by the Commission up to date amounted to £4229. Of this amount it is estimated that over £2000 will be returned in articles of value, such as gold specimens, &c. The committee further considered the question of freights to London, and agreed to divide them as equally as possible between the P. and O. S. N. Company and the Orient S N. Company. A division of shipments was agreed to as a matter of necessary precaution. Arrangements were also made for marine insurances.

Report from Committee XI., on Show Cases: "The committee recommend for approval the suggestion of the committee on education that, for reasons advanced, Mr. Jones' contract be so modified as to include the glazing of the cases for natural history specimens, and that, subject to his terms for this extra work being approved, the Commission authorise the additional expenditure. Mr. Jones' sample case having been approved of, your committee recommends that he be authorised to proceed to completion with his contract."

The name of Mr. Vivian was added to the committee on show cases.

The proceedings terminated shortly afterwards.

THE EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT.

A meeting was held last night, at the Young Men's Christian Association Rooms, of members of the Drapers' Association and a sub-committee appointed by the Trades and Labour Council, the object being to discuss the question of the early closing of certain drapery establishments in Oxford-street. The chair was taken by Mr. W. B. Somerville, vice-president of the Drapers' Association, and Mr. Henry Rule was elected honorary secretary of the joint committees. In the course of the discussion reference was made to the establishment of Mr. Mark Foy, in which the hours of labour were asserted to be unnecessarily long. One member of the committee expressed the opinion that, as moral suasion had not had the desired influence on Mr. Foy, there should be another kind of force exerted against that gentleman's views. It was urged that the drapers of all classes should strengthen their ranks; that leaflets, expressive of the desirableness of early closing, should be widely distributed; that there should be a large agitation in favour of early closing, and that a monster meeting should also be held on the subject. Mr. Foy was to be permitted to drive his trade up to 6 o'clock each evening, and after that hour persons ought to be engaged to distribute the leaflets in the vicinity of his shop. A bold front should be shown in the matter, and it was considered ridiculous to suppose that the various labour organisations of the metropolis would be unable to force Mr. Foy to listen to reason. It was also suggested that the employees in the shop should be suddenly called out. Another speaker said that the drapers if united might easily attain their object, but he was sorry to say that they did not act together as well as they ought to. Mr. J. West reported that a deputation had waited on Mr. Foy on the subject, and that Mr. Foy had expressed his willingness that his establishment should be closed on two evenings at 6 o'clock, on two at 9 o'clock, and on Saturday at 10. This report appeared to alter the feeling of the meeting very considerably. Mr. W. T. Stanton urged that fair play should be extended to both sides. Mr. Foy's action was fairly in unison with that of other drapers in the same street, and, in some respects, it was more humane. That gentleman was not the only offender of his class. There were other drapers in Oxford-street who, on the whole did not close so early as he did, and who kept open during a holiday, when he closed his shop. It was also pointed out that a number of drapers in William-street did not recognise the desirableness of closing early and giving their employees a just measure of relief from labour. They kept open every night in the week, and deserved censure quite as much as Mr. Foy. The question of early closing was then discussed on broader grounds. Mr. Stanton moved,—"That the committee use its endeavours to have all drapery establishments closed at 6 o'clock on five days in the week, and at 10 o'clock on Saturdays; and that all drapers be recommended to join the association, if they are desirous of securing their share of benefit from it." The motion was seconded by Mr. R. F. Bosden. It was cordially supported by Mr. T. Symons, secretary of the Trades and Labour Council, and was carried. A sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. Caddy, Doust, West, Rice, Symons, and Rule was appointed to give effect to this resolution; and it was also agreed, on the motion of Mr. Rule, that a public meeting be held at the earliest possible opportunity to advocate the desirableness of people shopping early, and so allowing drapery employees to have a reasonable amount of leisure for relaxation and recreation.

NOTES EXPLANATORY OF MAP.

In the list of stations the column headed W.T. gives the state of the weather at 9 a.m., b standing for blue sky; c, detached clouds; d, drizzling rain; f, fog; g, gloomy; h, hazy; m, misty; o, frosty; o, overcast; p, passing showers; r, rain; s, snow; t, thunder; u, threatening. The next column, M'x gives the maximum temperature for previous 24 hours. M'n the corresponding minimum temperature; r'n, the rain for the previous 24 hours. The symbols used in the map are explained on the margin. At each coast station the wind symbol is placed like a vane pointing to the direction from which the wind is coming. A clear circle with it means fine weather; a circle with bar, cloudy weather; and a black spot, raining. Next to this symbol are placed figures denoting the number of miles the wind is moving per hour; next, a symbol showing the state of the sea, and, lastly, figures denoting the shade temperature at 9 a.m. The barometer curve shows the state of barometers round the coast from Perth to Cooktown:—Pt, Perth; Ay, Albany; Ea, Eucla; CB, Cape Borda; A, Adelaide; Ro, Robe; P, Portland; M, Melbourne; W P, Wilson's Promontory; Go, Gabo; E, Eden; Mo, Moruya; C O Jervis Bay; Wg, Wollongong; S, Sydney; N, Newcastle; P M, Port Macquarie; C, Clarence River; B, Brisbane; R, Rockhampton; Ct, Cooktown. Inland the state of barometer is given in figures at Albury, Deniliquin, Wentworth, Menindie, Bourke, and Alice Springs. The barometer curve enables one at a glance to trace the depressions, beginning with Western Australia, and passing along eastwards; northerly winds preceding them, and southerly following.

South Australia reports weather generally fine with scattered clouds. Dull and gloomy north of Katherine, also in places on coast and between Port Augusta and Terowie. Prevailing winds S.W. to S.E., and light smooth sea and steady barometers on coast. Rainfall: Port Darwin, 0·56.

Victoria.—Generally cloudy on coast and squally from W., with falling barometers and slight sea. Rough at Cape Otway. Fine inland, light S.W. wind at Echuca, and calm at Omeo. No rain.

COMMERCIAL.

PRODUCE MARKET.—Tuesday.

At Darling Harbour sales this morning the attendance of the trade was moderate. The supply of forage offered was small, chiefly of chaff, with limited quantities of hay and straw. The quality was scarcely so good as at yesterday's sales. The market ruled firm and buyers purchased with a fair amount of activity. Hay, straw, and chaff were unaltered in value. The wood market remains unchanged. On the wharfs a moderate supply was received from the Northern and Southern rivers. Business was quiet. Butter and Victorian chaff were dearer, but the other lines showed no material alteration in prices. Operations were chiefly confined to prime green lucerne hay, chaff, onions, and dairy produce, especially cheese and butter. The following prices were realised at Darling Harbour sales:—

Wood.—Moderate market, and remains unchanged at per ton. Billetwood, 9s 6d to 12s 6d; bundle, 11s 6d to 16s; foot, 10s 6d to 14s; bakers', 10s to 13s.

Hay.—Small supply. Market again firm. Quality scarcely so good as at yesterday's sales. All lots, especially prime, were in active request. Oaten, in bundles, 4s 6d to 5s 6d per cwt.; lucerne, in truss, 4s 9d; wheaten, in bundles, 6s 7d; oaten and wheaten, in bundles, 1s 6d to 5s 3d.

Straw.—Supplies forward this morning smaller than at yesterday's sale. Prices unchanged. Clean wheaten, in bundles, 2s 5d to 2s 6d per cwt.

Chaff.—There was only a small quantity to hand this morning. Prices unchanged. Competition was fairly active for all lots, especially prime oaten, in bags, 4s 9d to 5s 7d per cwt.

On the wharfs the following are the wholesale quotations:—

Maize.—Fair stocks. Export buyers are not operating with a great amount of freedom. Market continues quiet at 3s 6d to 3s 8d per bushel.

Oats.—No change to note under this head. Market fully supplied, principally with medium and discoloured samples which are almost neglected, at 2s. 2d. per bushel. Prime bright feed oats are in steady inquiry at 2s 5d. No inquiry for seed.

Barley.—Nothing fresh to report on the condition of this market. Nominal value of Cape seed being to 3s 3d per bushel.

Bran.—Stocks working off with a firm market, at 1s 2½d to 1s 3d per bushel.

Pollard.—Supplies sufficient for the requirements. Quiet sales at 1s per bushel.

Hay.—The arrivals from the Hunter River this morning were smaller than the two previous days, but wharfs are fairly stocked. Trade was quiet, prime green lucerne being in the most request, to £5 10s per ton; ordinary sorts, £4 10s to £5; other qualities, from £3 5s.

Chaff.—Another Victorian shipment of 1979 bags received last night. Demand improved, and prices have advanced, Victorian selling at £5 to £5 5s per ton.

Onions.—In addition to yesterday morning's arrival from Victoria another small shipment was received last night. Moving off steadily at £6 10s to £7 10s per ton. Exceptional lots to £8.

Potatoes.—No fresh arrivals, but market amply supplied by late shipments. All varieties working off with a little more freedom than of late at per ton:—Circular Head, £3 10s; small lines, £3 15s; Ballarat, £3 5s to £3 10s; New Zealand quoted to £3 10s; Melbourne garden potatoes at 6s per cwt.

Butter.—Owing to supplies forward being inadequate to the demand, prices have advanced 2d per lb. Brisk sales of Illawarra in keg at 1s 3d per lb.; roll, 1s 6d; intercolonial packed, to 1s.

Cheese.—A Southern ports shipment of 120 to hand this morning. Market poorly supplied. Colonial still in firm inquiry at 11d to 1s per lb.

Bacon.—Demand slightly improved at 8½d per lb. for hand-cured Southern; quiet sales of machine-cured to 7½d; heavy and rough, from 6d; hams, 10d to 1s 1d.

Lard.—Excessively slow of sale at 5d to 6d per lb. for finely rendered in bladders; in bulk, from 4d.

Honey.—Good and clear at 4½d to 5d per lb.; in bulk, from 4d.

FULLER'S ANNUAL CHRISTMAS CARD EXHIBITION.
STATIONERS' HALL, 385-7, George-street, Sydney.
An ancient sage said there was nothing new under the sun, but that sentiment must have been uttered long before the days of Christmas Cards, otherwise a modification would have been necessary. Endless novelty, infinite variety, superlative beauty—rich in all the artistic adornments of this progressive and scientific age—are
THIS YEAR'S CHRISTMAS CARDS.
The acme of perfection was said to have been gained last year, but this year, a new realm altogether has been entered upon.
FULLER'S EXHIBITION for 1885 will display the most recherché productions of all the world, from the homely sweetheart scenes to the most refined and elegantly pencilled touches of the artist's brush.
Fuller's Exhibition for 1885 will be far beyond all previous displays, and will afford the art-loving, as well as the social, full scope to expand, develop, strengthen, and intensify all the higher passions and sentiments of their nature.
FULLER'S EXHIBITION, 1885, contains:—
COLONIAL CARDS, Photographed, Painted, and Printed, and most exquisite collection and gorgeous display.
ENGLISH CARDS, in all the untold richness of beauty and design, for which the Old Country is celebrated.
CONTINENTAL CARDS, in all their sublime and æsthetical ornamentation, and in all the elegance and refinement of the highest etiquette.
AMERICAN CARDS, surpassingly beautiful and sweetly pretty, sustaining the famed and foremost reputation of the prosperous and thriving nation.
Homely is the characteristic of this year's cards, and the reputation for supply, for quality, for variety, and for excellence so long maintained by the advertiser, will be more than ever manifest this year.
First come, first served. Be early to make your selection for friends in the old country.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—Times, July 13, 1864.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was chlorodyne.—See Lancet, December 31, 1864.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne "is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course it would not be thus singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"—Medical Times, January 13, 1866.

A CURE IN NEW SOUTH WALES.
Mr. Jacob Ward, of Bowral, New South Wales, writes:—"My son, of middle age, had a quinsy in his throat, and for 10 days we used all the famous remedies obtainable. Still, he got worse, till there was no reasonable hope that he could live half an hour longer. My sister-in-law suggested a trial of the Oxygen. Well, sir, in a quarter of an hour I knew it had taken effect, for the pulse went down at once, and I knew he was turned for well, and so it was. After such a cure I shall never be destitute of such a remedy."

A SERIES OF HEART-STIRRING QUESTIONS affecting the HAPPINESS and WELFARE of the GREAT MAJORITY of the FAIRER PORTION of the POPULATION.

What is THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE"?

Of what Nature is THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE"?

Of what Family, Animal, Mineral, or Vegetable is THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE"?

Of what is it made, THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE"?

Where does it hail from, THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE"?

Is it a Substance, a Shadow, a Phenomenon, a Useful Thing, an Artificial Vagary, or an Ornamental Nonentity, THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE"?

THERE IS A RUMOUR on the wind and in the air that there is such a thing as THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE!"

That it is something there can be no doubt, That it is something good there cannot be a shadow of contrary opinion, That it is desirable is proved by the numerous inquiries for it by curious people, who up to the present don't know what THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE" is.

TIME is the mighty solver of mysteries, and doubtless TIME will clear up the mist which at present envelopes THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE."

PATIENCE is a great virtue. It has been described as an invaluable blessing, it soothes the irritated nerves, it stills the excited beating of the throbbing heart, it stays the too eagerly curious, and it may ere long unfold the mystery of THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE."

Meanwhile there are crumbs of comfort, which may be seized with avidity. There are gleams of hope through the dark clouds of expectation. There are signs which deceive not, and which point in some way to THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE."

Take heart of grace and watch; buoy-up the downcast mind with hope; cheer up, be merry, and gay; keep the matter well in hand; go not hither and thither; be steadfast; STEER FOR THE HAYMARKET, and, before the sun shall rise and set a few more times, ANTHONY HORDERN and SONS, PALACE EMPORIUM, HAYMARKET, will tell you what THE "PALACE JOSEPHINE" really is.

Auction Sales

MILITARY-ROAD, North Shore.—Great SALE next SATURDAY. Lithos. Richardson and Wrench.

GREAT CLEARING SALE
of the celebrated
RICH AGRICULTURAL ESTATE,
"STRATHAIRD,"
situate within 25 miles
of
GOULBURN,
and
containing an aggregate
of 5020 ACRES,
apportioned into
FIVE LOTS, OR FARMS.

IMPERATIVE SALE
to the
HIGHEST BIDDERS,
to close partnership accounts, in consequence of the immediate departure of one of the proprietors for Europe.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH (in conjunction with Messrs. FINLAY and CO., of GOULBURN), have received instructions from David P. Dickson, Esq., to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, the 20th NOVEMBER,
at 11 o'clock,
The above magnificent Agricultural Estate, in five lots, or Farms, viz.,— contains 3963 acres 1 rood and 30 perches.

This large area of agricultural land is well watered by REEDY FLAT CREEK, TARALGA CREEK, and numerous tributaries, as well as by many important and never-failing springs on different portions of the estate. The soil is of that rich chocolate description which proves volcanic origin, and cannot be surpassed for cultivation purposes. If put under English grasses for which the climate of the district is peculiarly adapted, it would make one of the richest feeding grounds to be found anywhere within the colony, in proof of which it may be mentioned that this VERY PROPERTY,
STRATHAIRD,
in its present natural state (then comprising about 5000 acres), carried last year for a period of 4 months
15,000 STUD EWES
belonging to — Wentworth, Esq., of Burrabogie, which flocks, when placed on the estate, were so poor that they could hardly travel, and when removed were in grand travelling condition, fully exemplifying the EXTRAORDINARY RICHNESS of STRATHAIRD as a PASTORAL PROPERTY.

The improvements consist of the HOMESTEAD—a cottage of 4 rooms—with garden and other necessary outbuildings.

This portion of Strathaird is fenced, subdivided into paddocks, and is sheep-proof.

LOT 2 contains an area of 386 ACRES 2 ROODS and 38 PERCHES, and is that portion of the Estate known from the rich quality of the soil and grasses as the Butcher's Station. It adjoins Mr. Boardman's property, and is watered by branches of the TERALLA CREEK, and has within its boundaries at least four permanent springs of water. This block is fenced on the southern and western boundaries.

LOT 3.—This farm lies between Jobson's and O'Byrne's property, and contains an area of 361 ACRES and 20 PERCHES, and is described as splendid red volcanic soil, and well watered by a branch of MYRTLE CREEK, and two (at least) permanent springs. It is known as forming part of the Emu paddock, and is fenced on two sides.

LOT 4 contains an area of 248 ACRES 3 ROODS and 3 PERCHES. It has a frontage to Taralga-road, and is fenced on all its sides, and a portion has been under cultivation.

LOT 5 contains an area of 60 ACRES, and is fenced on its eastern and western lines.

The above estate, reckoned generally, is about 25 miles from Goulburn; but within the next two years it is only fair to assume that by the expected extension of the railway from Goulburn, via Roslyn, to Taralga, even the outlying portions of the property will be brought within 12 miles of railway transit to the metropolis, while the principal portion of property (LOT 1) will very likely be intersected by the railway line.

An elaborate analysis, by the eminent assayer, Mr. W. A. Dixon, of the soil of this estate and estimate of its grazing capabilities can be seen at our Rooms, in Sydney, or at the Offices of MESSRS. FINLAY and CO., of Goulburn.

TO SPECULATORS
BUILDING SOCIETIES
GRANDEST INVESTMENTS IN THE COLONY,
as the property has been surveyed for subdivision, and all is marked off into farms of the most attractive kind.
Every farm pegged out, and having natural advantages of WOOD and WATER.

Dealt with by
BUILDING SOCIETIES,
on such terms as come within their scope, these farms would readily sell at long prices, while their selling value would still further be enhanced on the completion of the RAILWAY TO TARALGA.

As indicative of local value, the WESTERN PORTION of the subdivision of this Estate, when submitted last year, was sold to Mr. Boardman, viz.,
1180 ACRES 3 ROODS 30 PERCHES, at £4 5s per acre, for dairy purposes; and the SOUTHERN PORTION,
1340 ACRES,
at £5 3s; but the best of the property by far is now offered as above, in LOT ONE.

Inspection will satisfy purchasers of this fact.

STRATHAIRD deserves the attention of Flockmasters and Graziers on the following grounds:—

It would make a most desirable depot for sheep and cattle waiting market.

Its natural grasses would retain stock in grand condition whilst waiting removal.

Roughly cultivated, it could be made to carry several sheep to the acre.

Its proximity to Goulburn Station is comparatively an unimportant distance, to be presently reduced by extension of railway, and,
